DURKAN, FORMER BANKER, INDICTED ON THREE COUNTS

Ex-Vice President and Manager of City Trust Co. Charged With Violating National Banking Act.

FIVE-YEAR TERM MINIMUM PENALTY

Bank Agreed in January, 1924, to Make Good His Embezzlement of $25,000—Bond Furnished.

William P. Durkan, former vice president and manager of the City Trust Co., is under indictment in Federal Court here, it became known yesterday, as the result of his embezzlement in January, 1924, of $25,130 of his bank's funds. The discovery of his peculations caused Durkan's retirement from the institution and also as president of the Remedial Loan Co. in February, 1924.

The indictment in Federal Court charges Durkan in three counts with violating section 5209 of the national banking act by making false statements of overdrafts of the bank to the Federal Reserve Bank, of which the City Trust Co. is a member.

The first count recites that he reported to the Federal Reserve Bank on April 3, 1923, that the City Trust Co. overdrafts on that date amounted to $808.70 when, in fact, the amount was $1771.27. On June 30, the second count charges, he reported the overdrafts to be $359.94, when the actual amount was $4154.92 and on Sept. 14 of the same year, the third count charges, he reported the overdrafts as $401.98, when the true amount was $4409.56.

Five-Year Term Minimum.

The section of the banking act under which the indictment was drawn provides that any bank official or employe who falsifies a report or statement with the intent to defraud the association shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and imprisoned not less than five years nor more than 10 years.

The indictment was returned by the Federal grand jury three weeks ago and was suppressed, because it was understood that Durkan was not then residing in St. Louis. He appeared at the Federal building Tuesday, however, and gave bond of $2500.

For some unexplained reason, District Attorney Curry let the indictment remain suppressed. The indictment is pending in Judge Davis' division of the court and has not yet been set for trial.

Following the discovery of Durkan's peculations two years ago other officials of the bank reluctantly admitted the facts and stated the funds taken by the vice president had been restored by five individual directors and officers of the institution who would look to Durkan for restitution.

Drawn on Drafts.

The money taken was drawn from the bank on three drafts of the Toomsboro Clay Co. of Georgia, which mines chalk clay used in the making of paper.

Officers of the bank attempted to conceal the facts from the public and made no demand on the bonding company which was surety on Durkan's bond for restitution at the time the shortage was discovered by an employe and reported to President Jacob E. Laskey. The bonding company professed ignorance of the embezzlement.

Durkan is 47 years old, married and at the time the shortage was discovered lived with his wife and son at the Usona Hotel, 5000 Waterman avenue. He had been in the employ of the bank about 10 years and his salary was $6000 a year.

He owned 50 shares of the bank's stock, valued at $150 a share, which was pledged by him at the time he resigned to other officials of the institution as part payment of the money he had taken.

Refused to Talk.

At the time the shortage was discovered and afterward, Durkan persistently refused to discuss the affair, other than to say the money had been used to finance a personal transaction. He declined to say whether that transaction had been successful.

Following his resignation as president of the Remedial Loan Co., which has offices in the Chemical Building and underwrites deferred payments on automobiles, the affairs of that company were checked and found to be in good order.

Durkan began his banking career with the National Bank of Commerce and also was with the Fourth National Bank.

TIDAL WAVE EMPTIES BAY, THEN FLOODS IT

Bernard (Me.) Villagers Rush to Wharf to View Phenomenon—None Hurt.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SOUTHWEST HARBOR, Me., Jan. 9.—While residents scurried about to save the 50 small craft anchored in its path, a tidal wave almost eight feet high swept in upon the harbor of Bernard, three miles from here, just before noon today. Before the wave came in the harbor was suddenly sucked as dry as at low tide and two distinct rumbles, like those of an earthquake, were heard, but no tremors were felt.

The water was then at half-tide. All at once, it commenced to subside, leaving the bottom exposed. Ice which filled the upper part of the harbor collapsed and broke as the water seeped from beneath it.

Then the tidal wave swept in—slow, steady surges, three in number, the first larger than the other two. It swept small craft from their moorings and pinned other boats against the wharf.

E. L. Kelley, local manager for the Underwood Co., watched the phenomenon from Parker's Wharf.

Three Great Surges.

"There were three great surges," he said, "onrushes of water, not so swift as if the tide had suddenly swept in, but with just as great force. Residents had flocked to the water's edge, many of them to look after their boats, but there was no excitement."

"Great whirlpools were formed. Small boats were tossed about at their moorings and the 70-foot fishing smack Fish Hawk broke from her lines at the Underwood Dock and crashed against the pilings. The entire harbor was a mass of foam.

"The water left the harbor so rapidly that a waterfall was created at the harbor mouth. In less than 15 minutes it was all over."

The chief menace to fishermen was the tumbling of ice cakes to the bottom of the harbor. Chester Sawyer and Forest Albee were anchored in their dory near Parker's wharf when the water was sucked from beneath them and the dory went agorund. Sawyer was trapped in his dory when the wave pinned the boat against the wharf in such a manner that he was unable to clamber out. Cakes of ice showered around him.

First Was the Worst.

"The first surge was the worst," said Sawyer. He was uninjured despite his danger.

Bernard, often known as Bass Harbor, is situated on the southwestern shore of Mt. Desert Island and apparently was the only harbor to experience the phenomenon. The harbor is about a quarter mile deep, from the wharf to the head of the cove.

Tonight every phone on Mount Desert is busy, as the residents talk over the unprecedented event. Local folks are inclined to believe that an earthquake shock of the Gulf of Maine or Bay of Fundy, where a so-called earth fault is known to exist, was responsible for the phenomenon.

A steamer captain said that the occurrence at Bernard was probably what natives call a "bore," peculiar to coves and harbors of a certain shape. He recalled that he was nearly shipwrecked in a "bore" a few years ago.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 9.—The belief that the tidal wave at Bernard, near Southwest Harbor this afternoon was local in character was confirmed by inquiries along the coast, particularly in the vicinity of Mount Desert Island. As far as could be learned nothing in the nature of this phenomenon has occurred on the Maine coast certainly for more than 20 years.

AUTO BEATS TRAIN TIME ON STATE HIGHWAY NO. 2

Trip From Kansas City to St. Louis Made in 7 Hours and 15 Minutes of Actual Travel.

17 MILES SHORTER THAN BY RAILROAD

Replacing of Three Short Breaks in Concrete Will Reduce Mileage to About 260.

Missouri, by completing an all-weather surface, mostly hard paved, on its chief State highway, the St. Louis-Kansas City route, has redeemed itself from a long standing reproach. The last barrier on fresh concrete was removed yesterday; today it is an easy drive from St. Louis to Kansas City, and now, at last, there is a high type road all the way from the Atlantic seaboard to Topeka, Kan.

A Post-Dispatch reporter was driven from Kansas City to St. Louis yesterday by State highway engineers over the new route, No. 2, and they made the trip in approximately 7 hours and 15 minutes running time, which is 13 minutes faster than the fastest train between the two cities. The mileage between the two Union Stations by rail is 282.4 and by road 265.5. The road distance will be reduced by six miles this year when a 33-mile break in the concrete is paved.

189 Miles of Concrete.

The road mileage was checked by the reporter; here is how it is divided: Concrete, 189.1 miles; gravel, 46.2 miles; bituminous macadam and plain macadam, 12 miles; city streets in Kansas City, Boonville, Columbia and St. Louis, 16.5 miles; three improved breaks, to be replaced by concrete, 1.7 miles.

No. 2 is truly an air line route, as it has been described. The State Highway Commission determined that the greatest need for this highway was to carry a heavy traffic across the State as speedily as possible. Accordingly, the shortest possible route was chosen and towns avoided wherever possible. This policy has met with some local criticism, but has been upheld in court and apparently approved by motorists in general.

Kansas City, Boonville, Columbia, Fulton, St. Charles and St. Louis are the only communities of importance where No. 2 traverses actually settled sections. Fulton will be eliminated this year when the 33 miles of new concrete are laid under a contract to be let Tuesday, following withdrawal of an injunction suit which opposed the commission's right to designate a direct route.

Few Small Towns on Route.

The small towns of High Hill, Jonesburg, Wright City and Wentzville, and half a dozen hamlets are the only other communities actually traversed. Eight other small towns are skirted by the highway, but do not impede the traveler's progress.

Sixty miles an hour and better is easily possible for a careful driver on most of the concrete and about 35 miles an hour can be averaged on much of the gravel and macadam. When the macadam and gravel and three short breaks are replaced by concrete, and the mileage reduced to about 260, a fast car probably can make the trip all across Missouri in six hours. Opening of this highway probably will renew discussion of fixing a set speed limit permitting reasonable speed in open country.

St. Louisans now can make week-end trips to Kansas City by motor easily. The University of Missouri and other institutions on the route have been made readily accessible by road, and the Columbia-Jefferson City highway is good.

14 PERSONS KILLED AS STORM HITS NORTHEASTERN STATES

Snow Blankets New York and 35-Mile Gale Off Coast Drives Light Craft Ashore—Many Auto Crashes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Fourteen persons were killed, six in New York, five in New Jersey, and three in Massachusetts, and many were injured in Northeastern states as a result of a storm today which brought snow over a wide area.

There was a 35-mile gale off the coast which drove four barges ashore.

Starting in Florida Wednesday night, the storm moved north as far as Southern New England and west to Ohio, Indiana and Southern Michigan. Snow fell in those three States, as well as in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, the mountain section of Virginia and in Southern New England. The fall varied from two inches in New York City to 10 inches at other places in the storm area.

Gales at sea caused trouble for light craft. The coast guard reported that the barge T. J. Hopper, owned by the Eastern Transportation Co. of Wilmington, Del., was pounded to pieces after grounding on a sandbar between Highlands Beach and Spermacetti Cove, N. J. Three men were trapped on three garbage scows owned by New York City, which broke loose from their tug. The scows were washed ashore off Sandy Hook.

Four men were killed on Staten Island when their automobile skidded and turned over.

Capt. Nick Russo was swept overboard from his barge when it broke loose from a string of barges near Hart's Island, East River. His body was later recovered.

William Connors lost his footing while working on the roof of a warehouse in South street, Manhattan, and was killed when he fell through a skylight.

A woman and a child and three men were drowned when waves broke up a barge near Spermacetti Cove, N. J. The body of the woman, identified as Evelyn B. Cahill, was washed ashore. The other bodies were not recovered.

At Chicopee, Mass., two motorists, blinded by snow, were killed when their machine was struck at a railroad crossing.

A Boston elevated railroad track man was killed by a train in Charleston.

Returning from a trip with their basketball team, four students of Canisius College, Buffalo, were injured, two perhaps fatally, when their car skidded and struck a tree at North Chili, near Rochester.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—New England was visited by a snowstorm today, the maximum fall being 19 inches, reported from Whitefield, in Northern New Hampshire. At Boston the fall was five inches. Twelve automobiles were stuck in drifts and abandoned near Woodsville, Vt.

CANADA SEEKS TO JOIN U. S. TO PROTECT NIAGARA

Bill in Parliament Proposes Agreement to Save Power and Keep Beauty.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—The joint construction by the United States and Canada of works for "protection and preservation of the scenic beauty and splendor of the cataracts of Niagara" is urged in a motion prepared by Edmund Bristol, Conservative member of the House of Commons.

He gave notice today that he will present a motion to the House providing for the opening of negotiations wtih the United States to amend the boundary waters treaty of 1910. His proposed amendment would provide for an increase in the amount of water to be diverted on each side of the international boundary from the Niagara River above the falls for power purposes. It also would provide measures for the protection of the falls.

JEWS NECESSARY TO KEEP U. S. STIRRED UP, SAYS HENRY FORD

"Otherwise We'd Sit Back and Take It Easy," He Tells Reporters in Interview.

By the Associated Press.

SUDBURY, Mass., Jan. 9.—Henry Ford sat by his fireside in Wayside Inn today and talked of finance and pies. Outside was a heavy snowstorm, and the wealthy manufacturer, tilting back in a high-backed chair, told reporters that he thought big business deals, manipulations of the market and the amassing of fortune by individuals were good for the country.

"The Jews," he said, "are highly necessary in America. They keep the people stirred up with their business ability. Otherwise we'd sit back and take it easy."

FIVE LOSE LIVES ON BARGE

Craft Broken Up By Storm Off New Jersey Coast.

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Jan. 9.—Three men, one woman and a child lost their lives when the barge J. Hopper was broken up by waves on a sandbar between Highland Beach and Spermacetti Cove today. Capt. Butler of the Highland Beach Coastguard station said. The body of the woman was washed ashore.

The barge broke tow of the tug Goliath during a heavy storm. The Goliath stood by, but was unable to render aid due to high seas, Capt. Butler said. The other bodies have not been recovered.

CASHIER WHO LOOTED BANK IS SENTENCED

Gets One to Five Years for Permitting Friend to Stage Holdup.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUND CITY, Kan., Jan. 9.—Lester C. Brownback, confessed defaulting cashier of the Centerville State Bank, today entered a plea of guilty to embezzlement.

Judge Edward C. Gates of the Linn County District Court sentenced Brownback from one to five years in the penitentiary. A charge of bank robbery is being prepared and will be filed against him.

After he had entered his formal plea of guilty, he was asked by the Court whether he had anything to say.

"I didn't take the money for myself," he answered, and was about to say more when he was interrupted by Judge Gates.

"That makes no difference at all," Judge Gates said sharply. "I believe you are much worse than Ed Gates, who was convicted of the robbery. I have little respect for a man who has the nerve to enter a bank with a gun and hold it up, but I have none for a man who robs the bank from the inside.

"If I had it my way I would sentence you from 50 to 100 years in the penitentiary; unfortunately, the law will not permit me to give you more than five years."

Embezzled for Friend.

Brownback revealed in Topeka yesterday that he had embezzled funds from the bank to help a friend and later planned a holdup of the institution in an attempt to cover up his shortages.

Guided by Brownback last night, C. B. Griffith, Attorney General of Kansas, went to a lonely spot a mile north of Centerville and dug up $2792, part of the loot obtained in the holdup of the bank Dec. 11.

PRIVATE ART COLLECTION IS SOLD FOR $401,300

One of Paintings in C. K. G. Billings' Group Is a Corot Which Brought $50,500.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The C. K. G. Billings art collection, which formerly hung in Fort Tryon Hall on Washington Heights, has brought $401,300.

It was sold last night at the American Art Galleries in one of the most important auctions held here in years.

Corot's "Des Baigneuses Des Iles Borromees," a river landscape, brought $50,500, the highest price at the sale. It was bought by James Elverson, owner of the Philadelphio Inquirer.

About 1500 art dealers and collectors attended the sale, many of them being unable to get into the auction room.

Billings, now a resident of California, decided to sell his collection because he lacked accommodations for them. The previous high record for an art sale in the last 10 years was the auction of the H. S. Henry collection in 1907, which brought $352,800.

ADCOX AND KAPLAN GIVEN 40 DAYS FOR DIPLOMA SWINDLES

St. Louisans Sentenced Despite Testimony for Prosecution in Oriental University Case.

HELMUTH P. HOLLER GETS 2-YEAR TERM

Washington Judge Also Fines "Bishop-Doctor" $1000—Trio Convicted of Misuse of Mails.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Robert Adcox and Sam Kaplan of St. Louis, who pleaded guilty in the Oriental University diploma mill scandal, and gave testimony against "Bishop-Doctor" Helmuth P. Holler of Washington, a co-defendant, were sentenced to 40 days in jail by Justice Wendell P. Stafford in Criminal Court No. 2 here today. Holler, self-styled Bishop of the Theomonistic church and president of the so-called University, was sentenced to two years in Federal prison at Atlanta and fined $1000.

Adcox and Kaplan expected immunity because of their testimony. On Dec. 22, however, when the District Attorney presented their expense accounts to Judge Stafford for approval, the Judge stated that they would not need expense money at that particular time and ordered them committed to jail to await his decision.

In handing down the sentence today, Judge Stafford told the two men that the least punishment the law allowed was 60 days imprisonment. He explained that, therefore he would sentence them to 40 days, taking into account the time they had served already.

More Severe With Holler.

With Holler he was not so lenient. Prefacing his remarks with a review of the law, he stated that the maximum punishment allowed by law was two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $10,000. He declared that the court could not conceive of a worse offense under the statute of using the mail to defraud than that under which Holler had been indicted, but, inasmuch as Holler was not reputed to be rich, he would impose the maximum prison sentence and a fine of only $1000, which Holler could escape paying by serving an additional 30 days after he had completed the original sentence.

Before giving his decision Judge Stafford overruled Holler's motion for a new trial.

When asked whether he should be sentenced, Holler said, "As I want to be truthful I must repeat my plea of 'not guilty,' as I feel I am innocent, but according to the verdict I am in the hands of your honor and all I ask is clemency.

"If the court has the power," he continued, "I should ask that the charter of the Oriental University be canceled and all diplomas issued to persons submitting affidavits or making false statements as to their qualifications be also canceled."

"Archpriest" Adcox.

Adcox was called the "Archpriest of diploma mills throughout the country." He and Kaplan, who was his sub-agent, were charged with inducing persons to enroll as "students" in Holler's school, which issued diplomas for almost everything from bee keeping to philosophy.

The testimony of Adcox did not help the Government much, Judge Stafford declared, but he showed a willingness to help in the prosecution. Kaplan's testimony was more valuable, according to the Judge, but his "iniquity" was greater as Kaplan admitted that he tried to bribe the Missouri Board of Health to issue certificates to "pharmacists" graduated by the University so that they might handle liquor.

BANK LOOTER WHOSE ARREST IS ORDERED

A. O. MEININGER.

POLICE KILL ROBBER IN KANSAS CITY FIGHT

Fifty Shots Exchanged in Auto Chase Through Downtown Streets.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 9.—An attempt to hold up messengers of the Outdoor Advertising Co., this morning as they were leaving the Fidelity National Bank and Trust Co. ended in a pistol fight at Eighteenth and Broadway in which one robber was killed and another man dangerously wounded. The $2550 payroll was saved.

There was a running exchange of shots in the west side of the downtown district between the robbers in an automobile and a patrolman in a commandeered car. Bystanders fled into doorways as the duel shifted west on Ninth street, south on Jefferson street and east on Twelfth street to Pennsylvania avenue. More than 50 shots were exchanged.

Frank Pflumm, a book-keeper in the Fidelity Bank, was responsible for the speedy close to the chapter. He was in an upstairs window of the bank and saw the two holdup men run from the doorway across from the bank. He saw them leap to the running board of a sedan, both flourishing revolvers. Running down the street, Pflumm called to Patrolman C. A. Bond and pointed out the car in which a holdup was occurring.

The two payroll messengers were Francis W. Holm, manager of the company's poster department, and Howard E. Martin, superintendent of the plant.

Bond commandeered a passing car and gave chase. At Jefferson street the robbers realized they were being followed. One leaned out a rear door of the sedan and fired five shots back, one bullet hitting the windshield of the pursuing car and ranging up into the car top just between the driver and Bond. Meantime the robbers had forced Holm and Martin to get out, and the car was abandoned. They were overtaken by a police car at Eighteenth street.

Both men refused to throw up their hands. Police, opening fire, killed one and wounded the other.

MEININGER IS SOUGHT BY SHERIFF ON COURT ORDER

Arrest of Convicted Looter of Night and Day Bank Directed by Supreme Tribunal of State.

SIGN HIS APPEALS WILL BE REJECTED

Former Cashier Under Two Sentences, One of Five and Other of Three Years in Penitentiary.

Arthur O. Meininger, convicted looter of the Night and Day Bank, of which he was cashier when it closed four years ago with a loss of more than $1,000,000 to depositors and stockholders, is being sought by the Sheriff's office. A telegram ordering his arrest was received by the Sheriff yesterday from the Marshal of the State Supreme Court.

This action was interpreted here on the basis of precendent, as meaning that the Supreme Court's decision in one or both of Meininger's pending appeals will be decided against him, and that he will have to serve one or both of the terms for which he has been sentenced.

The two sentences now outstanding are on convictions obtained in the Franklin County Circuit Court at Union, on two consecutive days, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, 1924. In both cases, Meininger was convicted of assenting to receipt of deposits in a failing institution.

Total of 8 Years to Serve.

In the first case, he was charged with assenting to a $385 deposit of Mrs. Irene Mitchel, and he was sentenced to three years' imprisonment. In the second case, he was convicted of assenting to a $60 deposit of Asmus J. Anderson, and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. Thus, if both sentences are affirmed, he will have eight years to serve, less "good time" deductions.

Meininger was convicted in May, 1923, of embezzlement, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, but the Supreme Court reversed that conviction because of judge's instruction which related to the fact of Meininger's flight. The embezzlement case was retried last September, and resulted in an acquittal.

Acquaintances yesterday said Meininger was not in the city, and it was believed that he was in Oklahoma. William R. Gilbert, his lawyer, was not in the city yesterday. William Baer, also counsel in the case, said he did not know where Meininger was.

Meininger, who left the city before the bank's condition was discovered, but returned and gave bond soon afterward, has not spent a day in jail or prison thus far. He has been charged with personal responsibility for about $600,000, or the greater part of the bank's loss. Withdrawals by him of the bank's funds, which were replaced with slips known as "cash items," were shown in the examination of the bank's affairs.

In each of the assent cases, Meininger is under a $3000 appeal bond, accepted by the Circuit Court at Union.

27 Cases Still Pending.

Twenty-seven cases of assent pending against Meininger remain untried, and 16 charges of grand larceny and embezzlement. His bonds on these 43 charges aggregate $65,000. Circuit Attorney Sidener had planned to bring some of the remaining cases to trial in March.

In the appeals in the two assent cases, Meininger's counsel attacked the statute on which the indictments were based, making it a felony for any bank official or director to assent to receipt of deposits after having knowledge that the bank is in a failing or insolvent condition. They contended that the statute merely followed the language of a section of the Constitution, and that as the Constitution is not self-enforcing, the statute was meaningless.

Donald W. Ross, former Deputy State Finance Commissioner, who embezzled funds of the Night and Day Bank while he was in charge of its affairs after its closing, went to the penitentiary a few days ago to begin serving his two five-year terms, his appeals having failed.

ALUMINUM TRUST SUBSIDIARY UNDER U. S. INQUIRY ALSO

Senate Investigation Discloses Department of Justice Has Data on Aluminum Goods Mfg. Co.

MELLON COMPANY OWNS THIRD OF IT

Attorney-General Sargent on Stand Says He Did Not Know Secretary of Treasury Was Interested.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Pursuing its inquiry as to why the Department of Justice did not act more energetically in the case of the Aluminum Co. of America, in which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has large holdings, the Senate Judiciary Committee today brought to light that an investigation also is being made into the Aluminum Goods Mfg. Co., one-third of which is owned by the Mellon corporation.

This information was furnished by Assistant Attorney-General Donovan, but before Donovan took the stand, Attorney-General Sargent told the committee that within seven days after he took office last spring he directed that a report be made to him regarding the aluminum investigation "before any action whatever is taken or any publicity given." He added in a memorandum to Donovan that, "This is in no way to be construed to retard a proper and thorough examination and appropriate action as the disclosed information may warrant."

Sargent stated at the opening of the inquiry yesterday that his attention first was drawn to the case some six or seven months after he came into office, and today he said that while the memorandum bore his signature he had no recollection of it and that his recollection as given to the committee yesterday had not been changed.

Indications of Policy.

With respect to the Aluminum Goods Mfg. Co., Donovan said the investigation by the department had disclosed certain allegations which had been made the subject of a special inquiry. Examiner Dunn of the Department of Justice, whose report was quoted to the committee, said that careful inquiry had failed to support the charge that this company was controlled by the Aluminum Co. of America, but added that "material obtained from the Aluminum Goods Mfg. Co. is certainly indicative of the actions of the Aluminum Co. of America, which have been so generally criticised by its competitors, such as price policy, special discount, full line forcing, exclusive dealing, resale price maintenance and causing discontinuance of competing lines."

Donovan outlined in considerable detail just what the department had done in prosecuting the investigation into Federal Trade Commission charges that the Aluminum Co. of America had violated the Federal Court consent decree of 1912, in which it was enjoined from continuing certain illegal practices.

The Assistant Attorney-General explained he had not sought to compel the Federal Trade Commission to turn over evidence obtained by it because he did not want to take a chance of jeopardizing the Government's case against the company in the event one was warranted.

Tells of Investigation.

Prosecution of the investigation, he said, has been along the lines laid down by Harlan F. Stone just before he resigned as Attorney-General to become an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Agents were sent to the Federal Trade Commission to obtain what evidence was available there, he continued. Then the agents went into the field and finally they visited the aluminum company's offices to examine records.

In this connection he read a long report by Examiner Dunn, submitted Aug. 10, 1925, in which it was held that insufficient evidence had been obtained to support the charge that the company had violated the decree. He added, however, that the investigation still was under way and that because of the wide difference in the conclusions of his own agents and those of the Federal Trade Commission he had ordered that "other things" be done in connection with the inquiry.

Secretary Mellon's name as a stockholder in the Aluminum Co. of America was brought into the hearing today for the first time.

"Have you learned that Mr. Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury, is connected with the aluminum company?" asked Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, prosecutor of the investigation.

Read It in Newspapers.

"Only as I read it in the public prints." Attorney-General Sargent replied.

"It was not brought to your attention in connection with this matter until recently?"

"I cannot tell when I first read it in the papers."

Walsh pointed out that it was referred to in the report of the Federal Trade Commission transmitted to the Department of Justice in October, 1924, but Sargent said he had not read that part of the report.

This section then was read into the record. It quoted Arthur V. Davis, president of the Aluminum Co. of America, as saying: "This company really consists of A. W. Mellon (Secretary of the Treasury) and R. B. Mellon (his brother); when Mr. Mellon concludes his work in Washington he will return as a director of the company."

Charles Kennelly, 18, Shot in Abdomen When Rifle Is Discharged.

Charles Kennelly, 18 years old, a laborer, of 2935 Rutger street, is in a critical condition at City Hospital as the result of a bullet from a 22-caliber rifle passing through his abdomen after it was discharged from a weapon in the hands of Robert Appell, 20, whom he was visiting at 1319 South Compton avenue. Appell and two other guests, Frank Derent, 19 years old, of 1416 South Compton, and George Costello, 18, of 1115 Pennsylvania avenue, told the police the shooting was accidental.

Kennelly was unconscious when received at the hospital and could not give his version of the shooting.

MANY DEAD IN MEXICAN FLOODS

Loss of Life in State of Nayarit May Reach 300.

By the Associated Press.

NOGALES, Ariz., Jan. 9.—Rains have ceased and flood waters are subsiding in the State of Nayarit, Mex., after one of the most disastrous floods in its history. Special dispatches received here indicate that loss of life would reach 300 persons, and property loss is estimated at between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 pesos.

Seven small villages along the Santiago River were virtually wiped out and thousands of acres of fertile farm lands were inundated. Radio communication was established between here and San Blas late today and it was reported that damage was not heavy there and that no lives had been lost.

GERMANY IN POVERTY, CONSUL'S WIFE SAYS

Lack of Money in Country Is Felt by Everyone—Professional Classes Suffer Most.

A Germany democratized by poverty, and grateful to the disaster that brought her peace, is the Germany which Mrs. Georg Ahrens, wife of the Consul of the German Republic in St. Louis, left behind when she sailed from Hamburg, Dec. 20. Mrs. Ahrens arrived Wednesday in St. Louis, accompanied by her husband, who had gone East to meet her and their 3-year-old son, Hanau. They are occupying temporary quarters at 5657 Waterman avenue.

"The junker, the professor, the banker and the laborer are all in their shirtsleeves now," Mrs. Ahrens said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. Although this is her first visit to America, an English mother and several trips to England have given her a mastery of English.

"And nobody minds, because we are all equally poor, and feel equally the necessity of retrieving the internal destruction of the war," she continued. The proletariat is not restless, because they have no gorged 'profiteers' to complain about and because they know now they are working for peace. The nobility is too busy making a living to think of politics.

The employer isn't uneasy, because wages have fallen low enough to allow him a bare operating profit. It is really only the professional people — doctors and teachers and writers and artists of all sorts—who haven't enough to eat.

"It isn't that there isn't enough to go round," Mrs. Ahrens explained. "That was true during the war, but now we have an appalling surplus. I think it is because the nations to whom we owe money want gold and won't accept raw materials and manufactured goods from us, the way they used to."

"And in the midst of all the surplus stands the poor citizen without enough money to buy what he needs. Because of this scarcity of money—real money—we've contracted the habit of doing everything half-portion. Our new-model taxis seat only two instead of four. That means less fare to pay, but it also means smaller earnings for the taxi driver. We eat cheaper food and less of it—smaller meat bills for us to pay, and for the butcher to live on. We patronize the theater and the art salon and the nerve specialist and the lawyer and the privat docent less and less. And we all work harder—except for the poor professional man, who can't work any harder because he has no clients."

On Empty Stomachs.

When asked if that meant that Germany was becoming intellectually dead, Mrs. Ahrens shook her blonde head wistfully.

"Quite the contrary. The intelligentsia are turning out more plays and pictures and books and scientific monograms than ever before since the war of the liberation against Napoleon. But they are doing it on an empty stomach."

Mrs. Ahrens said that no matter what a man did during the day, he put on his Tuxedo in the evening. "We don't want to lose our self-respect you see, and wearing blue denim all the time is apt to make one careless. And we women, though we have the suffrage now, we still exert our greatest pressure in the social and economic life of the nation. Politics seem a trifle irrelevant to us.

Women Elected Hindenburg.

"The women's vote? Hindenburg got it, of course. . . . He is so tall and imposing. And he has justified us, I think, by playing a difficult conciliatory role in these ticklish days when Social-Democrats and Nationalists have to serve on the same committee."

Mrs. Ahrens said that the younger generation wasn't causing anyone much worry. "The younger people are too busy making a living to have time for political plots and brilliant parties, and all the rest of it. Too poor for marriage, even—most of them. There have been some engagements announced in Berlin society this winter, but practically no marriages at all. You have no idea how serious the youngsters have become."

PETITION FOR NEW GRAIN EXCHANGE CIRCULATED HERE

15 Members of Merchants' Body Said to Have Signed It—Would Enroll Only 300 Persons.

A petition proposing that a new association be established similar to the Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis Boards of Trade, with membership limited to 300 individuals actively engaged in the grain and milling business, was circulated on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange yesterday for signatures.

The petition, which is said to have obtained the signatures of some 23 members of the exchange, opened with the following declaration: "An emergency has arisen which threatens the commercial life and prosperity of those engaged in the grain and milling business. Drastic measures of a protective nature are necessary if we wish to continue in business."

Membership of 300.

The proposal for organizing of the new trading body carried the suggestion that 200 of the 300 limited memberships be issued immediately at $1000 each and that the remaining 100 be retained in the treasury and be sold to new members at the discretion of the Board of Directors at $10,000 each. The petition closed with the recommendation that a new location for trading, in closer touch with business activities of the city, be found, and with the announcement that the petition was put in circulation "to determine the advisability of carrying the proposed program into effect."

William T. Hill, a member of the Merchants' Exchange and first signer of the petition, described the movement as "the crystallization of sentiment of a number of the leading people in the exchange."

Six or eight of the members talked it over Friday, he explained, and the petition, or circular, as he described it, was the result. Its purpose was to determine the opposition to the movement, he said.

Likely to Go Through.

"Only 23 members signed it, but that doesn't mean anything," he said. "The majority of the leading members are in favor of it and it undoubtedly will go through."

The present membership of the Merchants' Exchange is 646, according to the annual report of the board of directors, made public last week. This number is 50 less than at the close of 1924, the report states, due to deaths, cancellations and forfeitures. Because of the reduction in membership and unexpected expenses, including approximately $30,000 spent for the repair and exterior cleaning of the Exchange Building, and $15,000 contributerd toward the new superpower broadcasting station in St. Louis County, membership dues for this year were increased from $125 to $150.

The increase in dues is further justified in the report by the statement that current operations of the Exchange for the last six years have resulted in an approximate deficit of $120,000, made good from the real estate account reserve fund of the organization. The practice of making up deficits in the operating account from the real estate account is declared "undesirable" by the directors in their report.

Decline of Grain Receipts.

Mention is made in the report of the decline of grain receipts during 1925, due to the shortage of the 1924 corn crop and a similar shortage of the last wheat crop. The situation is not treated as an emergency in the directors' report, however, and the normal corn crop just harvested will counterbalance the previous shortage, the report declares.

The circulation of the petition caused but a flurry of interest on the part of members, according to Charles Rippin, secretary of the Exchange. "It's just the annual uprising of the malcontents," Rippin said. "By Monday morning the incident will be forgotten." Rippin said the organization of another grain trading body here was not warranted by the present market. The Exchange as now organized, according to Rippin, includes persons in affiliated businesses in addition to grain dealers and millers.

ST. LOUISANS LOST $56,000 ON PLANS OF 3 YOUNGSTERS

Large Ideas of the Portman Boys From Peoria Run Afoul Missouri's Blue Sky Statute.

If about a dozen St. Louisans had not lost $56,000, the fall of the investment house of L. B. Portman & Co., whose offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building are closed, could be set down as a rather diverting, if inevitable, incident in the financial journeyings of three young Dick Whittingtons in their twenties.

The active partners of L. B. Portman & Co. are Lawrence Portman, 28 years old; Raymond Portman, 23, and Charles Portman, 21, three brothers, who came down from Peoria, Ill., last June to set the city on fire.

Those who have watched their operations here, including the Better Business Bureau, are of the opinion that these three sons of a family honored for more than 60 years in Peoria are guilty chiefly of magnificent, sophomoric bombast and a complete ignorance of things financial.

It is argued that none other than youths, with a scorn for hard actualities, would have undertaken the promotion of a 30-story office building for the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street, to cost $3,000,000, when their own available cash had been about exhausted with the outfitting of their offices with inlaid black walnut furniture.

$323 Hotel Bill Due.

At least, there apparently was not enough left to pay the $323.50 hotel bill of one of the brothers at Hotel Chase, nor was there enough money at home to meet the $50 check which the hotel asserts one of the brothers cashed.

Yet the brothers last Saturday did offer to newspapers a full-page advertisement announcing the office building project and their willingness to let the public subscribe $1,500,000 to get it started. Even now, the self-confidence of the youths is not entirely flown, for they assert that everything would have been all right had they been permitted to go ahead with this sale.

"There should be a fine building there, you know," they assert.

The Post-Dispatch learned, however, that the youths had neglected the triviality of getting a permit from the State under the blue-sky law, so the advertisement did not appear and beautiful lights will not play in shifting colors at night over this imposing structure on Twelfth boulevard, as the Portmans had planned.

The brothers organized their investment business in Peoria in 1921, in association with their father, Charles L. Portman, a sporting goods dealer. Until January of 1925, the firm was contented to go along in a small way, but then the impatience of the brothers to speed along the road to fortune could be restrained no longer.

Imposing Prospectuses.

They announced, in imposing if amateurish prospectuses, the erection of a fine apartment building for their home town and of a cold-storage warehouse. Peoria had no objections to a fine apartment house nor even a cold-storage warehouse.

And the Portman boys could build them if they wished, but not with the hard cash of Peoria citizens. The bonds did not sell. So they brought them to St. Louis and after fitting up their office as becomes rising young financiers, they set out to get in the cash. One of the boys, when asked why good birch would not have done as well as inlaid walnut for desks, replied, "The office must befit the Portmans." In this connection, a whole suite similarly rich in its fittings was occupied for a time in New York City by the eldest of the brothers, but he had nothing to sell and it closed after a time. But if anyone had ventured in, the name of Portman would have suffered no shame.

About a dozen St. Louisans bought of the bonds for the Peoria apartment and warehouse projects, though it appears now that the brothers had neglected a detail—they did not obtain a lease or title to the proposed sites. The heaviest investors in St. Louis were Dr. C. A. Leavey of the Metropolitan Building, who is said to have invested $22,500, and Charles A. Wasserburger, president of the National Printing Co., who bought $16,500. Other investors were Horace B. Johnson Sr., father of Horace B. Johnson Jr., whom the Portmans engaged to manage their St. Louis office, $1000; Dr. Arthur Gundlach, Twenty-second and University streets, $2000; Blind Girls' Home, 5235 Page boulevard, $3000.

Interim Certificates.

The purchasers were given interim certificates and the failure of the Portmans to replace these certificates in due time with bonds resulted in the closing of their office here, the attachment of their furniture by smaller investors seeking to recover and the closing also of their Peoria offices.

It is asserted in Peoria that bankruptcy proceedings will be instituted against L. B. Portman & Co. in an effort to learn what was done with the approximately $56,000 of proceeds from bonds sold. Horace Johnson, manager of the St. Louis office, is said to have asserted that he sent the money to the Peoria office.

Invention Detects Fire In Inaccessible Places

Automatic Device, Photo-Electric Cell, Betrays Finest Wisp of Smoke — Other New Discoveries Exhibited at Pittsburg.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 9.—The "photo-electric cell," a delicate device to detect fire in inaccessible places; lighthouse lenses with a range of 17 miles, and a ground microphone for use in mine disasters to find entombed men, formed the center of attraction at the Exposition of New Discoveries which opened at Carnegie Museum tonight.

Described as the most sensitive device known to man, the photo-electric cell was demonstrated as a silent sentinel to guard against fire in ship holds, warehouses or any place where an automatic alarm is needed. The cell, upon which a beam of light plays, is so sensitive that even a thin veil of smoke, passing between it and the light, causes an alarm to sound. It is the invention of V. K. Zworykin, a Westinghouse research engineer.

The United States Bureau of Mines presented the "geophone," the purpose of which is to determine the fate of miners entombed by explosions or fire. The geophone is extremely sensitive to sound. The dropping of a pin in its immediate vicinity can be detected. Engineers have used it with great success in locating leaks in gas mains.

The lighthouse lenses, made in Pittsburg for the United States Government, are capable of casting light beams 17 miles out to the sea. They are said to be an improvement of 50 per cent over the old foreign-made lenses.

In addition to the New Discoveries Exposition, the museum officials place on exhibition for the first time many recent acquisitions, including autographs of Queen Isabella of Spain, William Pitt and William Penn.

In the display of reptiles is a "catastrophe snake" found in Pennsylvania, and so named because on its head appears the perfect figures "13." A great dinosaur skull, imbedded in the rock in which it was found in Utah, is another exhibit.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A. Malcolm Smith, 67-year-old veteran Alaskan dog team driver, left New York today for Seattle to take command of the motor sledge caravan which will start on a 1000-mile trip across the Endicott Mountains and the bleakest part of Northern Alaska. The sledges, equipped with "snow motors," will carry gasoline to fuel the airplane in which Captain George Hubert Wilkins will attempt to fly from Point Barrow, Alaska, to the pole and possibly to Spitzbergen.

DRY CRUSADER SEES NEW LIGHT ON LIQUOR

'Pussyfoot' Johnson, Home From Europe, Much Less Emphatic in His Manner.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Some good men drink and some do not. Drinking is a matter of personal tastes. A man has a right to drink if he pleases, and can obtain the necessary liquor.

Such are the conclusions of William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, former assailant of the "wets" in this country, who now is director of the principal European office of the World League Against Alcoholism in London, expressed in an interview today when he arrived for his annual visit to this country.

The man who lost the sight of his right eye when mobbed in the streets of London in 1919 after a prohibition lecture has mellowed in his attitude toward the liquor problem. The steady stream of adverse comment on prohibition, which has come to him in "wet" Europe from this country has had its effect. He is more cautious in speech than when he used to conduct raids single-handed and without warrants and much less emphatic in manner.

He is not sure that the Volstead Act has not done as much or more harm than good. He refused to say that its effect in some directions had been harmful, but confessed that there might be nearly as much liquor drinking now as there ever was.

"Drinking is a matter of personal tastes," he said. "A man has a right to drink if he pleases. But this doesn't say that I don't believe society should not protect itself from the liquor interests who let children, chronic drunkards and other irresponsible persons obtain their wares.

"Prohibition certainly has not worked out the way we wanted it to, but no law ever works out to perfection. Criticism of the Volstead Act by prominent persons has been severe. If the law is as bad a law as these enemies of prohibition say it is, why don't they repeal it? The prohibition amendment merely makes constitutional the passing of such laws as the Volstead Act. Repeal that and you have your liquor back."

He was suffered by friends of the court to finish the reading of his manuscript without interruption, but at the end was severely heckled by Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, one of the advocates of the Harding-Coolidge recommendation.

Walsh Unable to Agree.

Walsh declared that he was unable to agree with Williams' statement that the power of the World Court to give advisory opinions was derived from Article 14 of the League of Nations Covenant. That power, said Walsh, plainly was derived from the statute creating the court.

Replying to a question by Senator Johnson (Rep.) of California, who rallied to the aid of Williams, Walsh declared that reservation No. 1 to the pending resolution of ratification was in fact meaningless, being merely a statement of an existing condition.

"It means very much to me," said Williams. Walsh also took exception to Williams' catalogue of questions which might be brought within the jurisdiction of the World Court.

Quoting from the Versailles Treaty, Williams said that these matters included regulation of hours of work, the establishment of a maximum working day or week, the regulation of the labor supply, the prevention of unemployment, the protection of women and children and "other matters."

Walsh pointed out that this was a statement of article 13 of the Treaty of Versailles, indicating the scope of activities of the international labor organization, not of the World Court.

Contradicted by Walsh.

"And of the International Court, also," insisted Williams.

"The Senator," retorted Walsh, "will find nothing in article 13 which undertakes to give jurisdiction over any of these questions to the court."

Reed Asks Questions.

Senator Reed of Missouri, who had entered the chamber near the end of his colleague's address joined with Senator Johnson in putting questions to Walsh. These turned mainly on the reservations to the pending resolution. Walsh said that reservations one and four were put in simply to quiet the fears of some over-timorous people, but that he regarded two or three as essential. Walsh took a shot at all his opponents with a remark inferentially omitting them from "those of us who know a little something of international law."

"Part and Parcel of League."

Williams emphasized his belief that the court was a part of the League of Nations, and cited the plank of the Republican platform of 1924 which, while favoring American adherence to the World Court, pledged the party against the assumption of "any obligations under the covenant of the League," Williams underscored the word "any."

"The two sentences in this plank of our party platform," said Williams on this point, "were believed to be consistent and in harmony with each other by the Republicans of the country. We were not seeking the votes of pro-leaguers in the first sentence and the votes of anti-leaguers in the second. We accepted that plank in our platform, believing this court was not part of the League of Nations and believing that our adherence to that tribunal would not drag us pro tanto into the league.

"The resolution before the Senate provides that we adhere to the court. This means that we join the United States to the court; that we become a party to the statute creating the court; that we become identified with that part of this organization of the League of Nations as the members of the league themselves are identified.

"We become concerned with the meaning of the words, 'the assumption of any obligations by the United States under the covenant of the League of Nations.'"

Links League With Court.

Williams began by expressing regret that Senators could not take counsel with one another in executive session, since "the mere proffer of suggestions or the asking of questions is calculated to classify us for or against the pending resolution." He referred to the fact that members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations are "in cordial disagreement" on points pertaining to the court.

"Some of the members of the Senate," he said, "have assured me that our adherence to this international court is a mere gesture—a throwing of a kiss across the seas—a general evidence of international good will—something meaningless. It is very evident that others view the resolution very seriously and are most apprehensive over the step it is proposed our country shall take."

Williams said that he was moved to ask a few questions while the discussion of the court was yet in a general stage.

Williams then reviewed the various steps in the formation of the League of Nations and the subsequent creation of the World Court. Directly linking the league with the court, he said: "The League of Nations consists of a council, an assembly, a permanent secretariat, a labor organization and a court."

Stress was laid by the speaker on changes made by the assembly of the League of Nations in the plan for the court as originally drafted by the Committee of Jurists, of which Elihu Root was a member.

"The purpose of pointing out these substantial changes made in the statute as proposed by the Root Committee," he explained, "is to show that the statute we are considering is not the statute proposed by the Root Committee, but is the statute proposed by the committee appointed by the assembly of the League of Nations."

About Naming of Judges.

Disputing the statement frequently made that the judges elected to the World Court are nominated by the Hague Court of Arbitration, Williams said that the latter court "could be disbanded altogether and nominations can be made just as effectively by those states mentioned in the annex to the covenant of the League of Nations and the states which joined the League of Nations subsequently."

"It has been conceded," he said, "that the judges are elected by the league, their salaries are fixed by the league and paid by the league, their pensions are fixed and paid by the league, access to the court is determined by the council of the league, and my first question is whether the judges of the court are not also nominated by the league."

Williams again characterized the League of Nations as "a confederacy of governments with a council, an assembly, a secretariat, an international labor organization and a court."

"Is it not the judgment of the Senate," he then asked, "that this court is part and parcel of the League of Nations?"

His second inquiry was "whether this court is really a court as we in the United States understand that term—whether it really is a tribunal established for the administration of justice."

The Root Committee, Williams continued, recommended the resumption of work by The Hague peace conference on the formulation of a system of international law. This recommendation, he said, was "brushed aside," so that the court as created "was not furnished with any body of laws, as our courts are, to be applied by the court to the facts presented to it from time to time for decision."

"Is it the judgment of the Senate," he asked, "that this institution, which has no body of law and which by its process may not bring a guilty or an unwilling defendant before it, is really a court of justice?"

If the United States should go into the court, Williams said, it would go in without "moral reservations" in its act and would give the court its full moral support.

More Questions.

"If our moral support of this court is yielded willingly, graciously and joyously," he continued, "will it not mean that the time may never come, in the exercise by this court of its anomalous jurisdiction and in its application of that various language of right which we speak of so vaguely as international law, when the great weight of public opinion in the United States will not constrain our Government to yield generally to the jurisdiction of the court?"

"If we adhere to the protocol and statute we must contemplate that we may appear at that bar whenever we are cited to appear at the instance of a complaining state. I need not refer to the consequences of such appearances."

Williams quoted from a statement by Leon Bourgeois to the Root Committee that the court was "armed with the highest moral power and organized for penetration as deep as possible into all the points of contact in the life of nations."

How deep this penetration might be, Williams commented, was "strikingly and suggestively" indicated by the treaty of Versailles, with its various provisions covering labor conditions and other matters.

U. S. PROTESTS TO MEXICO AGAINST LAND AND OIL ACTS

Washington Holds Retroactive Measures Violate Both International Law and Former Pledge.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. — The delicate status of relations between the United States and Mexico became increasingly plain today, with disclosure that Ambassador Sheffield had filed formal protest with the Mexican foreign office against retroactive provisions of the two new Mexican laws known as the petroleum and anti-alien land acts.

Estimates of the aggregate value of American investments in Mexico jeopardized by these enactments, taken at their face value, run as high as $50,000,000.

State Department officials refused to make public the communication presented by Ambassador Sheffield. It is known to have been strongly phrased, although there is nothing to show it indicated what course the Washington Government would pursue if unable to obtain for its nationals the protection to which they are held to be entitled.

This right of protection is regarded here as indisputable, both under accepted international law and under pledges made by Mexico to the United States during the conference in 1923, which paved the way for American recognition of that Government.

Basis of Protest.

Ambassador Sheffeld, in making his representations against the land law, has told the Mexican Foreign Office plainly that this pledge has not been kept.

Article 2 of the land law requires that any alien who may have an interest in a Mexican land, mine or oil company, shall waive his right to the protection of his own Government and agree not to invoke such protection under penalty of forfeiture of his interested company to the nation.

Article 3 of the land law provides that in Mexican agricultural companies there must not be in alien hands more than 50 per cent of the total interest of the company.

Article 4 stipulates that foreign interests in such companies in excess of this 50 per cent may be retained only until death in the case of individual holders, or for 10 years after the act goes into effect.

It is the view of the State Department that under these provisions many Americans who have paid for Mexican lands or for stock in Mexican companies would be forced out in a manner amounting to indirect confiscation.

The protest is the culmination of a long series of representations which began last fall, when the land and petroleum laws first were proposed by President Calles to the Mexican Congress. As a result of these representations, the acts were modified in many ways, but were not stripped of the element against which American protest is made—the retroactive application to foreign interest of Article 27 of the Mexican Constitution of 1917. That article is designed to nationalize the natural resources of Mexico.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS OUTLINED AT SAFETY COUNCIL MEETING

The present status of the traffic problem in St. Louis, plans for its future solution, and the work of traffic engineers in meeting the question in other cities, were outlined last night at the special traffic Safety Conference of the St. Louis Safety Council.

Dr. Miller McClintock, Director of the Albert Russell Bureau for Street Traffic Control of the University of California, Director of the Metropolitan Street Traffic Survey of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce, and Consultant for the Los Angeles Traffic Commission, presented the methods by which law codes had been simplified, parking in congested districts practically eliminated, and deaths and injuries cut down in the cities where he has worked.

'KING OF OSAGE HILLS' INDICTED BY FEDERAL JURY

W. K. Hale, Held by State on Murder Charge, Named in Connection With Death of Indian.

By the Associated Press.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Jan. 9.—W. K. Hale, "king of the Osage Hills," tonight faces two charges of murder in connection with the deaths of persons in the Osage country of Oklahoma.

The second charge was made late today by the United States grand jury here, which is investigating an alleged conspiracy against wealthy Osages which is held responsible for the deaths of 17 persons.

The grand jury charged Hale with complicity in the death of Henry Roan, an Osage, who was killed in January, 1923. Roan's $25,000 life insurance policy was made payable to Hale, who has pending a suit to collect it.

Second Murder Charge.

The first murder charge was lodged against Hale Monday in Pawhuska by Oklahoma State authorities, alleging that he conspired to cause the death of W. E. Smith, who was killed when his home at Fairfax was blown up in March, 1923.

Indicted with Hale in connection with Roan's death was John Ramsey, a cowboy-farmer living three miles from Fairfax, Ok. Ramsey was arrested last night at his home and brought to Guthrie today.

Hale was already in jail here.

Fifty-three other indictments were returned by the jury in its first report since it began work Monday. The others were not made public, but it was indicated that most of them were in connection with liquor offenses and other matters not related to the Osage conspiracy inquiry.

The jury recessed until Monday.

Ramsey was charged in the indictment with the actual shooting of Henry Roan. Hale is named as an accessory before the fact, and is alleged to have hired Ramsey to do the shooting. Roan's bullet-pierced body was found in a pasture several days after he disappeared. The fact that he died on Indian land, gives the Government jurisdiction to lodge a murder charge.

Government attorneys explained that the nature of the indictment makes Hale a principal in the charge as well as Ramsey and that both will be prosecuted for first degree murder.

Ramsey is a white man about 35 years old. He is married and has six children.

WOMAN STEPPING FROM STREET CAR KILLED BY AUTO

Miss Maud Stickells, 26, Normandy School Secretary, Run Down in Front of 757 Hamilton Avenue

Miss Maud A. Stickells, 26 years old, secretary of the Board of Education of the Normandy Consolidated School District, was killed by an automobile in front of 757 Hamilton avenue at 2 p. m. yesterday. Her death was the seventh motor vehicle fatality this year.

The automobile was driven by George K. Smith, 27, of 3621A Meramec street, a coal salesman, who is held under $5000 bond. According to witnesses, Miss Stickells alighted from a southbound City Limits street car at Hamilton and Enright avenues and was crossing the street behind the car, when struck by Smith's Ford coupe, moving north. Smith said she stepped in front of his machine and he was unable to stop.

Papers found on Miss Stickells' body gave her address at 5929A Page boulevard, but later it was learned she lived with friends at 756 Hamilton avenue, a few yards from where she was killed. Her brother, Thomas G. Stickells, of 4430 Athlone avenue, manager of the Reece Buttonhole Machine Co., identified the body. He was her only near relative, other than distant members of the family living in Boston, he said.

Man 65, Injured When Crushed Between Hearse and Truck.

Adolph Rothschild, 65, 1320 Goodfellow avenue, suffered serious internal injuries and possible fracture of the spine when he was crushed between the front of an automobile hearse and the rear of a truck which was backed against him yesterday afternoon.

He is employed by the Straus Saddlery Co., 2665 Locust street, where he was adjusting a radiator cover to the hearse when injured. The truck, belonging to the company, was operated by Steve Martin, a Negro, of 724 Norh Compton avenue.

Raymond Wise, 12, Seriously Injured When Run Over by Rock Island Train.

Raymond Wise, 12 years old, of 5985 Highland avenue, was critically injured yesterday afternoon when he was run over by a Rock Island freight train near Goodfellow and Natural Bridge avenues. He suffered internal injuries and his left leg was cut off.

Playmates told police he tried to "hop" a freight car. He was taken to Christian Hospital.

ROBBERS GET TRUCK AND $100

Laundry Driver Reports He Was Held Up by Three Men.

Albert Jensen, driver for the Grand Laundry, 3044 Lawton boulevard, last night reported he was robbed of his truck and about $100 cash collections by three men shortly after 6 p. m.

He had made a delivery at 1423 Belt avenue and was returning to his truck, he said, when three men confronted him with revolvers. He was forced to sit in the body of the truck, with one man while it was driven to a point near Marcus avenue and Hammett place, where he was robbed and put out.

SMOOT PROPOSES REPEAL OF TAX ON INHERITANCES

Declaration of Utah Senator First Indication From G. O. P. Ranks of Program of Revision of House Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Revision of the House tax reduction bill to include separate repeal of the inheritance tax was proposed today by Chairman Smoot of the Senate Finance Committee, which will decide on Monday on the rate schedules of the measure.

The chairman announced his position after an attack on the inheritance tax by Senators Fletcher and Trammell, Democrats, of Florida, who appeared before the committee. Repeal of the levy also was urged by the Speakers of the South Carolina and Arkansas Houses of Representatives, Edgar A. Brown and Thomas B. Hill, respectively, and by Lieutenant-Governor McCall of Arkansas.

Senator Smoot's declaration was the first definite indication from Republican ranks of a program of revision of the nonpartisan House bill, which had been indorsed in general by Secretary Mellon.

Democrat members of the Finance Committee completed today their program of tax reduction, which they will attempt next week to have the committee substitute for the rate schedules in the House bill. This plan would call for more reductions than the $330,000,000 provided by the House measure, going probably as high as $425,000,000.

A quick showdown on the rate schedules is expected when the committee takes up these provisions Monday. Democrats, who are in the minority, 7 to 10, will vote solidly for their substitute program, while the Republicans are expected to vote for the rate schedules, in the main, incorporated in the House bill.

How much support Chairman Smoot will get for his motion to repeal the inheritance tax is doubtful, but there are indications the Republican members of the committee will unite in backing it.

Under the proposed terms of the inheritance schedule in the House bill, Smoot declared the Government would barely collect enough from a $100,000 estate after the credit of 80 per cent for State payments had been allowed, to pay the cost to the Government of making the collection.

CHURCH WORKER, 54, AND PASTOR, 24, WED

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Richardson Left Hosmer Hall for Chicago Two Years Ago.

St. Louisans who knew Mrs. Elizabeth M. Richardson while she was house manager at Hosmer Hall in 1923 were surprised to learn of her marriage at Gary, Ind., last Thursday, to the Rev. Stanley W. Graf, 24 years old, pastor of Firman Congregational Church in Chicago.

Mrs. Richardson, a widow, 54 years old, is superintendent of Firman Settlement House, next door to the church, and her romance with the young minister began when he was a student at the house. She left Hosmer Hall to take charge of settlement work for the Chicago church. Graf was ordained last June and in tribute to his talents was offered the pastorate of Firman Congregational. Friends noted the close acquaintanceship between them, but thought Mrs. Richardson had only a motherly interest in Graf. They slipped away Thursday, obtained a license at Crown Point, Ind., and were married by a Congregational minister at Gary. Since then they have disappeared on a honeymoon.

The bride is a graduate of Wellesley College. Her first husband died in 1903. She entered settlement work shortly afterward and held various posts in different cities, coming to St. Louis from Minneapolis.

Mrs. Elma H. Benton, principal of Hosmer Hall, expressed some astonishment when informed of the marriage yesterday.

"I am only amazed at the age of the bridegroom, however," she said. "Mrs. Graf is a pretty little woman, cultured and charming. She has snow white hair and looks like an old-fashioned miniature. During her stay with us she was intensely interested in church work."

by section, here is the log of No. 2, by miles:

St. Louis and county streets to Ferguson avenue and St. Charles road, 8.1.

Concrete almost to High Hill, 61.8.

Fresh rock in break, 0.5.

Concrete through High Hill, 2.8.

Old gravel, 14.3.

Concrete, 9.0.

Old gravel through Fulton, 31.0.

Macadam, 3.5.

Columbia streets, 1.6.

Oiled macadam, 2.8.

Old, narrow gravel, 0.3.

Corduroy at Perche Creek, 0.9.

Concrete, 20.7.

Boonville streets, 0.7.

Bituminous macadam, 5.7.

Concrete, 45.5.

Gravel and planks at Mulkey underpass, 0.3.

Concrete, 49.3.

Kansas City streets, 6.1.

The concrete, of course, is just about perfect. The city streets used are all good. The three breaks are a bit rough, but are so short that they do not matter. Some of the gravel and macadam has developed "chuck holes," but these are not so bad but that a light car can fare through well enough.

St. Louis and county streets used in this route are: Locust-Lindell, Union, Page, Ferguson avenue. Those in Kansas City are: Raytown road, thirty-first, cutoff, Linwood boulevard, McGee trafficway. Attractive sections of each metropolis are traversed.

5 Per Cent Maximum Grade.

The maximum grade on No. 2 is 5 per cent, attained on the Missouri River bluffs on either side of Boonville, but with pavement they are easy. The eastern one of these is notable in that a high concrete viaduct over a creek and the M.-K.-T. Railroad constitutes part of the grade. There are numerous stretches where the highway runs in a straight line for miles, across rolling country; in Lafayette County one such stretch is 25 miles long, except for one minor jog made necessary by the topography. For about half its length No. 2 runs where there was no road before the State Highway Commission and its engineers began to lift Missouri out of the mud under the $60,000,000 bond issue voted in 1920. Concrete on No. 2 is all 18 feet wide.

Has Cost $9,000,000.

Including about $1,000,000 to be paid for the 33 miles of concrete coming this year to complete the break through Columbia, the cost of No. 2 has been about $9,000,000. This does not include the $512,000 bridge over the Missouri at Boonville, which was paid for by Cooper and Howard counties with Federal aid. The first concrete was laid through St. Louis County in 1921; two years later that in St. Charles County was put down; next came the slab in the vicinity of Sni-A-Bar farm, Jackson County, show place of the late Col. William R. Nelson. Counties traversed are: St. Louis, St. Charles, Warren, Callaway, Boone, Howard, Cooper, Saline, Lafayette and Jackson. The highway is never very far from the Missouri River, but that stream is seen from it but three times—at St. Charles and Boonville and from a hill east of Boonville.

Snow at Western End.

Yesterday's tourists from Kansas City encountered much snow on the highway at the western end, Kansas City having had a two-inch fall Thursday night, but this did not hamper their progress. There was less snow in other sections, but occasional spots damp from thaw or slippery from subsequent freezing. Carl Brown, assistant chief engineer of the State Highway Commission, and Roy C. Johnson, engineer of grade separations, drove the Post-Dispatch reporter from Kansas City to Fulton. They had been to Kansas City completing arrangements to eliminate a narrow underpass of the Rock Island Railroad. George A. Ridgeway, assistant division engineer at Webster Groves, and M. S. Lattimore, testing engineer, completed the drive to St. Louis.

Minimizing of Grade Crossings.

The only grade crossings on No. 2 are in a group at the Kansas City limits and at Boonville, but the latter eventually will be terminated by a relocation.

No longer will the Automobile Club of Missouri and other agencies have to tell tourists that the chance of crossing the State is doubtful. The mud is gone from No. 2; until yesterday the last of the detours had existed, miring cars frequently. The barriers just east of High Hill, Montgomery County, were opened yesterday afternoon, except that trucks weighing more than 5000 pounds must use the detour there for 10 days more while the fresh concrete cures. Many miles of the concrete were thrown open only within the last two months and most of it since last spring. The slowest going now is over the old gravel in Callaway County, where a small group of citizens delayed highway progress by an injunction suit.

The country along No. 2 is quite hilly in St. Louis, St. Charles and Jackson counties and rolling the rest of the way. Its cultivated farms do not have the wild charm of the Ozarks, but their value has been increased considerably by the coming of the hard road. New filling stations are springing up all along, and new roadside advertisements; one St. Louis hotel has placed its signs as far as Jackson County. A St. Louis-Columbia bus line is running now and there is talk of one to Kansas City. The only toll collected is at the St. Charles bridge and the commission will eliminate that if given legislative approval.

Probably next summer the designation of No. 2 will be replaced by that of U. S. No. 40, when the new Federal routes are put in service. A dedication of the new highway is talked of for next spring.

Yesterday a Missouri mule in Montgomery County gazed over a fence at the new concrete and doubtless grew dizzy at the stream of cars and trucks no longer requiring his help to cross the State. Behind him the ghost of a [illegible] that drew a covered wagon [illegible] Westport Landing in '49 [illegible] like the January wind.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 9.—Miss Florence MacBeth, soprano with the Chicago Civic Opera Company, was dismissed today from the Methodist Hospital here, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis several weeks ago. Miss MacBeth has returned to Chicago.

The DUO-ART
REPRODUCING PIANO

THE preference by the artist playing TODAY is the evidence of the survival of the fittest among reproducing Pianos.

That such celebrities as Paderewski, Hofmann, Bauer, Gabrilowitsch, and a host of others in the public eye, choose the Duo-Art for their recordings, give to this fine instrument a pre-eminence justifying it also as the choice of all discriminating lovers of music.

That the Duo-Art is in the palaces of royalty, and in the homes of presidents and governors bespeaks an appreciation of its extraordinary merits rarely accorded any one make of reproducing piano.

The Duo-Art, as widely esteemed for its distinctive worthiness, should be in your home, where the finest concert performances and latest Broadway dance hits may then be your very own to the utmost.

Nor is the matter of cost a bar. The Duo-Art is priced as low as $695. Convenient terms, with a liberal allowance on your present instrument.

BUILD DELMAR VIADUCT, C. OF C. TELLS THE MAYOR

Recommendation Made in Reply to Letter From Miller Soliciting Aid in Fight on Wabash Railroad.

ON FIRING LINE FOR FOUR YEARS, IT SAYS

Efforts of Special Committee Headed by F. W. A. Vesper to Compose Crossing Dispute Cited.

"Go ahead and build the Delmar viaduct."

This is the recommendation of the Chamber of Commerce to Mayor Miller as to the problem of eliminating the Wabash grade crossing at Delmar station.

The Mayor sent a letter to the Chamber of Commerce, Dec. 30, asking for "immediate action" for elimination of the Delmar grade crossing. He said there was "a wonderful opportunity" for the Chamber to "do something toward building a better and greater St. Louis."

The Mayor's Letter.

"The Wabash Railway Co." the Mayor wrote, "is handicapping the progress of the City of St. Louis by a contemptuous and parsimonious attitude. A full discussion of the controversy was presented in our press. This handicap cannot be overcome unless the business interests and citizens generally take some decided action. Therefore, I ask you to bring up this matter before your association and openly and publicly declare yourself either for the elimination of this dangerous condition, or state whether you are unwilling to contribute the influence of your association to a bigger and better St. Louis."

Secretary Bunn of the Chamber, replying to the Mayor's letter, wrote:

"In view of the fact that the Chamber of Commerce and its special committee, headed by Mr. F. W. A. Vesper, has been on the firing line in this Delmar grade crossing for three or four years, it would seem superfluous for the Chamber to again 'state its position.'

Former Action Cited.

"You will remember that on April 28 I wrote you, inclosing a copy of the authorized public statement issued by our board of directors, in which statement the board expressed the view that the city should proceed at once with the building of the viaduct, without waiting for the United States Supreme Court's decision.

"A little later, as I remember it, you announced that the city would build the viaduct at once, but, still later, you decided that nothing would be done until the Supreme Court decision should be rendered.

"In view of these facts, it seems to me that there are only two courses open: One is to continue to wait for the Supreme Court's decision; and the other is to assume, in accordance with our committee's recommendation that, under the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, the city has the right to go ahead and build the viaduct, and then go ahead and build it. The latter is the course that the Chamber of Commerce has recommended to you."

Mayor Also Wrote to Road.

In a letter to the board of directors of the Wabash, dated Dec. 16, the Mayor charged that the Wabash was deliberately and maliciously handicapping the city's progress. He accused the railroad of dilatory tactics, and said:

"The city hesitates about proceeding with this matter while the matter is in court. The Wabash well knows the criticism that might be leveled against the city administration, in the event that it proceeded during the pendency of the matter in the United States Supreme Court, and the Wabash is taking advantage of this situation."

He asked that the directors order the pending appeal in the Supreme Court to be dismissed. The directors met in New York last Thursday, and President Taussig, after the meeting, said there was no statement to be made as to the Mayor's communication.

A suggstion of a boycott by St. Louis business men against the Wabash was made in the Mayor's letter.

RADIO AIDS IN SEARCH FOR TWO MISSING GIRLS

Mary Haydon and Florence Rottweiler, Who Left Homes Wednesday, Went to Indiana.

"We are going to some small town to work," was the written message left by two 15-year-old girls who disappeared from their homes Wednesday. They have not been heard from since and policewomen are enlisting the aid of the telegraph and radio in an effort to find them for their worried parents.

The girls are Mary Haydon, daughter of Mrs. Grace Haydon of 5364A Geraldine avenue, and her downstairs chum, Florence Rottweiler, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Rottweiler, 5364 Geraldine avenue.

The Rev. D. C. Boyd, general secretary of the Missouri Sunday School Council of Religious Organizations, who is interested in the search for the girls, has learned they took a train for the South the night they disappeared. Information from the train crew was to the effect the girls left the train at New Albany, Ind. They posed as sisters and gave their names as "Brooks."

Policewomen were told the girls' disappeared after the Rottweiler girl learned for the first time she was an adopted daughter.

BOY SAYS CITY EMPLOYE BEAT HIM WITH BOARD

Joseph Stumpf, 14, Who Escaped With Four Companions, Makes Statement to Judge Hartmann.

"KICKED US IN RIBS WITH HIS SHOES ON"

Court Announces Lad Will Testify at Hearing Being Conducted by Board of Children's Guardians.

Joseph Stumpf's statement of his mistreatment at Bellefontaine Farms, which he said prompted him and four other boys to run away last Monday, has been presented to Circuit Judge Hartmann in charge of the Juvenile Court, at whose request the Board of Children's Guardians is now conducting an investigation of complaints made to the Judge.

Stumpf, who is 14 years old was arrested last Tuesday when he was found at Twentieth street and East Grand boulevard with his pockets filled with chewing gum, candy and cigarettes. He told police how he and his companions had robbed a confectionery at 6000 North Broadway the night before.

John Koteck, 11 years odl, one of his companions, was shot by the proprietor of the confectionery. Physicians at city hospital announced yesterday that he is expected to recover. He received the greater part of the charge from a shotgun fired by Harvey Scammon, 40 years old, the storekeeper. Four lead slugs were removed from under the skin of Koteck's abdomen yesterday.

Tells of Being Beaten.

Stumpf, in his statement, said that he was beaten by a house father for breaking two windows when playing baseball. The house father, he said, held his head between his legs and beat him with a board.

"I was out at the farm 10½ months," the statements reads. "I got a beating for breaking windows. He (the house father) puts your head between his legs and he beat me with a board * * * about four or five inches wide and a quarter of an inch thick. He is a house father. As soon as he gets tired out, he lets you go. I got a beating when I was playing with our new football. It rolled down the hill and we went after it. He called us in and gave us a beating.

"He kicks you in the ribs, too. He kicked us with his shoes on—he don't care where he kicks you. He kicked that crippled kid out there, too.

"Hit Crippled Boy."

"If we do something——don't like, he hits you with his hand. While he is examining you, if you say something to another kid he don't like, like calling him 'saw bones,' he gets sore and he gets you in that room and smacks you up beside the face with his hand. He never did that to me, though. He hit that crippled kid once—that is the only one I saw.

"I ain't got no home. The Board of Children's Guardians takes care of me. I stole 75 cents from a lady, the foster-mother that I was staying with, and they sent me up there."

Judge Hartmann said that Stumpf will testify before the Board of Children's Guardians at a meeting to be held at 7 o'clock Monday night in the board's offices in Municipal Courts building.

Numerous Statements.

He said he received numerous statements of mistreatment, from boys and parents of boys confined at Bellefontaine Farms, since he first requested the investigation.

The board held a meeting Friday night, which lasted until 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Thirty witnesses were summoned and 23 were heard. Five were boys confined, or formerly confined, at the farms. One of them, it was learned, testified that he was made to chew scrubbing soap as punishment for smoking cigarettes.

Irvin Bettman, chairman of the board, said a report of the findings will be made public when the investigation is completed.

FOUR EXTRA PERFORMANCES OF 'THE MIRACLE' ANNOUNCED

Guarantors Exercise Option in Their Contract Due to Growing Patronage of Spectacle.

Four additional performances of "The Miracle," three evening and one matinee, are assured with the announcement that the engagement will be extended from Jan. 20 to Saturday night, Jan. 23.

The St. Louis Miracle Committee had in its contract an option on the three additional days and has decided to exercise it. The reason given is a gratifying out-of-town attendance, together with an enlarging patronage in St. Louis. Tickets for the extra showings will be placed on sale Tuesday at the Coliseum and Arcade Building.

Chrysler "58" sped far away from all possible competition months ago in its own low-priced field, outselling everywhere, when it provided such striking performance features as 58 miles an hour, 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and a pick-up of 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds.

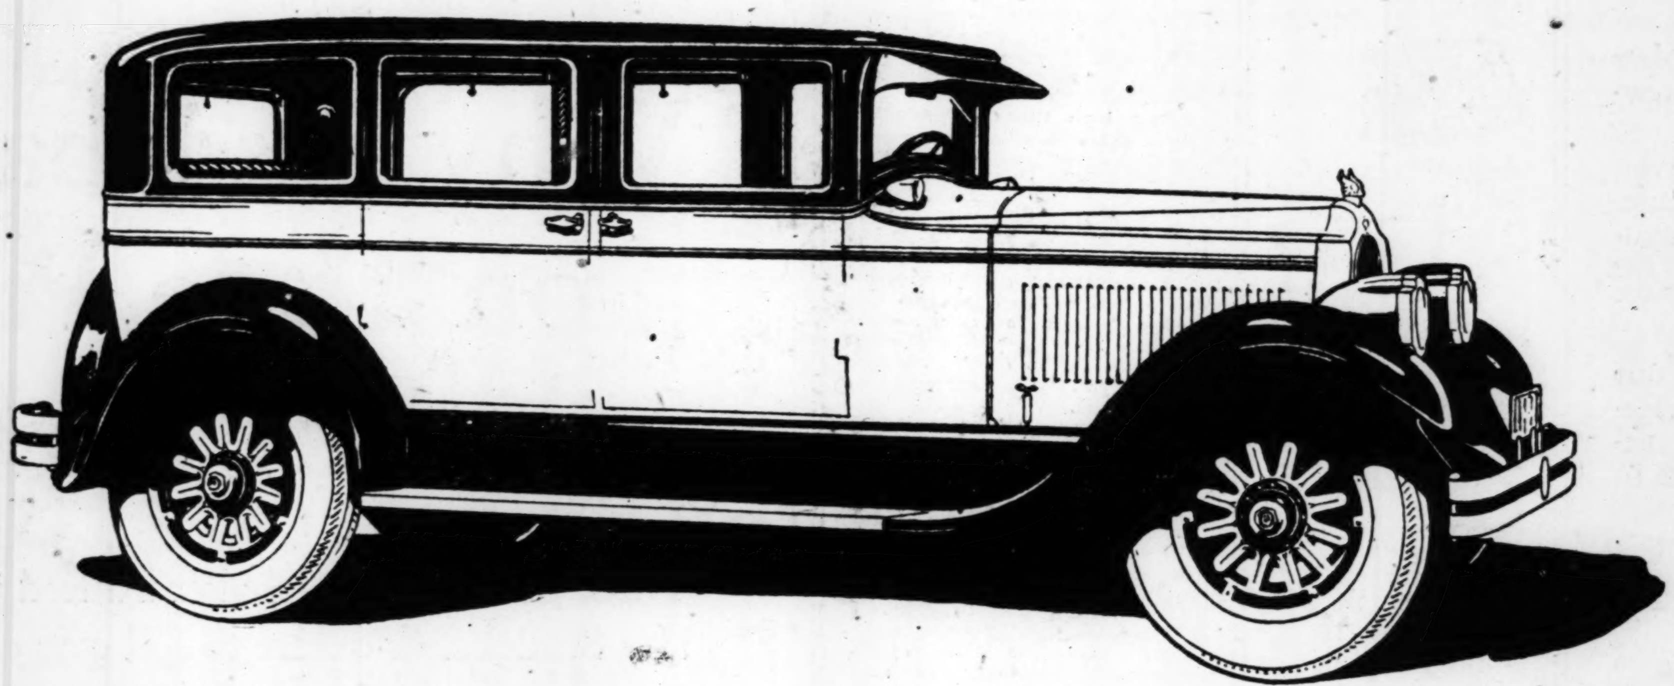
CHRYSLER IMPERIAL



AS FINE AS MONEY CAN BUILD—UTMOST LUXURY FOR 2 TO 7 PASSENGERS—92 HORSE-POWER—80 MILES PER HOUR

At long and rare intervals, men are able to produce objects of art or utility which they instinctively know to be superior to any that have preceded them.

They know instinctively, too, that the conquest of public opinion will be complete and instantaneous.

Such periods of high achievement are moments of public elation—but they are moments which move the creators to remain silent rather than to pile words of praise upon their own accomplishments.

Walter P. Chrysler and his associates are experiencing an hour of profound satisfaction in presenting to you the new Chrysler Imperial "80".

They are reluctant to stress their own satisfaction in this announcement by endeavoring to arouse your expectations in advance.

They have striven to create in the Chrysler Imperial "80" such prodigies of performance and such a strikingly new and unusual expression of motor car beauty that the car would literally proclaim itself at first glance.

They are confident that you will see in the Chrysler Imperial "80"—now shown here for the first time simultaneously with its appearance at the New York Automobile Show—one more mile-stone in the revolutionary progress of the motor car toward a higher sphere of efficiency and saving.

The new Chrysler Imperial "80" joins with the Chrysler "70" and "58" to carry Chrysler still farther along the high road of prestige and dominance

C. M. & ST. P. PAID TREBLE THE PRICE FORDYCE ASKED

St. Louisan Offered Securities for $1,000,000 Before Road Guaranteed Them at $3,000,000.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Former Gov. Nathan L. Miller continued today his cross-examination of Harry E. Byram, former president and now a receiver of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, in the Interstate Commerce Commission hearings regarding the failure of the road. He delved into the somewhat obsure financial aspects of the road's acquisition and operation of two subsidiary lines, the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern, and the Chicago, Milwaukee & Gary.

To a considerable extent his questions were parried by replies of "I don't know," or "I don't recall," but he developed the following facts:

That since the road had gone into a receivership Byram had negotiated the purchase of $15,000,000 worth of equipment and had bought for himself 1000 shares of stock.

That both the Gary and the Terre Haute lines had been operating with deficits, were in bad physical condition, and had been on the market for some time when they were acquired by the St. Paul.

Banks Had Securities.

That most of the unremunerative securities of the Terre Haute road were in the hands of two Chicago banks, in one of which J. Ogden Armour was a director, when the C., M. & St. P. undertook to guarantee their principal and interest.

That before taking over the Gary line Byram consulted Percy A. Rockefeller, who was not then a director of the C., M. & St. P., and who became a director of the Gary road.

That quotations on the Terre Haute road's securities has risen rapidly after the St. Paul went into receivership last March.

Byram seemed to falter in his bland manner and terse speech when questioned about the Gary railroad, a belt line around Chicago. He said that in 1921 he sought the advice of Percy A. Rockefeller regarding the purchase, and Rockefeller advised him to make it. He did not remember, he said, whether Rockefeller was a director of the St. Paul road at the time, or not.

Byram testified that at his request, Rockefeller became a director of the Gary road in January 1922, when the C. M. & St. P. acquired it.

Miller then produced the 1922 report of the Gary road to the Interstate Commerce Commission listing Rockefeller as a director since March, 1921.

"He was not on the board before we took the road, no matter what that report says," the witness insisted.

Byram explained that in taking over the Gary, the C. M. & St. P. guaranteed principal and interest on about $3,000,000 in bonds and received $2,700,000 more in bonds representing the estimated cost of joining the open ends of the road.

Sam Fordyce Mentioned.

"Didn't you know that the Gary line had been kicking around the same securities with an offer to take $1,000,000 for them?" asked Miller.

"No."

"Would you be surprised to know that Sam Fordyce (a St. Louis lawyer and railroad man) was in New York and that he offered the same securities to Mr. Rockefeller for $1,000,000?"

"Yes."

Byram once again defended the purchase of the Gary line as advantageous to the C. M. & St. P.

In the morning session Byram admitted that the decision of the board of directors to throw the C. M. & St. P. into receivership, announced last March 17, had in reality been tentatively reached about three weeks earlier.

DR. R. A. MILLIKAN, NOBEL PRIZE WINNER, SPEAKS HERE

Gives Illustrated Lecture at Washington University on the Electronic Movement.

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted physicist, spoke on electronic movement and colloid chemistry last night at Washington University medical auditorium. His talk, illustrated by some lantern-projected diagrams and charts, was in the nature of a technical classroom discussion.

Dr. Millikan, a former professor of physics in the University of Chicago, is director of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics, Pasadena, Cal. He received the Nobel prize in physics in 1923, for isolating and measuring the ultimate electrical unit, the electron.

Telling of the detaching of electrons from atoms, he spoke of the new combining power, and the resultant formation of new substances, as having a bearing on therapeutics, and on oil production, but did not develop the practical or commercial phase of his demonstration. He spoke of electronic forces with a penetrating radiation exceeding that of the X-ray.

TWO MEN PLANNING ROBBERY OF STORE CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

Prisoners Admit Theft of Machine and Scheme to Hold Up a Grocery.

Two young men, who stopped at the Kroger store at 4878 Branconier place, in a stolen automobile last night were chased several blocks by two detectives, who happened to pass, and were captured after several shots were fired.

The prisoners confessed, police say, that they were about to rob the store. They are Paul Silvey, 18 years old, and Charles Kimes, 27, both known to the police, having been arrested about 15 times suspected of crimes.

Detective Sergt. Robert Stuart and Detective Joseph Wren, said they were in a department machine, at 8:30 p. m., when they recognized the two men. They were pursued about two blocks and captured in a vacant lot. Kimes threw away a loaded revolver which was recovered, said the detectives.

At Deer Street Police Station, it is stated, they admitted stealing the machine on Delmar boulevard just west of Grand, at about 7 o'clock, and planned to rob the Kroger store. The machine, a Ford coupe, proved to be the property of Elmer H. Grimm of 6639 University drive.

Why Studebaker Rates on Time Purchases are Lowest

Three years ago Studebaker utilized its vast resources to enable any Studebaker dealer to sell cars on fair and liberal rates to those who buy out of income

And today no car in the world offers lower rates to the time purchaser than Studebaker

Financing rates which most competitive cars cannot approach are made possible by these 5 factors:

1 Stability of Studebaker with one hundred million dollars of net assets, no bonded debt and no bank loans—assurance that no Studebaker will ever become an orphan.

2 Depreciation cut to a minimum by Studebaker's "No-Yearly-Models" policy.

3 Intrinsic worth of the Unit-Built Studebakers which makes them stay sold.

4 One-Profit prices which mean that the purchaser has an equity so substantial that he will not sacrifice it.

5 Re-sale value maintained by the popularity of Certified Studebakers sold under the famous Studebaker Dealers' Pledge on Used Car Sales.

THESE five factors constitute the basis on which banks of the United States generally provide credit at lowest rates for the buyers of Studebaker cars.

This low-cost credit is placed at your disposal through the Industrial Acceptance Corporation, which is engaged exclusively in financing the sale of cars, new and used, through Studebaker dealers.

Before you buy any car out of income (whether it is in the field of the Standard Six Coach at $1195 or the Big Six Sedan at $2245), find out exactly how much of your total payment is for the car itself, and how much for interest, insurance, brokerage, etc.

Then get the corresponding Studebaker figures and ask yourself why you should pay out money for the sheer blue sky of excess financing rates.

All-in Every Evening? Bewa of Chronic Fatigu

Thousands of men and women who come home exhausted, nervous and irritable every evening are really victims of—chronic fatigue.

Chronic fatigue is an unnatural tiredness—usually due to lack of sufficient organic iron in the blood. To conquer it you must restore this iron to your blood. For this purpose nothing equals organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like that in spinach and lentils. It will not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach like old-fashioned mineral iron medicines.

TOO TIRED to walk upstairs

Take Nuxated Iron for just 2 weeks and notice how much stronger and better you feel. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.

NEW HOOK WORM TREATMENT

Specific Developed by Federal Veterinarians.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—A new treatment for hook worm in animals which it is hoped soon will be developed to a point of efficiency for human beings has been discovered here by Drs. Maurice C. Hall and Jacob E. Schillinger, veterinarians of the Department of Agriculture.

Tetrachlorethylene is the name of the drug, and its discovery resulted from long experimentation by the two men in the work of eradicating parasitic worms. Experiments, it is claimed, were first made with fox, dogs and monkeys with good reaction, and finally the two men underwent tests. It was explained at the department today that with the usual caution, the medical profession had not yet unqualifiedly indorsed the new remedy, but its sponsors hope to establish it as a standard specific.

U. S. TO FILE SUIT AGAINST LINER THAT SANK SUBMARINE

City of Rome Had Inefficient Lookout and Failed to Give S-51 Proper Aid, Navy Reports.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The report of the Naval Court of Inquiry into the sinking, Sept. 25, of the submarine S-51, off Block Island, by the steamer City of Rome of the Savannah line, was turned over to the Department of Justice by Secretary Wilbur today for legal action.

The court found that the submarine was rammed and sunk by the steamer, with the loss of 33 officers and men, on a clear, moonlight night, under circumstances which required the steamer to "keep out of the way." Its findings of fact were made public by the Navy Department tonight, but its recommendations were withheld because of the reference of the entire case to the Department of Justice.

It is understood either criminal or civil actions, or both, are contemplated against the Ocean Steamship Co. of Savannah, Ga., owner of the City of Rome, and officers of the steamer.

The naval report declared the S-51 was sunk at 10:24 o'clock at night, after its white light had been visible to and obesrved by the City of Rome from a disance of five or six miles. The steamer, it was added, failed to provide an adequate lookout.

The S-51 sank a minute after the collision, the report stated, while the City of Rome put out only one lifeboat, which picked up three survivors. The steamer's searchlight was said to have been out of commission and she proceeded to Boston without marking the spot and sending any message.

GOVERNOR'S ANNUAL RECEPTION COLORFUL

With Executive Mansion Pronounced Unsafe, Event Is Held in Capitol.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 9.—National Guard, regular Army and Navy officers, honorary Colonels of the Governor's personal staff, school cadets, State officials of major and minor importance, and a large majority of private citizens mingled in a colorful throng at the State Capitol tonight, at the Governor's annual public reception and military ball.

While termed by custom a military ball, the affair primarily was for the public, and Army and Navy representatives were in the minority in the gay crowd that danced until nearly midnight in the Capitol rotunda, and the Soldiers and Sailors' Memorial Hall, in the East nave of the building. The reception and ball were held in the Capitol this year for the first time.

Feared Mansion Would Collapse.

The custom of holding the annual military ball had its inception soon after the Civil War and for many years its scene was in the Executive Mansion. Engineers recently reported the supporting structure of the Mansion had weakened and advised against holding the ball there, fearing the crowding of guests on the grand stairway and in the third-floor ballroom would result in a disaster.

Although few in number, the 31 honorary Colonels of Gov. Baker's staff formed by far the most colorful group at the ball, with their dark blue uniforms, plenty of gold braid, bright buttons and gleaming sabers. These Colonels have no military functions.

Among the St. Louisans here were George Eigel of the Board of Election Commissioners; Arthur J. Freund of the Board of Police Commissioners; H. J. Talbot, A. H. Meyer and C. D. Hicks, all of whom are members of Baker's personal staff; and numerous St. Louis officers of the Missouri National Guard and Missouri Naval Militia.

Mayor Miller Declined to Attend.

Mayor Victor J. Miller of St. Louis was invited, but declined to attend.

Mayor Albert I. Beach of Kansas City, several members of the Kansas City Police and Elections Boards and other Republican politicians of Kansas City were among the visitors.

Gov. and Mrs. Baker gave a dinner and reception at the Mansion Friday night for members of his personal staff and their wives. In the afternoon Gov. and Mrs. Baker held a reception at the Mansion for officers of the Missouri National Guard, United States Army officers stationed in Missouri, officers of the Misouri Naval Militia, University of Missouri Cadets and State officials and employes. Several hundred visitors filed past the receiving line.

Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Phil A. Bennett of Springfield were to have been guests of Gov. and Mrs. Baker at the Mansion during the social events. They were unable to be here because of illness of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Public Reception in Evening.

The public reception began at 8 o'clock tonight in the large reception room of the Governor's suite in the Capitol. In the receiving line were Gov. and Mrs. Baker, Supreme Judges David E. Blair, W. W. Graves, Robert F. Walker, W. T. Ragland, John T. White, Frank E. Atwood and Robert W. Otto and their wives; Attorney-General N. T. Gentry, Secretary of State Charles U. Becker, State Treasurer C. E. Stephens, State Auditor L. D. Thompson and State Superintendent of Schools Charles A. Lee.

Mrs. Baker wore an imported gown of silver and garnet lace, embellished with garnets. Bands studded with garnets hung from the shoulders in the back, terminating in a deep fringe of beads. Silver brocade slippers with hose to match completed her costume. For ornaments she wore a garnet pendant on a gold chain about the neck and a bracelet of rose-buds on a silver band.

Wives of Colonels Assist.

Wives of the honorary Colonels assisted during the evening. Mrs. H. J. Talbot's gown was of geranium red crepe embroidered with pearls. Mrs. George Eigel of St. Louis wore orchid georgette, trimmed with crystal beads. Mrs. A. H. Meyer's gown was a metallic robe over gold cloth. Mrs. C. D. Hicks wore a flame colored silk velvet gown, with a silver flower at the shoulder.

The military ball began at 9 o'clock. Music was by the 128th Field Artillery Regiment Band, stationed at Clinton. National and State flags decorated the walls of the rotunda and an added martial touch was given by tattered war flags, small cannon and other war relics ranged about the walls of the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall.

Military Guests From St. Louis.

Among the National Guard officers attending from St. Louis were the following from the 35th Division Air Service: Major Charles R. Wassall, Captains William R. Robertson and William H. Leininger, First Lieutenants Paul Funkhauser, Russell A. Young, Eugene McMahan, Herbert Teichman, Lee J. Duncan, James W. Stultz, Leland H. Littlefield and Charles A. Lindbergh; Second Lieutenants George J. Stumpf, Frank T. Dunn, Clifton C. Hutchinson and Edwin H. Lauth.

Officers from the Seventh Battalion, Sixth Area, Ninth District, United States Naval Reserve, who also are officers of the Missouri Naval Militia, all of St. Louis, included: Commanders G. F. Schwartz and Gordon C. Hall, Lieutenant-Commanders W. H. McEwen Jr., and Walter P. Jost, Lieutenants W. H. Hennerichs, Harry LaMertha, Charles Labarge, Noel Chadwick, Sam Hallett and M. G. Eggeman and Ensign J. I. McKeown.

Among officers of the 128th Infantry, which has headquarters at St. Louis, were: Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence C. Kingsland, Majors James H. Moore and Thomas N. Toomey, Captains B. F. McGuire, Edward Burns, Ernest Groh, Arthur Groetsch, John H. Gerling, William Hoesch, Dorsey G. Meyers, Gail B. Mansfield, William F. Schweikert, Robert E. Chappell, Waldemar Christofferson and Elmer L. Hein.

CONFRONTED BY PROHIBITION AGENTS, MOONSHINER SWOONS

Edward Heitz, Father of Four Children, Youngest Two Days Old, Is Taken to Jail.

Edward Heitz swooned when he turned from the business of removing the top of a still he was operating yesterday in a barn at Heege and Fleeta streets, in St. Louis County, and encountered two Federal prohibition agents standing in the barn doorway. They were the same two who had arrested him last May for operating a still in his home at 225 Virginia avenue, in the county.

Cold water dashed in his face by the prohibition agents revived Heitz and he was taken to jail. He is married and the father of four children, the youngest two days old.

SETTLEMENT SOON OF J. W. THOMPSON SUIT IS INDICATED

Action Against Government Is for $800,000 Additional for Oil Tanker Seized in War.

CONVICTED FORMER OWNER NOW ILL

Basis of Litigation Is That He Had Offer of $1,500,000 for Craft He Sold for $700,000.

John W. Thompson, wealthy St. Louis contractor, whose conviction, two-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine in the Veterans' Bureau fraud conspiracy case have been affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, is suing the Government for $800,000, in the Court of Claims at Washington.

Dispatches indicate that an early termination of the suit, which has been pending for several years, is possible. Thompson is now ill in Florida, and as told recently, will resist removal to prison on the ground that imprisonment would endanger his life.

The suit pending in the Court of Claims is for additional payment for the oil tanker, Gut Heil, commandeered by the Government during the war. Thompson has received $700,000 from the Government for the ship, which cost $190,000 to build in 1888.

He contended in his petition that the tanker cost him $764,399.84 and that he had refused offers of $1,500,000.

The Gut Heil, a steel tanker with a dead-weight capacity of 4800 tons, was built in England in 1888 and was originally owned by the Deutsche-Amerikanische Petroleum Gesselschaft, of Hamburg. In April, 1913, when the vessel was being operated by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, it was sunk in the Mississippi River near Baton Rouge, La., as the result of a collision.

Tanker Became Derelict.

The oil company tried several times to raise the ship, but was unsuccessful, and the tanker became a derelict. The company gave the ship a book value of $35,000, according to a Government brief filed recently.

Feb. 18, 1917, or more than four years later, Thompson contracted with the Atlantic Towing Co., of New Jersey, to salvage the tanker. The towing company was to raise the vessel and repair it. Thompson and the company were to divide the profits of the sale, according to the Government brief.

The vessel was raised in December, 1917, by King & Witherspoon of New Jersey, a salvaging company which the towing company had engaged for the actual work. The Government brief says the towing company paid King & Witherspoon $83,044.29 for their work, this sum including a bonus of $50,000.

Thompson paid the Atlantic Towing Co. $428,000 on March 6, 1918, for the ship, and became the sole owner. The ship was taken to the navy yard, where, according to the Government petition, $140,000 was expended for repairs. Aug. 12, 1918, the vessel was commandeered by the Navy Department for Government use. The Navy Board of Appraisal set a price of $700,000 on the ship. On Dec. 20, 1918, Thompson accepted the $700,000 in full payment.

Suit for $800,000 Additional.

Jan. 22, 1919, he informed the Secretary of the Navy that he wished to return one-fourth of this amount to the Government so he could begin proceedings for additional payment. The Secretary informed him that no official had the authority to accept such a refund. In March 17, 1919, Thompson, through his attorney, former Gov. Joseph W. Folk, filed suit in the Court of Claims for the additional $800,000.

Since then, voluminous exhibits and depositions have been filed. In the meantime, Thompson was indicted with Forbes in the Veterans' Bureau scandal, and the claim case has been continued. Oct. 31, last, the Government sought to include the Forbes indictment with the claim records. This proposed action was disallowed by the court.

The Government has filed a brief contending that the vessel, being a derelict, was Government property, and that only a reasonable salvage claim should be paid; that it comes under the alien property act, and that an adequate price has already been paid.

Thompson was given until Dec. 31 to file a reply brief. This was not done, so a special court order will be necessary to permit him to do it. As yet, no date has been set for the actual trial. Randolph Laughlin of St. Louis is now his attorney in the case, former Gov. Folk having died.

Drastic Announcement

We have published nearly 1000 Little Blue Books at 5c, of which we've sold 100,000,000 copies in the past five years; the greatest book-selling achievement in all history. We could sell these books at the absurdly low price of 5c per copy because we ran our plant on the Ford idea of Mass Production. So far we have offered standard classics—great works of fiction, philosophy, poetry, etc. But we find that publishing only the best literature limits our market severely—comparatively few people want the best books. To maintain the 5c price on this gigantic series we must sell millions of books. This will necessitate withdrawing classical and literary titles after February 28, 1926, to enable us to publish more popular books. Those who like the present selection of Little Blue Books must order AT ONCE—better order 100 or 200 copies or more—for, after February 28, 1926, only a few hundred of the more literary titles will be retained. This is your FINAL CHANCE to get GREAT LITTLE BLUE BOOKS AT 5c. GRAB IT!

Flyers Take Off and Land in Snow.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Jan. 9.—Heavy snowfall has afforded McCook Field flyers a chance they had been waiting for—landing and taking off with a plane equipped with skiis. The flyers determined it required a longer take-off with skiis than when wheels were used and that the plane stopped quicker.

Dangerous Cough —How to End it

To quickly end a dangerous cough there is a very simple treatment which gives almost instant relief and often breaks the cough entirely in 24 hours.

This treatment is based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the worst cough usually disappears quickly.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

BUST OF DR. SNIDER UNVEILED AT DINNER

Friends Say St. Louis Sage Will Be Better Known After 1000 Years.

A bust of the late Dr. Denton J. Snider, presented by his widow, was unveiled at a dinner last night at the Gatesworth Hotel, and men representing four states and divergent points of view joined in honoring the St. Louis sage then, and yesterday afternoon at Vandervoort's Music Hall, in celebration of his eighty-fifth birthday.

Comparatively few disciples met at the Music Hall in 1921 to celebrate the philosopher's eightieth birthday. Yesterday's meeting drew nearly 200, and speakers intimated that this might be significant of the beginning, now that he is dead, of a wide recognition of the "writer of books" and teacher of men, who led in his lifetime small but earnest groups in many communities. "He will be better known 1000 years from now than he is today," was one estimate.

A friend of Dean Snider for 60 years, D. H. Harris, told of the writer's "studio"—a bottle of ink, a penholder and steel pen, and two chairs, one on top of the other, to form the desk at which he stood to write more than 50 volumes on profound subjects.

"Reporter of Reality."

The Rev. Ivan Lee Holt read an estimate by the late Rev. James W. Lee of Dr. Snider as "a reporter of the nature of reality," who, by virtue of "the philosophical and psychological wealth" of his gifts to the world was "the most remarkable man on this planet."

Dr. Otto Heller of Washington University, famous student of thought and literature, remarked, "We are always ready to classify and pigeon-hole in categories. One method of such classification of human beings is to divide them into 'bromides' and 'sulphides.'

Dr. Snider was to the last degree removed from anything bromidic, and anyone would hesitate to describe him as at all sulphurous or sulphidic. He was decidedly ozonic."

He told of his two meetings with Dr. Snider. 'He called me up one evening and asked to see me on business which he described as of great importance to himself. The next evening we spent in conversation—if you can use that term in connection with a lecture to an audience of one person, in which the actors change part every half-hour or so. He did not state what the 'business' was, and I was altogether too glad he had come at all to quiz him about it.

Meets Dr. Snider Again.

"The only other time we met we were walking in opposite directions somewhere west of Vandeventer. I turned and walked with him, because I was glad of the opportunity and also to allow him to broach the subject which he had mentioned in that first telephone call. I accommodated my somewhat puny gait to his super-pedestrianism while we tramped for miles and miles. The tour ended at the library building on Locust near Broadway.

"Never once did he mention that 'business.' Heaven only knows what it was, now that he is gone to his reward. As probably the good Lord is also much more of an idealist than a business man, he is not likely to be annoyed with questions about it there.

Ignored Worldly Affairs.

"I know of no other man who has let worldly affairs interfere less with the chief concerns of his soul—the study and interpretation of the greatest spirits of humanity and the formulation of a comprehensive system of psychology to help other men, as he had helped himself, to square themselves up with the passing show in the light of a universal purpose."

The Rev. M. I. Strich, S. J., of St. Louis University, said that he had found the commentaries of Dean Snider the best turned out by the world's thinkers on Dante, Homer, Goethe and Shakspeare.

Louis J. Block of Chicago, who is revising in manuscript the only complete translation into English of Hegel's "Larger Logic," said that Dean Snider's books were his lasting monument, and "the kind of a memorial he ought to have is for his teachings to become a part of ourselves."

BERLIN AND BRIDE HIDE BEHIND LOCKED DOOR OF LINER SUITE

Sail on the Leviathan After Becoming Voluntary Prisoners to Escape Reporters.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—After five days of vain attempts to evade persistent groups of newspaper reporters and photographers, Irving Berlin, composer, and his society bride, the former Miss Ellin Mackay, tonight were bound for Europe on the Leviathan.

Seeking refuge from the wide publicity that attended their marriage on Monday, they locked themselves in their palatial suite shortly after midnight, this morning. They refused to make any statement.

About 20 friends visited them aboard ship early this morning, leaving at 4 o'clock.

PURCHASERS TO RENT OUT MURRAY CARLETON RESIDENCE

The Murray Carleton residence at 4515 Lindell boulevard, which was sold by Mrs. Carleton for $45,000 last week, will be rented out until the purchasers complete plans for a large apartment building on the site. The purchaser was represented by the M. H Rodemeyer Real Estate Co.

Mrs. Carleton gave up the home because of the grave illness of her husband, who has been at St. Luke's Hospital for six months, suffering from cancer. His condition is such that his friends say he likely never will be able to appear for trial under the fraud indictments growing out of the $3,000,000 failure of the Ferguson-McKinney Manufacturing Co., which he controlled. Mrs. Carleton will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Louis Wynne Martin of 1 Wydown Terrace.

REPRESENTATIVE
Wanted, Henry Card & Co. of Fredonia, N. Y., the largest manufacturers of food products in their line in the world, now in their 30th year, will open a St. Louis office and will place some honest, conservative man who desires to remain permanently in St. Louis in charge. Experience in our line is not essential, but what we desire is a man to reflect the particular individuality of a high-class organization such as ours. You will be taught to take charge of a small unit of salesmen to start, who will operate from your office, which will control St. Louis districts and Southern Illinois. You can communicate with other branch managers of ours who have operated three or four years and are making $225 to $250 weekly in commissions. In view of the fact that this is the first time we have ever used a newspaper as a medium to get in communication with some progressive American man, and as this want ad might fail to reflect the great opportunity it offers, due to the requirement that you must have about $1000 in cash as a binder on initial shipments (which is credited back to you) as they roll to your territory. No interviews will be granted unless you have first gone to your bank or any bank in St. Louis and checked up our reliability, and Dun or Bradstreet commercial rating (R. G. Dun rates us $200,000 to $300,000 highest credit), which has been first credit for the past 29 years. Be sure and give your telephone number. Box O-2, Post-Dispatch.

GAINS OUTNUMBER LOSSES FOR WEEK IN LOCAL STOCKS

Many Other Securities Unchanged From Previous Week—Some Wide Price Ranges Mark Trading.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Jan. 9.—The week closed on the local market with securities showing net gains for the six days slightly outnumbering those with declines for the period in question. Then, too, nearly half as many more securities as reflected advances were unchanged at the close of the week.

There were several fairly wide upward price ranges during the week. Sheffield Steel rose more than 2 points on turnover of over 1200 shares. Huttig common ranged between 35½ and 40 on transactions aggregating nearly 1900 shares, but finished at 38 for only fractional net gain. The two most active issues during the week were Rice-Stix common and Stix, Baer & Fuller, both of which closed the week on same basis as previous week.

The widest individual range as shown by Johnson-Stephens-Shinkle, which closed 13 points higher. Skouras rose over 6 points. Business was not heavy, however, in either issues.

UTILITIES PROMINENT IN WEEKS' TRADE ON CURB

NE WYORK, Jan. 9.—Speculative sentiment, as expressed in the dealings on the Curb Exchange today, continued in a confident mood. There was pronounced strength in some particular issues, especially in the public utility division, in which early gains extending from 1 to 6 points were recorded, but the general list was content to move narrowly around the prices reached on Friday's rally. The widest movement occurred in Lehigh Valley Coal, which improved 6 points on a few transactions. American Light was up 5 points and Lehigh Power moved up 6¾ points.

Buying orders in the last hour were in large volume, necessitating the announcement that ticker reports were behind the market. This sudden outburst of activity made its appearance in almost all groups and prices closed at materially higher figures.

Public Utilities constituted the most important part of the curb market all through the week, many stocks being accumulated by banking interests concerned in this industry in connection with arrangements for carrying through plans for closer relations, which, in most cases, took the shape of absorption and consolidation. This demand was effective in exhausting offerings within a long range from recently prevailing prices, and carried many of those stocks up to new high levels.

Movements in industrial issues were irregular. Petroleum stocks were traded on a large scale, but many lost gains that were made in the first few days. Standard Oil of Indiana advanced from 67 to above 70, but most of this gain was wiped out. The bullish activities in the various groups of stocks were checked by selling, following the advance in the Federal Reserve discount rate on Thursday and during the greater part of Friday's trading, many of the leading stocks were in supply in such amounts as to force them to make new low levels for the week.

HIGHER PRICES PREVAIL IN THE COTTON MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—An opening advance in today's cotton market was followed by reactions. March contracts selling off from 20.08c to 19.86c and closing at that figure. The final tone was irregular, with prices net unchanged to 18 points lower, except December, which was 4 points higher.

The opening advance of 3 to 9 points was in response to continued steadiness in Liverpool, reiterated reports of an improving demand for cotton goods both in Manchester and domestic markets, further covering and some foreign trade buying of late deliveries. January sold up to 20.33c and July to 19.04c, net advances of about 7 to 12 points after the call, but those prices evidently attracted considerable realizing, with possibly some selling for a reaction, following recent advances. January broke about 20 points from the best, the last sale of that position being at 20.13c, or about 17 points above the price of the March.

Deliveries can be made on January contracts here up to the end of the month, but trading in the position ended at midday, so far as the local futures market was concerned.

The easier turn in near months, due to liquidation, New Orleans, local and spot house selling, pulled the price of July down to 18.92c, or back to Friday's closing quotation, and the close was at the lowest figures of the day.

Private cables said the steadiness in Liverpool was due to foreign buying and trade calling, and also reported a fair spot demand from spinners and exporters and a large inquiry for cloth, with an improved turnover in yards.

Reports from domestic goods markets told of a better business, chiefly for January, February and March deliveries, and there was probably some buying in the futures market here in early trading on belief that this might foreshadow another buying movement in the Southern spot market.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The feature of the foreign exchange in the first week of the new year was the entire absence of any open government intervention. Nearly all movements were due either to ordinary commercial matters or to special financial arrangements, which, however, did not constitute a new element, as those arranged during the week were a continuation of expiring contracts of a year ago. Sterling moved within a narrow range, hardly fluctuating over ½ of a cent all through the week. It is holding within a cent of its high price of the year, established when payment were resumed by England. The market for sterling was not influenced by the increase in the discount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank here, but it was generally understood that the action was withheld until after the London financial position was well fortified by increased gold reserves.

"French exchange showed pronounced improvement, moving up 15 points close to 3.90 for checks on Paris against 3.74 a week ago. It reacted from its high level yesterday. Creation of the new $40,000,000 credit by Denmark, announced Thursday, was responded to with a vigorous advance in Danish exchange, crown checks moving up from 24.68 to 24.90. This loan was virtually an extension of the one made by Denmark a year ago. Exchange on Norway followed with an advance of 20 points from its low of the week.

"Italian exchange held close to 4.04 for lira cables. Belgian was firmly held around 4.54 for cables. The change in the Greek Government was followed by improvement in drachmas, which moved up from 1.28 to 1.37.

"Far Eastern exchanges were firm during the week and made moderate gains, a feature being the increased demand for exchange on Japan, yen checks rising again to 43.75. Canadian exchange made a new low for the movement early in the week at 99.80. Brazilian exchange was firmly held at its advance to above 14.80, and there was a display of strength yesterday in exchange on Uruguay in connection with the new financing.

Bond Market Review

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—With uneasiness over a higher bank rate tempered by the removal of the uncertainty regarding a change and by continued plentiful supplies of money, the bond market today displayed a steadier tone. Selling pressure against Liberty bonds and other investment issues relieved, recoveries in these groups continued to make good headway.

Selective buying of railroad obligations was resumed, although the general demand for these issues was by no means brisk. Chicago and Western Indiana 5½s, Illinois Central refunding 4s, St. Paul convertible 4½s, Hudson & Manhattan income 5s and Baltimore & Ohio 6s were higher on a small turnover.

Irregularities cropped out in the industrial list, where scattered selling was inspired more by stock market or special developments rather than general conditions. Pan-American Petroleum 6s broke more than a point and Sinclair Oil 6s were heavy in the face of an advance in Skelly Oil 6½s. Republic Steel 5½s and Central Steel 8s were higher.

The Liberty bond group again presented a spot appearance. Selling of the fourth 4¼s was absorbed with only a fractional change in price while the second 4s and the United States Treasury 4s worked higher. A fairly good demand for foreign issues embraced South American, Japanese and Austrian bonds.

Personal and Business Notes

Robert L. Hedges Jr. and Presley W. Edwards have been admitted to general partnership in the firm of A. G. Edwards & Sons, according to an announcement. A. Arthur Stickney and R. J. Denyven have retired from the firm.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The raw sugar market was unchanged today at 4.11c, duty paid. No sales were reported. Trading in raw sugar futures was light, but the undertone was steady. COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	26,463	22,165	24,464
Hogs	82,242	71,373	109,975
Sheep	8,729	12,269	5,293
Horses and mules	2,256	1,513	3,400
Totals	119,630	107,320	143,132

Livestock prices ruled steady to higher at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week. Combined receipts were fair at approximately 119,630 head. The most pronounced improvement was in cattle, trade most of the period. An average advance of 25 cents was recorded in beef steers, in which was strong and active throughout cows and bulls, and gains of 25 to 50 cents or more were shown in light steers and heifers. Stocker and feeder cattle sold on a strong market and Southern canner yearlings moved up 25 cents. Choice veal calves alone registered lower, the closing top at $13.50 comparing with $14 the previous week. Beef steers, grading medium to fair, bulked at $8.25 to $10 per cwt., and some of the best consignments reached $11 and $11.25. Light yearling steers and heifers also scored upward to $11, while the bulk of sales was $5 to $8.

Beef cows cleared in a popular spread of $5 to $6 late. Cutters closed at $4 to $4.50 and canners at $3.50 to $4. Bologna bulls moved up to a $4.75 to $6 basis and weighty beef animals made $5.50 to $6.50, followed by canner types around $3.75 and $4. Stocker and feeder steers cleared mainly at $5.25 to $8, and a few odd lots reached higher. Quotations for stock cows, heifers and bulls were very little changed. The top veal calves ranged up to $14.50 the first half of the week, compared with $13.50 at the close. Southern canner yearlings finished at $4 to $5, according to weight and quality.

Hog Prices Mixed.

Hog prices showed an upward tendency throughout the greater part of the week, but sharp breaks during the closing sessions put the market considerably lower than this week's best time and back to a basis slightly under the previous week's close on light hogs and somewhat better on the heavy grades. Receipts locally showed an increase over the previous week's run, but were lighter than a year ago. The 11-market total was also heavier than last week, but showed a sharp drop of 238,530 from the corresponding period a year ago. Quality has been exceptionally good the past week with butcher hogs predominating in numbers by a large majority. Closing sales for the week show steady to 25c higher values in the weightiest kinds from 250 pounds and up, this class selling at $11.75 to $12, against $11.50 to $12 a week ago today. The medium weight kinds are steady to 15c lower, 200 to 240 pound averages at $12 to $12.15 largely.

Light hogs from 160 to 190 lbs. are 15 to 25 cents lower, sales today at $12.1 to $12.40 largely, a top of $12.75 registered during an early morning flash. Top on light hogs at one time during the week reached $12.90. Pigs, while of moderate numbers during the week's initial sessions, dropped off sharply during later days and a very meager supply of this class was received during the week. Pigs show about the same decline as the light hogs, although some sales look about steady. Good kinds sold up to $12.90 during the middle of the week but dropped back to $12.50 in the closing session. Light and Southern sold from $11 to $12 when of fair quality with some of the plainest kinds downward to $9.50. Packer sows, after an advance that put light kinds up to $10.60, dropped back to a $10.35 top, which figure 25 to 50 cents higher than a week ago. Stags showed little change [illegible]

Sheep Receipts Smaller.

[illegible] an increase over both last week and the same period a year ago. This increase was of generous proportions compared with last year. The decrease in local receipts was more marked in the native lamb division than elsewhere. Western lambs making up a large part of the supply. Quality graded good in practically all cases, some offerings, however, carrying too much weight to suit buyers. Colorado furnished the bigger part of the Western lambs arriving, 1982 head of this class being sold this week. This consignment brought the packer top of $15.85, butchers, however, paying up to $16 for a few odd head during the middle of the six-day period. Medium to good Westerns and good native lambs sold from $15.50 to $15.75 with some heavy Western lambs as low as $15.35 in the closing session. Off quality natives sold as low as $15.25. These prices compared with the previous week's close figure about steady, some sales of heavy lambs, however, 50c lower than this week's best time. Culls remained unchanged, selling around $11 mainly although some were good enough to bring $12. Skips ranged from $5 to $9. Yearlings were scarce and most offerings in this line were comprised of odd lots. Prices showed no radical change. Mutton sheep, too, maintained a steady basis, spots showing a stronger trend. Good mutton ewes of suitable weight brought $8.50 to killers with yearling ewes ranging from $8.75 to $9.50. Medium and heavy kinds cleared at $6 to $7.50. Good bucks brought $5 principally with choppers at $3 to $5. Canners sold around $2 to $3 mostly with some plain kinds as low as $1.

Good to choice lambs quotable at $14.75 to $15.75; medium to good, $13.75 to $14.75; plain to medium, $12.75 to $13.75; cull and common, $10 to $12.50; skips, $5 to $9.00. Good to choice yearlings, $12.25 to $13.25; medium to good, $11.25 to $12.25; plain to medium, $10.25 to $11.25. Culls, $8 to $10; good to choice mutton ewes, $7.50 to $8.50; medium to good, $6.50 to $7.50; plain to medium, $5.50 to $6.50. Choppers and bucks, $3 to $5; canners, $1 to $3. Fat goats, $3 to $3.50; thin and common goats, $1 to $2.50; kids, $5 to $7.50.

Horses and Mules.

The week's horse and mule receipts were of fair volume at approximately 2256 head, and mules, like the previous week, dominated the offering. Both markets ruled strong and active, and mules in some instances scored a rise of $10 per head. Among the classes receiving good call were Southern horses, good chunks, work horses, sound young farm mares, fat cotton mules, medium-priced mules and harnessed marked mules with good hair. A good clearance was made of the week's run.

WHEAT MARKET NERVOUS CORN HIGHER AT CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The wheat market was extremely nervous today but prices in later trading were lower. At the close prices were 1⅝ to 2⅝ cents lower for the day and ½ to 1½ cents lower for the week. New May, $1.77⅛@1.77½; old, $1.75⅝; July, $1.62@1.62½; September, $1.44.

The start was firmer on local buying inspired by the estimates of the Winnipeg Free Press showing the Western Canadian crop at 388,000,000 bushels or less than the last Government estimate and compared with 425,000,000 the Northwest Grain Dealers' estimate. After the bulge there was heavy selling for Eastern account. In the last hour local professionals attempted to start a rally because of the stronger cash wheat situation, hard wheat premiums being up 1 to 2 cents on urgent buying by shippers and millers. Shipping sales were 20,000 bushels. The Seaboard reported a better export demand with sales of 200,000 bushels of Manitobas and durums. Broomhall's Australia agents estimate the wheat crop there at 110,000,000 bushels, leaving 60,000,000 for export.

Corn again showed independent strength and closing prices were 1⅛ to ⅝ cents higher for the day and 2¼ to 2⅝ cents higher for the week. May, 88¾c; July, 90½@90⅝c; September, 91⅝c. There was good buying credited to outside interests who have been attracted to the market by recent proposals to aid the farmer. Shipping sales were only 19,000 bushels and shippers reported buying back 15,000 bushels from New England. Country sold a few cars to arrive on overnight bids.

Oats were quiet and prices covered a narrow range. The close was unchanged to ⅛c lower, but 1¼c higher for the week. Shipping sales were again moderate at 50,000.

A sharp break in hogs and the forecast for heavy hog receipts next week led to selling of provisions. Lard closed 12½c to 15c lower, ribs, 7½c higher, bellies 10c lower.

VEGETABLE MARKET

Unfilled Steel Orders Increase 451,584 Tons.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation on Dec. 31, made public today, totaled [illegible] tons, an increase of 451,584 tons compared with the end of the preceding month.

The increase in tonnage was much larger than had been expected by the financial district, in view of the seasonal slackening of business and the holiday shutdowns. Mill operation, however, was maintained at a high rate all through December. The most optimistic estimates of the December increase were 425,000 tons compared with the actual gain of 427,[illegible] tons for November.

The improvement brought the total unfilled orders on the corporation's books at the end of 1925 to a figure unequaled since last February, and compared with 4,816,676 tons at the close of 1924.

MONEY RATE UP WITHOUT STOCK SHOCK

Irregular Movement on New York Exchange Follows Advance in Rediscount to 4 Per Cent.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"No event of the year to date has been so interesting to the financial world as the increase this week in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Early last autumn market prophets began to predict an early switch from the prevailing 3½ per cent rate here, but were given no surprise when, two months ago today, the Boston institution started the movement for higher rates by adoption of a 4 per cent discount level. Action by the New York bank had been expected weekly until the turn of the year, when, because of the ease in money conditions, experts began to think that the lower rate might be allowed to stand, perhaps, until February. Apparently the authorities are concerned with something more than the statistical position of the bank itself in the determination of its policies. Otherwise it would be difficult to explain why they should choose a week to make the change when reserves rose $84,000,000, when rediscounts fell $112,000,000 and when the reserve ratio jumped from 73¾ to 80¼. Perhaps the bank picked the present week as the most opportune time, all things considered, to do what it might have done weeks ago except for special reasons.

Check on Speculation.

"Stabilization of the gold movement has removed fears on the part of the authorities, presumably, that an increase in the New York rate might embarrass Great Britain by tending to stimulate shipments of the metal. Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has been in New York this week and, it is reasonable to suppose, has assured the bank here that a shift in the rate may now be undertaken safely. Adoption of the higher rate at this time should go a long way in checking certain disturbing [illegible]

Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has been in New York this week and, it is reasonable to suppose, has assured the bank here that a shift in the rate may now be undertaken safely. Adoption of the higher rate at this time should go a long way in checking certain disturbing tendencies toward excessive speculation in securities and real estate. It is the season of year when funds in large amount flow to this center and, since business needs at the moment cannot absorb all of this money, temptations to misuse the surplus might have become difficult to resist. At least the change to a 4 per cent rate should lessen the proportion of funds released for speculative purposes and thus help to prolong the period of sound conditions without bringing on inflation. Certainly it is a fact that loans for use in the stock market over the last year have increased enormously and there is a limit to which such a movement may continue without courting dangers of a serious nature.

Indecision Indicated.

"Interestingly enough, the stock market appears just a bit undecided how to take the change. On Friday morning prices fell from one to three points at the opening, but strength soon developed, then weakness and then strength again, so that the net gains and losses for the session were small. Essentially these quick reversals in trend reflect differences of opinion between persons who think the market is ready for reaction on the theory that money is tightening and those who look upon a firming in money rates as only another sign of increased business activity. To date the constructive forces in the market appear to have somewhat the better of things, but that the technical position of a market would be materially improved by short selling at this stage must be apparent. However bright may be the prospects of business in the future, it does not follow that stocks can rise indefinitely without reaching a point from which their fall would be ruinous to those optimists who have predicted rightly the upturn in business, but have not known how to measure the reasonable distance that stocks might be expected to advance in discounting such improvement.

Week-End Markets Steady.

"Traders who sold stocks for a decline after announcement of the rise in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate found little encouragement in the action of today's short session of the stock market. Prices were generally steady and some stocks pushed forward to new high records for the movement. Prospects of continued easy money continues, generally anticipated in banking circles, appeared to be a factor in stimulating buying orders. Business in the bond market was in relatively small volume and fluctuations were confined within narrow limits. Prices ruled steady, however, investment rails and industrials meeting ready support. Utilities were in good favor, while foreign government issues were supported.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House banks showed a decrease in surplus of $17,263,730, making the deficit in reserves at the end of the week $29,213,340. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $[illegible]49,000. Unless the situation is corrected by a further influx of funds to New York in the coming week, a stiffening in rates for call loans may be expected before next Saturday.

Electric Stocks in Favor.

"Despite some signs of early unsettlement, a generally steady tone was maintained through the short session, prices pointing higher under the leadership of electric stocks. General Electric featured with a spurt of 5 points, making the advance for two days about 11 points. Strength reflected not only expectations of increased orders for public utility developments, but a split in the common stock on a 4-for-1 basis. Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Union Gas and Columbia Gas and Electric were other strong spots. Specialties, oils and several industrials were also in demand. Among these being Julius Kayser Silk, Pittsburg Terminal Coal, Foundation Co., Fidelity Phoenix Insurance, Continental Insurance and Associated Oil. Woolworth shares were again rather freely offered at concessions, while National Lead fell back.

Money Outlook Favorable.

"A constructive interpretation was placed on the decision of the New York Clearing House committee not to raise the interest rate on deposits, the belief being expressed that continued favorable credit conditions might be expected. Confidence was restored, moreover, by the action of the market in resisting selling pressure in response to the rise of the New York rediscount rate.

$1500 PAYROLL STOLEN IN HOLDUP OF FIRM'S OFFICE

Money Taken After Its Delivery at 3763 Forest Park Boulevard by an Armored Car.

ROBBERS ESCAPE IN WAITING AUTO

Two Armed Men Walk to Second Floor Where Cashier and Three Other Persons Are Working.

A few minutes after an armored car had delivered $1500 payroll money to the offices of the Lewis Invisible Stitch Machine Co., 3763 Forest Park boulevard, yesterday morning, two armed robbers held up the place and stole the cash. They escaped in an automobile.

The holdup men climbed stairs to the second floor where F. E. Wulfmeier, 5500 Hodiamont avenue, the company cashier, another man and two young women employes were working.

"Where is the money?" the first robber inquired.

"In the safe," Wulfmeier said.

"Go and get it," they ordered.

The others were commanded to "sit still and take it easy." One robber collected the cash while his companion guarded the stairway. Homer Davis, a mechanic employed by the concern, happened in from a rear room and was told to join the rest of the employes, powerless under threatening revolvers.

When the money was in hand the intruders fled down the stairway and leaped into a Dodge touring car which a confederate had just drawn up to the curb. They speeded west in Forest Park boulevard to Vandeventer avenue and then south. Cashier Wulfmeier tried to get the license number and submitted two guesses to the police for investigation. The robbers were described as young men, one wearing a knitted helmet cap which concealed most of his face.

NO FEAR OF GANG VENGEANCE IN BIRD CASE, JUROR ASSERTS

One or Two Members Who Voted Against Death Penalty Discusses Balloting.

Commenting upon a publication in the Globe-Democrat yesterday that "fear of gangster revenge probably saved Frank Bird, tried for the murder of Patrolman John H. Grogan, from hanging," Gerald E. Dolphy, 7127 Minnesota avenue, one of the jurors, stated that none of the jurors had any fear along that line and that their balloting was not in the least influenced by such a thought.

"I was one of the two jurors who voted for a life sentence at the very outset," Dolphy declared, "and I did not have any fear of gangster revenge. No juror mentioned such fear during the entire course of our deliberations.

"On the first ballot 10 jurors voted for death penalty and two for life sentence. I gave my reasons before the jury for my vote. The count stood eight to four on the next ballot. After supper the other jurors gradually came over with those voting for life sentence until there was only one for the death penalty. On the next ballot he voted with the rest.

"While all the jurors agreed not to talk about the case, I feel that in fairness to the jury an explanation should be made, as I feel the criticism was unjust."

WOMAN LOSES SUIT AGAINST EAST SIDE THEATER MANAGER

Mrs. Alta May Maurer, Organist, Sought $15,000 From Her Former Employer.

A verdict for the defendant was voted by a Granite City jury in the $15,000 damage suit of Mrs. Alta May Maurer, theater organist, of 3903 De Tonty street, against Louis Landau, manager of the Washington Theater in Granite City.

Testifying Thursday, Mrs. Maurer asserted that Landau made improper advances last summer when she was employed in the theater, and assaulted her when she refused to retract statements made to the musicians' union. Landau made a complete denial and offered several corroborating witnesses.

Although the audience was in sympathy with Mrs. Maurer, and applauded her counsel during argument Friday, the jury voted for the defendant. A sealed verdict was opened by consent of counsel yesterday, and will be formally returned in court Monday.

Vernon Bradburn Proves Scoring Ace for St. Louis U. With Seven Field Baskets and One Free Throw, for Total of 15 Points—Dunn Stars for Visitors.

St. Louis University's basketball team added another victory to its string by defeating the Marquette University five of Milwaukee 32 to 19 at the Armory last night before a crowd estimated at 1200 persons.

The Billikens, held to 10 points in the first half, came back strong in the second to score 22 points and Marquette, held to three points in the first half, added 16 to its total in the final half. Marquette did not score a field basket until four minutes of the second half had been played.

V. Bradburn Scores 15 Points.

Vernon Bradburn was the outstanding scoring star for St. Louis U. with seven field baskets and one free throw for a total of 15 points. Ed Hearte counted two baskets on long throws for Marquette and Dunn provided the visitors' scoring punch with three field baskets and two free throws, a total of eight points.

Both teams played a strong defensive game in the first half. St. Louis U. was unable to score a field goal for the first nine minutes of the game, but when Hurd replaced W. Bradburn at left forward, the Billikens began to show their usual teamwork and shortly there-

WRAY'S COLUMN

Alladin's Lamp Stuff.

As a sport baseball is a great business. Brobdingnagian edifices and massive bank accounts now grow where Lilliputians once held sway. Once upon a time, adventurers entered baseball with a thin dime and emerged with the Philadelphia Mint in 10 years.

We have had local evidence of this. We have more recent evidence of it in Washington, where, for the second successive season the local club declared a 40 per-cent dividend.

No wonder Clark Griffith was last year able to growl and make faces at the very man who, a decade ago, loaned Griff the money to buy a toehold into the City of Tail End Teams.

Ten years seems enough in which to run a baseball shoestring into a tannery. Washington's 1925 dividend was several times the total capital stock necessary to launch the Browns of 1902.

Treat Us Nice.

In view of all this prosperity one would think that baseball club owners would glad-hand the public and do everything for it. But what, in fact, has been the return of the magnates to the fan for his loyalty and cash donations?

They have built finer and

KIRKWOOD AND COOPER TOP GOLFERS

Both Count 68 for Total of 138 for Qualifying Round in $10,000 California Open Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Joe Kirkwood, trick golfer, and Harry Cooper of the Tenison Park Golf Club of Dallas, Tex., each had a low card of 138 for the 36-hole qualifying round of the $10,000 open golf tournament here today.

Kirkwood came home today in 31, six under par, and carded 68 for the last 18 holes.

Cooper shot a 68, four under a par, which with his 70 par on the south course yesterday grossed him 138 also. There was great acclaim for him when he finished with a couple of birdies.

The magic number for the final pursuit of the $10,000 in gold tomorrow over the 36 holes of the north course, was 154. Seventy-three were fortunate enough to card within that figure in making the rounds of the two courses here in qualifying play yesterday and today.

Excellent playing conditions, perfect greens and fairways and ideal weather gave the golfers everything they desired.

Kirkwood had six birdies on the last nine holes.

Tomorrow the players will get up with the sun and see what birdies they can find, for the golf flight starts at 8 o'clock, the 73 players making an 18-hole flight over the north course in the morning and again in the afternoon.

The List of Qualifiers.

Here are their standings, grouped under their total scores for 36 holes, with the figures following the name indicating the score on each of the 18 holes, all these counting in the medal play for the total of 72 holes:

Washington Students Purchase a Bear as An Official Mascot

A NINE - MONTHS - OLD bear cub has been purchased by the Junior Law Class of Washington University for presentation to the school as official mascot.

The bear will be introduced to campus surroundings tomorrow and will be formally presented to the university at the "house-warming" of the new field house Jan. 29. At present the cub is being taken care of at the Forest Park Zoological Gardens until the campus quarters planned for him materialize.

Members of the class presenting the mascot announce that they are planning a bear house which will harmonize with the English collegiate design of the university buildings.

Nevers Injured As All-Stars Lose to Giants

Former Stanford Star Suffers Torn Ligament in His Back.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 9.—Ernie Nevers, former Leland Stanford football star, suffered a torn ligament in his back in the second period of the football game here today between his team, the Jacksonville All-Stars, and the New York Giants. The Giants won, 7 to 0.

Nevers left the game in the third period as a result of the injuries received when he attempted to hurdle the line in an off-tackle play. He was thrown with a thud heard all over the field, and the Giants were penalized 15 yards for roughing. Nevers remained in the game until the end of the period, attempting two forward passes. Both failed and he punted out of danger.

The only score came in the final period, when McBride of Syracuse plunged through center to the goal line, later kicking goal.

BETTER PASS WORK AND ACCURATE GOAL SHOOTING CAUSE BEARS' DOWNFALL

Don White's Men Tie Score at 5-All but Thereafter Are Never Able to Catch Stillwater Quintet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STILLWATER, Okla., Jan. 9.—Washington University struck a second snag in Oklahoma, tonight, losing 29 to 26 to Oklahoma A and M College here, after having been nosed out, 32 to 31 by Oklahoma University last night at Norman.

Playing a steady game, the Aggies had but little difficulty in keeping ahead of the invading Bears. The St. Louis quintet, however, was not far behind and proved a constant threat. Faster passing and better breaking, topped by more accurate shooting were the advantages shown by the Maulbetsch men.

Stanford, Washington's forward, opened the scoring at the outset with a basket short range, after five Aggie heaves and three by the Bears had been fruitless. Hutton, Bear forward, tossed a free one for a third tally, but Danford, Aggie guard, dropped in a one-point throw and was followed by Captain Hall, who added two consecutive free tosses, tieing the count at three all. Another tie came at five all, but not thereafter did the Bears overtake the locals.

At the half the count was 14 to 11 in favor of A. and M.

Eckert Proves Star.

The greatest threat by the visitors in the second half came through Eckert, Washington guard, who added in the last two minutes his fourth and fifth field goals. He was high point scorer on field goals, although Stanford tied him in points, with three baskets and four free tosses. Elder and Connor, Aggies, were next with seven tallies each.

Unusual accuracy was shown by both teams in free-shot hurling, Washington completing six in nine attempts and the Aggies seven in ten. Eighteen personal fouls were called, ten against the Bears.

Only one substitute was sent in by each coach.

Elders' work in advancing the ball and making difficult baskets was outstanding for the Aggies. Danford, too, showed his best form.

Captain Seago was the center of Washington's defensive and checked many Aggies sorties.

Intensity of action by players of both teams resulted in much roughness.

MOLLA MALLORY, SIX-TIME CHAMPION, DROPS TO THIRD IN RANKING

Helen Wills No. 1 and Miss Elizabeth Ryan Second on Tennis List

Mrs. May Sutton Bundy Who Won the National Singles Title 21 Years Ago, Achieves a Comeback and Is Placed in Eighth Position.

ALL of the Women's National Singles Tennis Champions for the past decade with the exception of Mrs. George W. Wightman, 1919 titleholder, are included among the first ten in the Women's Singles ranking for the season of 1925, officially promulgated by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal., singles champion for the last three years, is named as No. 1. Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California, who made her residence in England for a number of years prior to the past tennis season, is placed No. 2, with Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York No. 3. Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington, Del., No. 4, Miss Eleanor Goss of New York No. 5 and Miss Mary K. Browne of Los Angeles, Cal., No. 6.

WOMEN'S NATIONAL SINGLES RANKING

1. Miss Helen Wills, Berkeley, Cal.
2. Miss Elizabeth Ryan, California.
3. Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, New York City.
4. Mrs. M. Z. Jessup, Wilmington, Dela.
5. Miss Eleanor Goss, New York City.
6. Miss Mary K. Browne, Los Angeles, Cal.
7. Miss Martha Bayard, Short Hills, N. J.
8. Mrs. M. S. Bundy, Los Angeles, Cal.
9. Miss Charlotte Hosmer, San Francisco.
10. Miss Edith Sigourney, Boston.
11. Mrs. J. D. Corbiere, Boston.
12. Miss Penelope Anderson, Richmond, Va.
13. Miss Mollie D. Thayer, Philadelphia.
14. Miss Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Cal.
15. Mrs. E. H. Roeser, New York City.
16. Mrs. J. S. Taylor, New York City.
17. Mrs. B. F. Stenz, New York City.
18. Miss Anne B. Townsend, Overbrook, Pa.
19. Mrs. F. H. Godfrey, Boston.
20. Miss Isabella L. Mumford, Boston.

Included in this sextette of players is found all but one of the national singles champion for the period from 1913 to 1925. Miss Browne held the title in 1913 and 1914, and Mrs. Mallory as Miss Bjurstedt in 1915, 1916 and 1918, there being no title in 1917. In 1920 Mrs. Mallory (nee Bjurstedt), regained the title and held it for three years, following which came the reign of Miss Wills, which has extended to date. During this 12 years of ranking, Mrs. Mallory was No. 1 six times, Miss Wills three times and Miss Browne twice, with Mrs. George W. Wightman being No. 1 in 1919. Without doubt, however, the outstanding feature of the ranking and records is the appearance of the name of Mrs. May Sutton Bundy as No. 8. As Miss Sutton she won the women's national singles championship in 1904 and the English ladies' championship at Wimbledon in 1905 and 1907. That Mrs. Bundy should gain the No. 8 position in national singles ranking 21 years after her debut as the national singles champion is a splendid testimonial of her prowess and ability on the tennis courts, and a record not achieved by any player in the similar division of men's ranking.

Notwithstanding the impressive records made by the California players and the high positions allotted to them, the Atlantic Coast players outrank those from the Pacific Coast, 2 to 1, considering the entire 20 positions filled. Sectional honors are equally divided among the first 10 players. The preponderance swings to the East, however, in the second 10, where Miss Helen Jacobs, the holder of the girls' national championship, is the only one named from the Pacific Coast.

The National Ranking Committee, consisting of William M. Fischer, chairman; G. Peabody Gardner Jr., Dr. Philip B. Hawk, Harry S. Knox, John G. McKay and Coleman S. Mills, did not select any doubles combinations, but the various sectional ranking committees have ranked doubles teams in some cases.

Rankings in the Missouri Valley section follow:

1. Mrs. M. E. Baehr, St. Louis, Mo.
2. Miss Lottie Fuller, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.
3. Mrs. Marjorie Gage, Kansas City, Mo.
4. Miss Ruth Hager, Kansas City, Mo.
5. Miss Lottie Hagemeyer, St. Louis, Mo.
6. Miss Mary Sullivan, Kansas City, Mo.
7. Miss Ruth Bailey, St. Louis, Mo.
8. Mrs. Sadie Peer, Kansas City, Mo.
9. Mrs. Floyd Ebers, Des Moines, Ia.
10. Miss Virginia Baer, St. Louis, Mo.

Leaders in other sectional rankings follow: California, Miss Helen Wills; Metropolitan, Mrs. Molla B. Mallory; Middle Atlantic, Miss Penelope Anderson; New England, Miss Edith Sigourney; Pacific Northwest, Miss Marjorie Leeming; Philadelphia, Miss Mary D. Thayer; Southern, Miss Murphy; Western, Mrs. E. C. Johnson, Detroit.

Middle West Not Represented.

For the first time in many seasons there are no Middle West players in the 1925 national ranking. Usually one or two players are named, but owing to the failure of their entry in important tournaments the Ranking Committee found it impossible to give them consideration.

The only St. Louis woman player ever to be ranked in the first 10 of the national list is Mrs. Corinne Gould Chamberlain. She was placed No. 6 in 1919 due in part to her play in the national clay court tournament of that year in which she won the singles title. After her marriage several years later she moved to Kansas City and has not taken part in tournament play since then.

Mrs. Melicent E. Baehr is the leading woman star of St. Louis and the Missouri Valley section at the present time. By competing in Eastern and the national events Mrs. Baehr would very likely gain a place in the second 10. Miss Lottie Fuller of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., former Missouri Valley champion, is another player who might gain a national ranking by competing in more important events.

Miss Bailey a Prospect.

This city has in Ruth Bailey, the Webster Groves school girl, a player who should become another Corinne Gould. While only 15 years of age Miss Bailey plays an unusually steady game and is exceptionally good at the net position. If given the right opportunity she should show rapid advancement within the next three years.

Jane Willis, another of the younger players, with a good future, is now living in Chicago. During the past season in St. Louis Miss Willis made a good record. She reached the semifinals in the Municipal girl singles and with Miss Bailey advanced to the semifinals in the women's municipal doubles event.

21 EXHIBITION GAMES ON BROWNS' TRAINING TRIP SCHEDULE

open the new ball park which is under construction and with 32,500 seats available and with both local clubs likely to make a strong bid for honors in the 1926 races, the two games probably will set a new attendance record for baseball in St. Louis. The largest crowd that ever turned out here was about 30,000 at a spring series game in 1922.

The Browns' training camp schedule follows:

March 10, Brooklyn at Tarpon Springs.
March 11 and 12, open dates.
March 13, Brooklyn at Clearwater.
March 15, Brooklyn at Tarpon Springs.
March 16, Buffalo at Tarpon Springs.
March 17, Brooklyn at Clearwater.
March 19, Brooklyn at Tarpon Springs.
March 20, Boston Braves at Tarpon Springs.
March 22, Brooklyn at Clearwater.
March 23, New York Giants at Sarasota.
March 24, Philadelphia at Bradentown.
March 25, Philadelphia at Bradentown.
March 26, Buffalo at Palmetto.
March 27, Boston at St. Petersburg.
April 4 and 5, Chattanooga at Chattanooga.
April 6, Nashville at Nashville.
April 7, Toledo at Jackson, Tenn.
April 8 and 9, Memphis at Memphis.
April 10 and 11, Cardinals at St. Louis.

Secretary Clarence Lloyd of the Cardinals said the schedule of the St. Louis Nationals had not been completed.

The Cardinals will train at San Antonio, Tex., and will gather there late in February. Hornsby does not believe in a long-drawn-out exhibition schedule in the spring, so the trip will not be so arduous for the athletes as under the Rickey regime.

The Cardinals will play in Dallas April 4 and 5, then at Shreveport, Tulsa, Oklahoma City and Springfield, Mo., on the way to St. Louis.

Games also will be scheduled with major leagues and minor league clubs whenever possible, though the Texas camp will not afford many exhibition opportunities.

Bascom, St. Louis Boy, Ranked In Eighth Place by Tilden

Holman, National Junior Champion, Ranked First in His Division—Shields Tops Boys—Coggeshall Made Greatest Improvement During the Season.

By William T. Tilden.

(Copyright, 1926.)

I have already given a quick resume of the records of the leading men and women tennis players during 1925, and will turn for a moment to the juniors and boys.

1. Cranston Holman — National junior champion. I have already mentioned him as a sensation among the men. Why say more?

2. Harris Coggeshall—A sensational improvement that is the outstanding feature of the junior season. A great player in the making.

3. Henry L. Johnson—A steady but not sensational improvement, still a sound progress.

4. A. L. (Sandy) Wiener—Second only to Coggeshall in his wonderful improvement over the year. He is rapidly turning into a great star.

5. Berkeley Bell—A magnificent match temperament featured this lad's great jump during 1925. If Bell can round out his game to meet his generalship he will be very good.

6. Emmett Pare — A disappointing year with a retrogression by this promising youngster, due mainly to ill health. He started the season well but dropped by the wayside in the later months. Next year should see him once more among the best.

7. John Doeg—May Sutton Bundy's nephew showed a brilliant net attack and fine match temperament. He will repay watching next year.

8. F. J. Luce Jr.—A magnificent and sound improvement by a young player who has all the earmarks of a coming star.

9. David O'Laughlin—Another year of slight but appreciable advance by the former boy champion. He needs more competition.

10. Harry McKee — California gives us a promising young player who is making steady progress.

11. Donald Strachan — Another fine improvement by a sound, clever player who should go far in 1926.

12. Scott Stewart — Another Californian who is steadily improving. A player who looks sound and sensible.

13. Gus Fener—Miami's pride, a youngster who has more match temperament than game, but who is steadily improving.

14. Malcolm T. Hill — A sound player who did not come on as fast as expected. I would call his season slightly disappointing.

Shields Ranked First.

Unfortunately, I have had not the space to take up more of these juniors, since I must turn to the boys' class.

1. Frank Shields—A brilliant improvement carried him to the national crown itself.

2. Walter Thomas—A good season with but one defeat, yet his game did not advance as much as appeared from his record.

3. Junior Coen—The real sensation of the year and the greatest improvement by any boy or junior over the preceding year. He is the finest stylist of any one in either class. All he needs is experience and match tempermament.

4. Leroy (Bud) Voorhees—A sound if slight improvement which should presage a marked progress in 1926. He needs seasoning and confidence, but has great ability.

5. Bert Claster—A slight improvement, due more to his increase in size than to a real improvement in his tennis.

6. Bilty O'Loughlin—Not much change from last year, but what there is, is improvement. Not a good year, but certainly not a bad one.

7. Paul Martin—Here, too, was no great progress, but a sound, natural development. He is going along the right road.

8. Bill Bascom of St. Louis.—A most promising newcomer who showed great improvement and real promise.

9. H. S. Moore—A big jump forward from 1924 by a boy who has a game that still needs lots of work.

10. A. D. Noble—Another newcomer who made a big improvement. His game is better than his record, as he lacks experience in match play.

The outstanding players of the year were Coggeshall, Wiener and Bell in the juniors and Coen in the boys, with the average game of both classes showing a great improvement.

Incidentally, Henry Johnson and Malcolm Hill, the national junior doubles champions, are a team that gives promise of becoming one of the greatest doubles that the United States has ever produced.

All in all, it was a year of progress in junior tennis that was most encouraging.

THE HUNTING CALL

By ALEC MERMOD

A number of our readers have expressed a desire to hear more about our sporting dogs, hence the following:

The Griffon.

THIS hardy and really excellent bird dog is not well known in America, but is really the oldest type of following dog and has always been popular in Germany and France, both countries claiming the honor of developing the breed.

As he is not well known here, a short description may be of interest.

MERMOD

The Griffon has a double coat, the under one being soft and thick, while the outer coat is coarse and wiry. His color is usually gray with brown patches, or gray-white with brown or orange patches. A well-developed dog of two years will weigh a bit over 50 pounds and stands about 22 inches at shoulder. In general contour he resembles a "Dropper," though with a head more like a terrier.

He is intelligent, has a good nose, plenty of endurance and makes an excellent retriever; he covers his ground well but is not fast nor is he the ranger that appeals to the average hunter.

About 20 years ago there was a decided effort on the part of some of our breeders to create some enthusiasm for the Griffon, and a number of kennels were started throughout the country, but the enthusiasm died before it really started as the dog was not popular with the hunter because he was too slow, and the "parlor" sportsman turned him down because he was not handsome enough.

Several years ago Mr. Robert A. B. Walsh, prominent sportsman of St. Louis, and Mrs. C. K. D. Van Studdiford, then of Vandalia, Mo., bred a strain of first rate shooting dogs by crossing the Griffon and English setter.

The result of this crossing was a dog that was handsome because he was so ugly.

Old Sam, one of the first, is a great, powerful dog, with a heavy coat, with the colors white and brown blending, has a square muzzle; well whiskered, and, taking him altogether, he looks very much like an old-fashioned English sheep dog. He is tireless in the field, and has a splendid disposition.

All of the progeny resulting from the crossing of these two breeds proved faster than the Griffon, and were hardier than the setter.

A Popular Mistake.

Dog breeders are not in favor of crossing breeds, always crying for 100 per cent pure strain, forgetting that all of our so-called pure-bred dogs started from a decided mixture.

This 100 per cent stuff, in the writer's opinion, is being carried a little too far, as the breeders think nothing of mating cousins, with the result that the defying of nature's laws is producing a strain of dogs without stamina enough to resist various forms of dog disease, besides there is a considerable falling off in intelligence that, until a few years ago, was so marked in our bird dogs.

It's too bad that some of our breeders don't have courage enough to go back to first principles and, by crossing, develop a real bird dog, showing not only speed, but strength and intelligence.

It's up to some of our rich sportsmen to do this—men with means and the courage to do something different.

Here's hoping that such a man will get into the picture before long.

The Chesapeake Bay Dog.

The Chesapeake is purely an American dog brought out and developed over a hundred years ago. Like the pointer and setter, nothing is definitely known as to what crossing of types produced this king of retrievers. About all we seem to know is that this dog is a native of United States and was developed in Maryland. Some claim that the Chesapeake Bay dog is the result of crossing the Newfoundland with the Labrador, while others claim that hte setter and otter hound produced the Chesapeake, but it's all guess work. We don't know.

Experience has shown us that the Chesapeake Bay dog surpasses any other as a duck retriever. He is gifted with a wonderful amount of intelligence, courage and endurance, the water never too cold or the day too long for him; he will stick to his job till finished. In color he is a reddish brown, some will have a white patch on chest. The male, when fully grown and in condition, stands about 2 feet high and should weigh 75 pounds.

He has a double coat, the underone being very close and wooly, the outer coat short and thick, and may be either straight or curly.

Mr. Joseph Pulitzer and Mr. Clark McAdams have been breeding Chesapeake Bay dogs for several years, and have developed some splendid retrievers.

As a rule, they depend on sight and show remarkable accuracy in marking down a dead or wounded duck, but their sense of smell is keen enough to enable them to trail a wounded bird through the thickest vegetation.

Mr. McAdams boasts that he never loses a duck when out with one of his dogs.

The Quail Question.

We can't keep from coming back again to the quail question, for it seems to be such a vital one, and at the same time has been neglected by the sportsmen.

We must do something this year, ar we are going to lose out entirely.

Every year the farmer is getting more hostile and we have all seen our favorite shooting grounds getting smaller owing to some of our farmer friends cutting us off.

Remember, the Legislature convenes next year and we are going to have a harder fight than ever before to prevent the passing of a bill which will either put the quail in the songbird list which will close the season for keeps, or else close it for a period of from two to five years.

We don't even want such a bill to come up at all. We must show the farmer, this year, how it will be to his advantage to have an open season and to permit shooting, and as we stated before, it's not going to be a "boy's" job.

We can't sit back and say, "Let George do it;" it's your job and my job.

Every lover of dog and gun must get busy and stay on the job till we have put it over.

Personally, I am no good at organization, but if every man who owns a dog or is interested in quail shooting will send his name to the writer, care Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch, we will be able to find someone among us who can and will whip into shape some sort of an organizatoin to fight for this cause.

175 Skaters to Compete For Honors in Carnival At Forest Park Today

Farrell and Murphy, Chicago Stars, to Vie With Locals in Southwestern Championship Events — First of Nine Events to Start at 2 O'clock.

The Silver Skates carnival, carrying with it the Southwestern skating championship, will be decided in grand basin at the foot of Art Hill, Forest Park, starting at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The events will be the first of the kind ever held in St. Louis. A total of 175 entries were received by officials for the various races.

Officials in charge of the carnival announced last night that it was a certainty that the meet would be held and that ice conditions were perfect for the races.

The feature of the meet will be the three senior events, the half-mile, one-mile and two-mile races. The winner, to be known as the Southwestern skating champion, will be decided on the point system, and in addition to the individual prizes, will receive the Alfred Johnson Ice King trophy.

In these three races, two Chicago skaters will vie for honors with the St. Louis stars. They are O'Neill Farrell and Eddie Murphy of the Midwest Athletic Club. Farrell is considered one of the main rivals of Clas Thunberg, the foreign speed demon, for national honors this season. He captured the tournament held at Lake Placid, N. Y., last year.

The chief St. Louis rivals for the two Windy City stars will be Spencer, runner-up in the city championship at the Winter Garden last year; Harry Lang, present city titleholder, and a skater who in 1909 competed in the Western championships at Chicago; Norton, the Furman brothers and several youngsters who have come to the fore.

In addition to the nine speed races, which make up the program, there will be exhibitions of fancy and clown skating by local talent.

Has National Sanction.

Officials in charge of the carnival announce that everything connected with the tournament will be free, including programs. Those who are promoting the event are out to show that St. Louis is a real skating center and will in time vie with Chicago for honors. City officials, as well as private citizens, have taken a keen interest.

Mayor Victor Miller will act as honorary referee, while Park Commissioner Pape will be honorary starter.

It was announced that no spectators would be permitted on the ice during the running of the races. A track will be laid off by the officials this morning.

The carnival is being promoted by the Western Division of the A. A. U. and is sanctioned by the International Skating Federation.

ST. LOUIS U. DEFEATS MARQUETTE, 32 TO 19

after Vernon Bradburn counted the first field basket. As was the case with most of Bradburn's field baskets, it was a short heave from under the basket.

Marquette, finding it difficult to penetrate the St. Louis defense, resorted to long throws, some of them from the center of the floor. These wild efforts were fruitless.

Both Teams Finish Strong.

The second half provided the real thrills of the contest and both teams were able to score more frequently. Especially was this true toward the close of the game.

Just as the Billikens showed more brillancy in the first half, when Hurd replaced W. Bradburn, so the team responded when W. Bradburn went back to his position in the second. With only a few minutes left to play, the Billikens scored seven points.

SCHEDULE COMMITTEE, UNABLE TO REACH AGREEMENT, ADJOURN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Failure to reach an agreement on playing dates resulted in the adjournment of a week-long meeting of the Joint Schedule Committee of the National and American Baseball Leagues today without adopting schedules for the two major circuits. A second meeting will be called later in the month to overcome conflicts in the dates, President John A. Heydler of the senior league announced.

Adjournment of the session, at which both Heydler and the American League president, B. B. Johnson, took part, marked the first time in the history of organized baseball that the joint committee has been unable to agree on playing dates within a three days' period.

No explanation was forthcoming from either of the league executives, although attention was called to the fact that advancement of the closing date one week by vote of Commissioner K. M. Landis at the recent joint meeting of the magnates here was in some measure responsible.

YEATMAN AND CLEVELAND WIN OPENING HIGH SCHOOL BASKET GAMES

North Side Quint Defeats Soldan by 30 to 25 Score; Roosevelt Beaten, 22-20

Spuering Stars With 14 Points—South Side Team's Five-Man Defense Nets Victory—Musgrove Proves Star—4200 Attend Double Bill.

The Yeatman High School basketball team gained a 30 to 25 victory over Soldan in the opening game of the Interscholastic League double header, played at Roosevelt gymnasium last night.

In the second game, Cleveland upset the dope by gaining a 22-to-20 victory over Roosevelt. A capacity crowd of 4200 attended the double-header.

The contest was loosely played, while there was a great deal of roughing. Yeatman, at times, showed a fine passing attack, in the first clash, but the efforts were not sustained. In the end, it was the inability of the West Enders to shoot baskets from close to the net, that caused the downfall of the quintet.

At the end of the first half, Yeatman held a lead of 13 to 11. In this period, the individual efforts of Spuering of the North Side five and Hassler of Soldan stood out prominently. Spuering, the high point man of the contest with 14, counted eight in the opening half, while Hassler counted seven of the 11 for the West Enders.

Throughout the game was a see-saw affair with first one team and then the other going into the lead.

Cleveland Upsets Dope.

The second game, the feature of the evening, saw the downfall of Roosevelt, which was favored to win over Cleveland. The contest was close throughout. Cleveland missed many easy shots and also was guilty of a great number of fouls. Musbrove proved the outstanding star of the clash for the winners.

Cleveland employed a five-man defense which kept Roosevelt from scoring on a number of occasions. A field goal by Sauselle in the closing minutes of play brought victory for the Cleveland aggregation.

WRAY'S COLUMN

larger parks, but that, of course, is entirely by way of making room for more one-dollar customers. For the rest, we may today offer the same complaints as were voiced in this column 10 or more years ago, to-wit:

The bleachers are still uncovered.

The cast of characters of the day's baseball drama still cost the customer a nickel (and they still make more mistakes on the score card than the players do in the field).

They still refuse to display the official hits and errors on the score board.

They likewise still permit overflow crowds to encroach on the field and ruin a championship game with ground rules.

They still decline to number the players to conform to the glyphs in the score sheet.

And so it goes on down the list. Not one constructive thing in the interest of the fan can we recall as having been done by the magnates.

On the contrary they have twice raised the prices of admission to regular games and have tilted the cost of world's series games four times the regular shot.

Which reminds one of Charley Herzog's famous baseball slogan as told to our Willie O'Connor:

"When you get 'em down, choke 'em."

Meet Pal Lomski.

ALONGSIDE such noted and historic fighters as Sobleski, Kosciusko and Volodyoyski will soon be ranged the name of another Polish battler, one of no renown at this time and whose Cossack glory is still in a nascent state—Leo Lomski of the Pacific Northwest.

In his particular sphere Pan Lomski promises to give Pan Michael and Jack Dempsey quite a run for international laurels as a scrapper.

The world was quite astonished when a few days ago it was announced that Harry Greb and Lomski had been matched for a title bout on the Pacific Coast.

Lomski was a name entirely new to fame. But the word has come across the saw-tooth peaks of the coast range that he will be the next middleweight champion.

Which was quite as mystifying as the message received from Otto Floto, in 1918, when he flashed the word that Jack Dempsey would be the next heavyweight king.

"Who's Dempsey?" a wondering world then queried. Today it's "Who's Lomski?"

Lomski is some Lomski. To begin with he's of Cracovian origin with a wee bit of Scotch sandying his complexion. That's like mixing pit bull and airedale, and the combination ought to be rare.

He was born 22 years ago and is just now emerging from the larval state wherein the real fighter was forming. Information from Tom Andrews, who is at present on the coast, conveys the belief that here is another Stanley Ketchel.

In each of his 40 fights, many of which were won by knockouts, Lomski has had his man on the floor at some time or other. And among those he has fought are listed many of the best in the land. He knocked out the promising Bert Colima and surprised everyone by manhandling the British star Teddy Moore, who previously had given the champion, Harry Greb, such a rough voyage.

A man who can put his foes to the canvas with such amazing regularity cannot possibly doubt his own future.

One of his opponents no longer doubts it. He is this same Ted Moore of England, who fought both Lomski and Greb.

"'E's a wicked hitter and a great fighter," they quote Moore as saying. "'E should be chawmpion some day, y'know."

With which introduction we will leave Pan Lomski to carve out a Jack Dempsey future for himself.

Coming to Him.

FRIENDS of Charley Peterson, St. Louis billiardist and referee, are wondering if he will be assigned the task of refereeing the Schaefer-Hagenlacher challenge balkline match next month.

Without over-boosting home industry, it is the writer's opinion, after contact with Peterson and billiards for 25 years, that the biliard octopus ought to make Pete perpetual referee for all title events.

The reason is to be found in this fact: Peterson has refereed 245 championship games, with but one altercation in the entire list. That was due, as afterwards found out, to an almost imperceptible unevenness in the cloth, and it was Peterson who discovered this and remedied it, the next game.

The billiard "trust" has not done well by Peterson, who for many years has labored in its vineyard whole-heartedly and all for love.

At present writing, it appears to be another case of "Love's Labor Lost." To the present date, billiards has done nothing for its greatest student and propagandist. The title of Perpetual Grand Referee of the order is the least compliment it could bestow on the "Show-me-a-shot-I-can't-make" wizard.

Migratory Birds.

IT appears that the Cardinal birds which adorn the uniforms of our National League ball club, migrate just after the first trip to the laundry, and they will therefore be omitted on this season's outfits. It seems that the colors ran faster than some of our athletes.

Insets are of shots made in the recent match in which Schaefer regained the title from Eduoard Horemans. No. 1 shows a half masse for position by Horemans in the opening block; No. 2 is a masse for position made by Schaefer in his run of 190 in the final block. Schaefer came back onto the spheres in order not to separate them all over the table. No. 3, the draw shot on which Schaefer miscued in the final block, and which, according to C. C. Peterson, who refereed, cost him a grand average of 100; No. 4, a masse shot made by Horemans when his cue ball was frozen to to the red.

St. Louisan Who Refereed Title Match Says Champion Gave Greatest Demonstration of Game He Ever Saw.

By Herman Wecke.

The billiard world today has another "wizard." When Jake Schaefer, the elder, was in his prime, he was known as "The Wizard." Now that title rests perfectly on the brow of Jake Schaefer Jr., present holder of the world's 18.2 balkline championship and son of the famous old-time "Wizard."

lowing in the footsteps of his illustrious father.

Charles C. Peterson of St. Louis, who refereed the match last week in which Schaefer regained the championship from the Belgian, Edouard Horemans, goes a bit further. Peterson, who knows billiards from A to Z, says that Schaefer is the "miracle man" of balkline—that he is a "real balkline machine."

And coming from a man who has been an ardent admirer of Willie Hoppe, former world's champion, all these years, that is quite a boost.

Why Hoppe's Star Faded.

From this it can be taken that Willie Hoppe's reign of supremacy in 18.2 balkline billiards ended, not because he was slipping, but because the other players—especially Young Jake Schaefer, son of the "old wizard"—were coming along at a sensational clip.

"I have always said that Willie Hoppe was the greatest allround billiard player who has ever lived," said Peterson. "By that I mean that he can adapt himself to various conditions quicker than any other player. But after seeing Schaefer in his victory over Horemans, I am forced to admit that here was a "miracle worker"—a real machine as far as balkline play was concerned.

"Here was Horemans, a greatly improved player over the form he exhibited when he first arrived in this country, getting a better average over a 1500-point championship player than had ever before been made. Yet he was beaten almost two to one. After that I was forced to take my hat off to Young Jake Schaefer, the new wizard."

Remarkable Billiards.

Schaefer played truly remarkable billiards in his recent match. For the 1500-point contest, which he won, 1500 to 890, he compiled a grand average of 93 12-16. Horemans had a grand average of 55 10-16 for the three days of play, still lost by 610 points.

"Schaefer's play in the match was simply marvelous," Pete continued. "He played the kind of a game that did not tire the spectators. He was rapid in his execution and played the anchor block more than ever before. At times, Schaefer's play was so rapid that I hardly had a chance to make my calls before he had scored again. Even Horemans at times figured that Jake was playing too fast.

"During my connection with the billiard game, I have seen some wonderful draw shots. However, never before have I seen draw shots so well executed as were those made by Schaefer in his match against Horemans. It was simply marvelous to see Schaefer play the draw shot.

"It was the greatest exhibition of 18.2 balkline I have ever had the honor of witnessing."

"Earned Run" of 135.

"While Schaefer did not make the highest run of the match, I consider his collection of 135 points in the second block as the greatest "earned run" of the match. In this run, Schaefer was not able to gather the globes until after he had counted 41 billiards. Prior to that he was forced to make 19 open table shots. Therefore I say it was the best "earned run" of the match.

"The two runs of better than 200 by Horemans saved him from making an even poorer showing than he did. Horemans, after the match, asserted that he was a bit 'off his game.' But there was no beating Young Jake with his average of close to 94.

"And it is my firm conviction that but for a miscue, Schaefer would have averaged 100 for the match. The miscue came after he had run 190 in the final block and needed but 33 more to go out. He played a difficult draw (as shown by the accompanying diagrams) and miscued. After the match, he admitted he had played the wrong shot.

"Conditions for the match were perfect. The temperature in the hall was never under 76 and never over 77. The table and the ivory also were the best that could be obtained."

Horemans' Mental Hazard.

Peterson tells an amusing incident in connection with the table, which was used for the play. It resulted in the only kick by either player, although it was but a mild one.

"Horemans during his run of 243 drove the full length of the table for position. As the object ball was about to come to a stop, it hit a fold of the cloth and rolled slightly to the left. Here the Belgian complained that the table was not true.

"So the next morning I got Horemans and two billiard-table men to put a level on the table. There was nothing wrong, but Horemans still contended that it was slightly off. I knew that was a "mental hazard" for the Belgian. So I gave one of the mechanics a piece of newspaper and told him to put it under the cloth. That satisfied Horemans. There was no more complaint about the table."

Schaefer's next match in defense of his title will be against Eric Hagenlacher, the German champion, at Manufacturers' Hall, Philadelphia, in March. It also will be the last 18.2 challenge match of the season.

"Hagenlacher is likely to give Schaefer just as good, if not better, a match, than Horemans," said Peterson. "I consider Hagenlacher a better shotmaker than Horemans. He also plays a fine close game."

However, until he is dethroned, Young Jake Schaefer will have to be considered the new "balkline wizard"—the MACHINE, as Peterson terms it.

Peterson Has Refereed in 245 Title Games Without Complaint

THE championship match between Jake Schaefer and Edouard Horemans was the 245th title game in which he has participated as referee, Charles C. Peterson, St. Louis fancy shot expert, stated yesterday. "And in all that time," saye Pete, "I have never had a complaint of any kind."

"I would like to step out with that record of never having a decision questioned," Peterson continued.

Peterson said that after the recent match he received congratulations from all sides for the way he handled the match. "But I did nothing I did not do in other games I handled. I just kept the players going all the time and kept on top of the play as closely as was humanly possible," he said.

Borotra to Defend National Indoor Net Championship

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 9.

JEAN BOROTRA has definitely decided to defend his title of American indoor tennis champion, whether or not the French federation accepts the invitation of the United States Lawn Tennis Association to send a team to compete in the tournament at New York next month.

The decision regarding the team hinges upon Rene Lacoste's ability to obtain a furlough from military service. If he does, the federation will send over Laconte and Jacques Brugnon and either Henri Cochet or Paul Feret, in addition to Borotra.

Hubbard Winner In Sprint Race

Defeats Dawkins, Clark and Bowman in Special 60-Yard Dash.

By the Associated Press.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 9.—Repeating the easy triumph he scored over three Eastern rivals last summer in New York, De Hart Hubbard, Michigan University athlete, tonight defeated Chet Bowman of the Newark Athletic A. C. and four other opponents in a special sixty-yard dash at an indoor meet in the Patterson Armory.

Hubbard, finishing full two yards ahead of Eric Dawkins, an unattached runner, breasted the tape in 6 2-5 seconds, one-fifth of a second slower than the world indoor record. Bowman was nosed out for third place by Louis Clark of the Newark A. C.

Willie Plant, American champion came from scratch in a one-mile walk to hike around a liberally handicapped field of 20.

George Marsters and Johnny Holden, members of the record-breaking 1925 Georgetown University relay team, now representing New York A. C., each ran from scratch in separate 1000-yard handicap events. Marsters placed second to Gilbert H. Vandervoort, an unattached athlete, after a sensational finish, but Holden in his race could do no better than fourth. John Brennan of Fordham University, with a 50-yard handicap, won the latter test.

Fownes Elected President of U. S. Golf Body

New System of Qualifying to Be Used in Next Amateur.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 9.—William C. Fownes Jr. of Pittsburg, was selected president and a full slate of subordinate officers chosen without opposition late today by the United States Gold Association holding its annual mid-winter meeting here. Fownes succeeds Bryant T. Vanderpool of Newark.

Following are the subordinate officals elected today: Vice presidents, Charles O. Pfeil, Memphis, Tenn., Findlay S. Douglas, Rye, N. Y. Secretary—Charles H. Sabin, Southampton, Long Island, N. Y. Counsel—Judge James Francis Burke, Sewickley, Pa. Executive Committee—Roger D. Lapham, San Francisco; William J. Foye, Omaha, Neb.; Thomas B. Paine, Atlanta, Ga.; Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago; James D. Standish, Jr., Detroit; Cameron B. Buxton, Dallas, Tex.; Herbert Jacques, Brookline, Mass., and Rodman E. Griscom, Philadelphia. Sectional Association representatives: William C. Fownes, Jr., Pennsylvania Golf Association; Charles O. Pfeil, Western Golf Association; Roger D. Lapham, California Golf Association; Thomas B. Paine, Southern Golf Association; James D. Standish Jr., Michigan State Golf Association; Rodman E. Griscom, Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

A 1927 nominating committee was also named.

New Qualifying Method.

New methods of qualifying golfers for the national championship, a change in golf balls and better ways of maintaining golf courses were subjects of discussion.

The plan of qualifying only 16 players for the amateur championship tried last year was abandoned. A scheme to try regional qualifications and to use courses with two or more links was mentioned by President Fownes.

The most radical and, probably best liked suggestion, was to do away with medals score at the championship as is done in Great Britain. Pfeil, who fathered this idea, suggested that golfers who stood out for performance on the links in state and other regional events should be elected by an eligibility committee. All those selected would be drawn for match play.

President Fownes said the legislation on golf balls was still under discusison between Great Britain and the United States G. A. and that possibly some action would be taken this summer.

Tourney Dates Announced.

Executive Secretary T. J. MacMahon of New York announced that the following dates had been set for the 1926 tournaments, whose venue were given out several months ago:

Amateur championship, Sept. 13-18, at Baltusrol.

Public links meet Aug. 3-7 at Buffalo municipal courts.

Women's tournament Sept. 27-Oct. 2 at Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

The open championship to be held at Scioto Club, Columbus, will likely be set for the middle of May or early in July.

game. Neither team gained in the first period, although both teams tried the aerial, line bucking and punting routes.

Penalties Aid Giants.

In the second period the Giants forced their way deep into the All-Stars' territory, but were stopped on the 17-yard line. Shortly afterward Nevers took time after his hurdling attempt. He punted out of danger and the half ended on the Giants' 40-yard line.

The Giants again penetrated the All-Stars' 20-yard line in the third period when a punt by White of Oklahoma went out of bounds on the 15-yard line.

In the final period, however, the Giants forced the ball up the field to the 10-yard line, where two off-side penalties and McBride's line plunge placed it across the goal line.

The game was the second that the All-Stars, captained by Nevers, have played here.

Coliseum Quint Is Winner Over Chicago, 48-27

Short Passing Game of Locals Proves Effective—Gibson Scores 23 Points.

The Coliseum A. C. basketball team gained a 48 to 27 victory over the Chicago Y. M. C. A. in the intercity game played at Francis gymnasium last night. The St. Louisans gained a lead of 26 to 15 in the opening half and increased this in the second.

The Coliseum team, for the first time since its organization, used the short passing game, instead of trying for individual brilliance and long shots. This new style of game was very effective and enabled Gibson, who returned to center, to score 11 field goals, most of them on shots from close to the basket. The center stuck close to the net throughout the contest, waiting for setups. He counted 23 of the points for the local five.

The defense of both fives was ragged, but the offense was good.

Al Marquard, former alternate center, who recently resigned, acted as coach of the Coliseum quintet for the first time.

Nies Plays Good Game.

Chicago got off to the lead, Needy netting the first field goal. However a bit later Gibson tied it and thereafter, the Coliseum five kept increasing its margin. Nies, as usual played a good game. Not only did he pass well, but in addition he scored four field goals.

The guards of the Chicago team were a bit slow and this enabled the Coliseum to score many points which might have been averted with faster work on the part of the Chicago guards.

The contest was the tenth in 13 nights for the Windy City quintet. Of this number seven were won, one coming over the Cincinnati Y, which has held the national Y honors for several seasons.

The Coliseum team's next game will be with Washington University, probably in the next 10 days.

Maplewood High Wins.

In the preliminary game, Maplewood High School's quintet defeated Benld, Ill., 24 to 19. Benld, leading at the end of the half, 13 to 11, fell before the onslaught of the Maplewood forwards during the second period.

Falkner, right forward for Maplewood, led the winners in points scored with 11. Saraco and Firely starred for the winners, the latter hooping four field goals. Saraco looped three.

WELLSTONS AND RATICANS MEET IN U. S. F. A. CUP GAME TODAY

Contest Will Be First in Title Series for St. Louis Teams in Last Two Years

Both Elevens to Use Regular Lineups—Vespers Later Will Oppose Royalton, Ill., While Ben Millers Clash With Cleveland Soccer Team.

By Herman Wecke

St. Louis elevens will start a drive for the national soccer championship this afternoon, when the Wellstons and Raticans of the St. Louis League, play in a first round U. S. F. A. cup tie at St. Louis U. Park, starting at 2:30 o'clock. The clash will be the first cup tilt here in two years, as the local elevens remained out of the competition last season.

The game today will be the first of three in which local aggregations are scheduled to compete in the first round of the competition proper, which now has dwindled down to 32 clubs. The St. Louis teams were exempted from the qualifying competition.

Play Out-of-Town Teams.

In the other clashes in which St. Louis will participate, the Vespers will face the Royalton (Ill.) team, while the Ben Millers are scheduled to face the American-Hungarians of Cleveland. The Hungarians gained the right to meet the Millers by defeating the Morgan (Pa.) club last Sunday, 2—0, in a clash that went extra periods.

While the Raticans have a better standing in the local circuit than the Wellstons this season, it is not a certainty that Ratican's aggregation will come through with the victory. The Wellstons, managed by Tate Brady, have something to fight for. Brady's elevens, as the Scullins, reached the U. S. F. A. final three times. The club won the championship once; lost on another occasion and forfeited a third after battling to a tie on Eastern soil.

Only three of the players who were members of Brady's finalists are now regulars. They are Schwarz and Brannigan, forwards, and Hennessey, halfback.

Ratican Will Play.

Ratican, this season, is chaperoning a young club, which last Sunday fought the Ben Millers to a draw. Ratican himself is playing center forward. The other veteran on the forward line is Al McHenry, the player who scored the goal that gave St. Louis its first U. S. F. A. championship some years back. McHenry, at that time was a member of Pete Ratican's Ben Millers. That victory for St. Louis was gained over Fore River.

Only one position is doubtful. That is center halfback on the Wellstons. If Lehman has recovered from an injury he will get the job. Otherwise Hebberger will be assigned the task.

"Tick Tack Fastest Breaker I Ever Rode", Earl Sande Says

"Cold Blood" Pulled Milk Wagon Before Racing on Small Western Tracks—Jockey Once Arrested for Exceeding Speed Limit With Horse at Prescott.

By Earl Sande.

Written in Collaboration With James R. Crowell.

(Copyright, 1926.)

THE horse which could get into action faster than any other I have ever ridden was a half-breed, or cold-blood, named Tick Tack, one of the two quarter horses in the stable of Doc Pardee of Prescott, Ariz., for whom I was now working as foreman.

Tick Tack, under some other name, had originally pulled a milk wagon in Prescott. One day the milkman's boy took him out for a ride and gained first-hand information of exactly how fast this cold-blood was. Taking the bit in his teeth, the horse made a beeline for home, tearing through the streets of Prescott at such high speed that those who watched his dash stood open-mouthed in amazement at the sight of a common milk horse running so fast.

Tick Tack found his right sphere when Pardee took him to the races. He was a real race horse, fast, many times, and reiterate that he could outbreak any horse on which game and intelligent. I rode him I have had the leg up. He would break from the 20-foot starting score like a shot and cover the first eighth in 11 seconds and the quarter in 23. It took Tick Tack only a few jumps to get well clear of any horse he ever raced in my time.

Warned for Speeding.

Vanity Fair was the name of the other quarter horse in the Pardee string. I recall once when we were in a hilly mining town, and Vanity Fair was entered in a match race the following day. The filly had become a little high in flesh from lack of exercise. I knew she needed a good stiff work before the race. I was riding her along the main street of Prescott while debating this question. The road was nice and soft and it suddenly occurred to me that this thoroughfare was made to order for the tuning-up breeze.

In a few moments I was conscious of loud bellowing behind me, punctuated with the clatter of horse's hoofs. I turned and saw an irate looking man waving his arms wildly in my direction.

"Say, young fellow, what in hell do you think our main street is—a race track?" the man yelled at me.

"I'm the Sheriff of this here town and I want you to cut out the sprinting. You're breaking the speed limit with that wild nag of yourn."

And as the command came from an official quarter, I desisted in my effort to give Vanity Fair a trial spin.

One of the towns we visited on the tour was Springerville, Ariz. There were all kinds of Western contests, bucking horse events, bulldogging and roping, together with relay horse races, in which each cowboy competitor rode four different horses in the course of the contest, his speed in dismounting from one and mounting another being an important factor in determining the winner.

Wagers $5 on Mount.

That afternoon Tick Tack was entered against a horse named Pancho, one of the fastest racers of that section.

"I'll bet you $5 Tick Tack beats your horse," I said to Pancho's owner.

"You're on," he said, with a broad wink at those standing nearby. His manner seemed to me like a reflection on our horse. I was nettled.

"Now I'll bet you $5 more that you've made a bad bet," I shot back at him. Apparently he wasn't accustomed to that form of expression and thought I was trying to put something over on him. He sprang at me with both arms poised for a knockout punch, and if I hadn't ducked just in time Tick Tack would have had another rider that afternoon.

Tick Tack just breezed away from his rival.

My little hoard of money was growing. I had started to save from the moment Doc Pardee had made me the foreman of his stable. The repeated victories of Tick Tack kept adding to the total.

Takes the Big Plunge.

And now the day was at hand when I was to take the most important step of my whole life. I counted my savings and found it had grown to more than $500.

It was in November, 1917, that I decided the time had come for me to make my plunge. One evening after the stalls had been fixed I sat down with Doc Pardee for a little heart to heart talk about my future plans. I thanked him for his kindness and told him I was going to hit the trail for New Orleans.

Doc looked at me thoughtfully for a few moments.

"It's a good decision, Earl," he said, after a bit. "Good luck to you."

A day or two after that I left Prescott. I was headed for the big adventure.

Dade Memorial Won by Arcady, Abstract Is 2nd

Hell Cat Third in $2500 Added Stake at New Orleans Track.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 9.—Going a mile for the first time in his career, Mose Goldblatt's Arcady won the third renewal of the A. B. Dade Memorial Handicap at the Fair Grounds this afternoon in a driving finish with Abstract. The farthest Arcady had gone previously was seven furlongs.

Hell Cat nosed out Brilliant for third place. Five of the seven originally carded to start accepted the issue. "Red" Stutts' riding superiority over Sidney Hebert was responsible for Arcady's victory. Arcady broke running and immediately moved into a commanding lead. Brilliant followed him close for a half-mile. Abstract raced in third place. Brilliant was unable to withstand the rush of Abstract and dropped back. Then the Pueblo Stables' black colt went after Arcady and it appeared as if he would overhaul the leader. Stutts went to work and merely outrode and outfinished the apprentice rider astride Abstract. Brilliant was the favorite.

Princess Doreen 5-to-1 Favorite In the Coffroth

One Bet in Tia Juana Future Book of $30,000 to $100.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TIA JUANA, Mexico, Jan. 9.—Princess Doreen rules the favorite in the rather heavily played future book on the $75,000 Coffroth Handicap, to be decided here Sunday, March 28. The price quoted by J. P. Atkin, in charge of the future book here, against the Princess, is 5 to 1.

One of the most interesting wagers recorded by Atkin is that of Bert Baroni of Reno, Nev., an owner and breeder, who has a ticket inscribed "Cross Bow, $30,000 to $100." The horse Cross Bow is owned by Baroni. He also owns the mare Rachel Potter, which recently won the El Rio Rey Handicap, paying $57.80 to $1.

LOCAL COFFROTH STAKE ODDS QUOTE FAVORITE'S PRICE A POINT HIGHER

Inquiry among local turf establishments developed that at least one veteran racing authority in St. Louis was making book against the rich Coffroth Handicap. According to his list of quotations, published below, the favorite, Princess Doreen, is at 6 to 1, while several other quotations are at variance with those of the Tia Juana books.

In the main, the local book follows the figures of the Jack Atkin book. The local prices were given out yesterday as follows:

COHEN AND STEIN TO MEET IN 40-GAME BOWLING CONTEST

Arrangements have been completed for a 40-game, total pins to count match, between Ben Cohen and Otto Stein Jr. The first block will be rolled at the Washington Alleys tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Stein and Cohen have met in two matches of this sort before, each gaining a victory.

Cohen at present time is rolling the best tenpins seen in St. Louis in a long time. Among feats credited to Cohen are the high three-game totals in three of the fastest leagues in the city, the Greater St. Louis Individual, the Major City and the Washington Scratch. He has an average of 205 for 54 games in the Greater St. Louis individual.

Stein has long been regarded as the best match game bowler in the city. The contest should produce some of the highest scores of the year for match game play as the home alleys of both contestants, the sixth floor of the Washington drives, will be used for the affair. The match will be run off in four blocks of ten games each, the first Monday, the second Tuesday and the third and fourth on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 18 and 19.

The BULL'S EYE

Editor and General Manager WILL ROGERS

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Follies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

The BULL'S EYE is a publication that goes to print. When does it go to print? It goes to print whenever there is something to print. A lot of papers, in fact to be exact, all of them, have a certain time to be issued, regardless of the news. If nothing has happened that day or that week they have to come out just the same. They want you to pay for them whether they are any good to you or not. Why should a paper be printed if there is nothing new to print?

Sing Sing don't electrocute a man at a certain hour every day. They wait until they get a good man and then electrocute him. They don't have a set time or custom, and that is the way the BULL'S EYE is operated. We don't go to press at ten o'clock tonight just because we went to press at ten last night. No, sir! We wait until we have something that is worth while to our myriads of readers. We get them accustomed to the fact that when they see the BULL'S EYE, they say to themselves, "The BULL has seen something worth while," and that is why the Paper is out today. Because it has news for you.

We saw a man smoking a sack of "BULL" DURHAM and he was getting so much satisfaction out of it that we feel it our duty to tell those that never used "BULL" DURHAM just how they too can get satisfaction.

Will Rogers

P. S. Remember, you won't see me again until we have something worth while.

P. P. S. There is going to be another piece in this paper soon. Look for it.

Year's Progress in Making a Better St. Louis With Money Authorized by Big Bond Issue

Summary for Information of Citizens of What Has Been Done in Last 12 Months on the Plaza Plan, Street Widening, Construction of New Buildings, and Other Projects Approved by Voters When They Decided to Raise $87,000,000 for Improvements.

MARKED progress in the $87,372,500 program of bond issue improvements was made by the city during 1925. Some of the projects are so large that the year only served to advance preliminary work on them, while others are scattered so that developments do not attract attention. To date, $10,435,336 of the bond money has been spent.

It was a year of construction and of planning. As the projects go forward the volume of annual construction increases, but the first few years of the program must necessarily be devoted to extensive preparations at City Hall. The voters who, on Feb. 9, 1923, nearly three years ago, authorized the bond issue, and thereby opened a new period of municipal history, see only new structures and facilities as they appear. They do not watch the engineers, draftsmen, surveyors and officials, who spend months in planning the improvements.

Plans, however, are an initial necessity.

No improvement undertaken in 1925 was as important to the city as the Charter amendment voted last April, permitting award of bond project contracts before issuance of the corresponding bonds. It is possible now to order work begun without having cash available to pay for it, and to sell bonds to meet the bills only as needed. This delays issuance of bonds and—this is the whole object—reduces the interest which the city must pay the bondholders.

Saving in Interest Charges.

Appropriations for bond work now amount to $1,373,111 more than the amount of bonds sold, but before the amendment was passed no such surplus could have been permitted. At various times since the amendment was passed appropriations aggregating $3,609,708 have been made in advance of bond sales. If requisite bond sales were delayed only six months, more than $72,000 in interest was saved.

The $1,000,000 Union Market and public garage building was the outstanding bond structure completed in 1925. Here are other high lights of the year's progress: Much work done on the Missouri River water plant, reservoir and pipe line; an important section of the River des Peres sewer work completed and additional construction started; plans for new courthouse well begun; contract let for electric street lights in a large central section; a number of main traffic arteries paved and detailed plans prepared for many more; considerable sewer construction achieved; a number of eleemosynary buildings constructed or designed; arrangements finished for viaduct to complete Kingshighway across Penrose Park; preparations made to start the $1,000,000 Municipal Service Building.

Progress of bond work naturally was slow in 1923, but increased in 1924. Almost a year ago the Post-Dispatch published figures illustrating progress thus far, which may be used for comparison now. The first column of figures following shows totals up to a year ago, while the second column shows totals up to Jan. 1, 1926:

Bonds sold	$14,500,000	$18,639,000
Funds appropriated	12,365,387	19,972,111
Expended	4,844,016	10,435,336
Interest on bonds.	568,750	1,210,851

Bonds Sold at Premium.

Interest on the bonds, it will be observed, amounts to a pretty penny. The rate of interest is 4½ per cent on all bonds issued so far, except on $4,139,000 worth sold Oct. 1, 1925, the only sale last year, which bear 4¼ per cent. The rate was lowered when it was found the market would assimilate this high-class investment security at a lower rate. The interest is paid from general tax revenue, from which the sinking fund is taken also, except for $12,000,000 of the bonds which are for the waterworks. It is necessary, therefore, to limit the amount of bonds issued annually, so that the interest and sinking fund will not make necessary a large increase of the tax rate. Interest and retirement of the waterworks bonds come from Water Department revenue. Interest received on bond proceeds deposits makes a considerable offset.

A year's interest at 4¼ per cent on only $1,000,000 of bonds amounts to $42,500.

Investment value of these bonds has been recognized by payment of premiums for them in five out of seven sales. On bonds for a face value of $12,500,000 sold in 1923 and 1924 a total premium of $159,753 was realized. However, there was a total discount of $68,549 on the other two sales. This occurred with the sale last October, because of the lower interest rate, and with a sale two years ago of waterworks bonds for which a higher interest rate had been proposed.

Progress of bond work in 1925, by items, is related hereafter:

Item 1.

$8,650,000 for property and surveys for street openings and widenings—$132,000 in bonds sold, making total $2,657,000; $2,252,003 spent. The most important project yet occurring under this, that of widening Olive street between Twelfth boulevard and Channing avenue, has been delayed for more than a year by a suit filed by property owners objecting to the condemnation method; this has tied up $1,942,604 of the revolving fund, which was paid into court to meet the expense till property assessments could release the fund for other projects; the case was argued and submitted to the State Supreme Court en banc, May 4, 1925, and a decision is expected shortly. A condemnation suit is pending to extend Skinker road from Delmar boulevard to Olive Street road and $94,401 of the revolving fund was paid into court for this. Other expenditures were for surveys, etc. Surveys and plans were made for about 25 street opening and widening projects and detailed study made of ownership of property in about 400 city blocks; these preparations involved long labor. Various condemnation procedures progressed.

Item 2.

$2,600,000 for Union Station plaza—No bonds sold yet. Condemnation for this and of the two blocks bounded by Eighteenth, Twentieth, Chestnut and Market streets was included with the procedure for widening Market street in 1924, and this has followed the usual slow course; commissioners still are working but may not report to court for more than a year.

Item 3.

$5,800,000 for paving new and existing streets—$287,000 in bonds sold, making total $431,000; $232,083 spent. Three important traffic arteries were paved, the city's share of cost totaling $144,000; Morgan street, between Fourteenth and Jefferson; Grand boulevard, between Kansas and Neosho, and Kingshighway, between Arsenal and Devonshire. The city set aside $40,000 for its share of extending Goodfellow avenue from McLaran to Hall's Ferry, where farm lands are becoming subdivisions; eventually Goodfellow will be a belt boulevard paralleling the city limits from Delmar boulevard to Riverview drive. The city is paying $27,000 for the grading of Skinker road extension from Delmar to Olive Street road. Ordinances are pending and plans prepared for these 13 sections of new paving, to cost a total of $676,600; Lindell, Spring to Kinghighway; Kingshighway, Lindell to Easton; Kingshighway, Devonshire to Gravois; Franklin, High to Jefferson, including widening by reducing sidewalks; Easton, Prairie to Marcus, including similar widening; Cass, Broadway to Glasgow, in two sections; West Florissant, Kingshighway Northwest to city limits; Watson, Pernod to city limits; Loughborough, Field to Gravois; West Pine, Grand to Kingshighway, but this may be delayed because willite is specified and Aldermen object to that material; Grand, Arsenal to Gravois; Jefferson, Park to Arsenal. In addition, plans have been prepared for eight street projects, to cost $170,000, to be done in 1927. Plans and an ordinance have been prepared for $205,000 for the city's share of paving widened Olive street, dependent on the court decision.

Item 4.

$8,000,000 to electrify the street lighting system—$650,000 in bonds sold, making total $900,000; $504,856 spent. Last month a $1,229,624 contract was let to a contractor backed by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., to install electric lights in three big adjacent sections, as follows: River-Arsenal-Compton-Chouteau, Jefferson-Chouteau-Grand-Cass, River-Cass-Grand-Angelica. This will cover, roughly, 250 miles of streets. About $160,000 was spent during the year for lights on various new streets or reimbursing private interests that advanced money for lights. The new contract caused the Westinghouse company to announce intention to erect a $1,000,000 concrete pole factory here.

Item 5.

$4,000,000 for the new courthouse—$150,000 in bonds sold; nothing spent. Memorial Plaza Commission was appointed during the year, comprising eight architectural and two engineering firms and two city engineers; it has undertaken the courthouse, to face the plaza, as its first project, and is giving it long and careful consideration; plans recently were virtually completed, but revision was decided on for improvement. Work on this monumental structure is expected to start in the spring.

Item 6.

$8,000,000 for building and repairing sewers—$600,000 in bonds sold, making total $2,228,000; $1,044,802 spent. Magnitude of construction projects going on underground in various parts of the city prevented undertaking much new work during the year, but some of these jobs were completed, notably one section of the North Baden public sewer, and two out of five contracts, covering 75 per cent of the total work, on the Ohio-Montrose relief sewer. Besides the seven sections of the North Baden and Ohio-Montrose projects, other work which progressed was on the Rocky Branch, Warne avenue, Rock Springs and Camp Springs sewers, and reconstruction of numerous old sewers. Contracts for sewer work for 1924-26 aggregate $2,782,600. Work accomplished already has benefited sections of the city by preventing street flooding and the flow of backwater into cellars, which used to occur frequently.

Item 7.

$11,000,000 to control the River des Peres, making it a closed sewer north of Manchester avenue—$117,000 in bonds sold, making total $1,267,000; $648,148 spent. Section A, 5700 feet long, in the Lindenwood district, has been completed; a year ago little had been done, as the work dragged along under an unfortunate contract, which was recalled and the city gave the job to another contractor under force account.

Citizens seeing the new work from the Fyler avenue viaduct wonder whether it means anything, since water backing up from the untamed river below has covered the open concrete channel with mud. It does mean something; this section alone has reduced the flood tendency, by acting as a dam and reservoir to protect the land downstream and adjacent. There is an eight-foot closed sewer beneath the open channel, which carries ordinary river and sewerage flows.

The city has spent $436,356 on this section, but has a claim of $80,000 against the bond of the unsuccessful contractor. Last September section B-1, adjoining A for 1200 feet upstream, was begun, in similar design, and it is about 60 per cent completed; this will cost about $100,000. It is planned to let contracts for similar section B-2 and C, carry-

All Europe Clings to Peace With Economic Troubles Just Ahead, Declares Lloyd George England Maintaining Ground Against Forces of Inflationism, but Beating Tomtoms Won't Drown Cries of Wounded Industries—French Inflation Must Soon Stop.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former Premier of England.

LONDON, Jan. 9.

NINETEEN TWENTY-FIVE was a good year for Europe. It saw a steady recovery all round from the destruction and temper of war. Everywhere nations applied themselves assiduously to the task of rebuilding their shattered commerce and their industry. The music of trowel and mallet was heard without ceasing in lands which for five years shuddered at the roar of cannon. Everybody is working. All nations are producing wealth. Real wealth is being made and accumulated. Some nations are producing better and selling more than they did before the war. This is conspicuously the case with France and Italy. Whilst they have recovered their old trade in the old markets almost entirely, they have established fresh lines of business in markets old and new.

The fever has gone out of the veins of the worker. The fitfulness and restlessness which were such disturbing features of the social and industrial situation in 1919, 1920 and 1921 are no longer apparent. These symptoms were, in those years, a cause of real anxiety to the men at the head of affairs in every European country. Anything or everything was possible. With audacious and skillful leadership such as was at their disposal, the discontented in Russia might well have produced similar results in other countries.

Demobilized Soldiers.

Millions of demobilized soldiers came home with the habit of quiet and steady industry bombarded out of their systems by war, with its excitement, its rush and, perhaps most of all, its periods of enforced idleness. They could not settle down; they were ready for anything except work and, had they been led by something better than the new type of conscientious objector thrown up by the war—surely the poorest specimens ever engendered by the human conscience—they might, in that mood, have wrecked all social order in Europe.

All that is gone and if 1920 could have come to earth in 1925 it would not have recognized its great-grandchild as belonging to the same family, so quiet and well-behaved was its demeanor. It has no family resemblance to 1920 or to 1921. There was one ugly episode when, in July, the transport workers joined the miners in a holdup of the community of Great Britain. But the Government, by its deplorable weakness, invited that threat. Had it displayed any firmness or prevision, that would never have occurred. It has had two evil results. It will cost the British taxpayer 30,000,000 pounds.

The second and more serious mischief is the effect it must have on labor. These methods have been indefinitely abandoned by labor organizations as pernicious and futile. Trade unions marched with resolute stride away from the direct action doctrines of 1920 and 1921. The success of the July holdup has swept opinion back in that direction.

Calamitous Blunder.

The Government's foolish surrender was a calamitous blunder. No one regrets it more than the saner leaders of the labor movement. They had recaptured control of the runaway steed and he was ambling quietly in the direction they wished to travel. He has since then become once more troublesome and fractious and when the Government nose-bag is taken off and the Treasury ceases to supply him with oats, he may bolt unless he is very strongly held.

Apart from the possible effect of that foolishness, labor throughout Europe is normal—in some countries subnormal—and there seems no danger in the immediate future from that quarter.

In Germany, Socialism is very tame, business struggling not so much—if at all—to reclaim fresh territory but just to hold what it can of the land it has already captured for its proletariat. The disappointments of the last few years have depressed its vitality. It has been satisfied to give up much of what it won from capitalism. Its energies are absorbed in keeping the hands of the Nationalists from the levers which direct Germany policy.

In France, the Socialists are engaged in demonstrating that they are the only body of men with any rational, practicable ideas as to how the budget should be balanced.

In Britain, they are busily employed dressing bogeys in bourgeois garments so they may not frighten the most timid wayfarer. In Belgium, they have actually coalesced with the Conservatives. Communism everywhere is a discredited stage rabble, with numbers just adequate to carry on the play. Its main use seems to be to provide banshees for Tory speeches in order to terrify the apathetic electorate.

Anything for Quiet.

The year 1925 was a tame year for sensation lovers. Locarno is sympathetic of its temper. The British Prime Minister, early in the year, sounded with his primitive tuning-fork its pitch when he ended his famous speech with "Give peace in our time, O Lord." Anything for a quiet life, is Europe's motto today. Germany is prepared to sign away Alsace-Lorraine and Malmedy forever, provided she is given peace, and France and Poland are ready to submit to arbitration, even on a question under the sacrosanct Treaty of Versailles, provided peace is guaranteed on their frontiers.

Italy is ready to bury liberty, so long as its dictator sees to it that agitators cease from troubling and industry is at rest. And the British House of Commons has assented, by overwhelming majorities, to subsidies on a large scale towards keeping up the level of wages. All for peace; that is the predominant passion of Europe today.

It would be a mood which would admirably suit the builder were it not for the fact that sound construction necessarily involves some preliminary destruction. Structures which are worthless and obstructive must be demolished and cleared out of the way. But Europe has seen so much demolition that it hates any pulling down.

That is one of the troubles of Great Britain, industrially as well as politically. Before Britain fully recovers her industrial position there is a good deal of bold work to be done in reconstructing her equipment, her organization and her ideas. One day the country will wake up to the imperative necessity of this task.

Not Good for Trade.

1925 was decidedly not a good year for British trade. Three of its greatest industries—coal, iron and steel—have gone back. In other trades there has been steady progress—but painfully slow. In comparison with 1913—taking real and not figural values—our export trade is down more than 20 per cent and 1925 is rather worse than 1924.

It is no use beating the tomtoms to keep up the courage of our industrial army and drown the cries of wounded industries. That is to resort to savagery. We have a decided advantage over our trade rivals in Europe. If wisely used, that may become a decisive advantage. We are the only great industrial country in Europe whose credit is built on solid foundations of "pay your way" finance. This financial integrity has lost us, temporarily, much trade and given us high unemployment and higher taxes.

But the trade we have, we have captured and retained against the forces of inflationism at their strongest and we have consolidated, each year, the positions we recovered, slightly extended our front and advanced a little here and there. We have lost ground in coal, but no one else has occupied that ground. It is lost through the inevitable erosion which comes from the action of tide and wave in the restless sea of industry. But elsewhere we have progressed.

What is the position of our most formidable competitors in the European market?

French Currency.

The depreciation of French currency is, for the moment, helping the French export trade. We cannot hit it because the franc is so low that our trade fires over its head. They cut and undersell in our own markets, outside our very factory doors. We cannot compete—but we can wait.

This kind of business with a debased coin is, in reality, the subsidizing of export trade at the expense of the French rentier—and to a smaller extent at the cost of the French ouvrier. It cannot go on indefinitely and when it ends it will stop with a bump that will upset many a cart.

German experience was a distressing lesson. As long as the printing presses turned out marks, German industry flourished but German credit flew. When the mark was stabilized, then came bankruptcy—the closing down of mines and factories, and unemployment. Germany is looking forward into 1926 with trepidation. American dollars may help her through her bad period when she is struggling to get over the depression which comes when drugtaking is suddenly stopped.

France is still injecting cocaine into her arm and the eyes of industry have an unhealthy brightness and its steps an exagger-

Moral Tone of "The Miracle."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE learned critic of music and the drama in his criticism of the "Miracle" in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch aroused my disgust to the point that it becomes vocal.

As far as I can make out his quarrel is simply that the spectacle is too religious and too narrowly Christian for his enlightened tastes. He is petulant over the fact that the unrepentent sinners, one and all, are met with fitting and awful punishment. He regrets that the renegade nun returns humble, contrite and forgiven. He would have her stand proud and defiant to the end, the symbol of emancipated womanhood; woman emancipated from moral obligation. He and Goethe would have her the sinner unrepentent and proud, yet in spite of that, saved in the end.

This great moral doctrine is, however, carefully cloaked with an air of erudition. Goethe's "Faust" and Wagner's "Tannhauser" are brought in to lend authority to his argument that the unrepentent sinner is saved in the end. This indeed is a comfortable moral code. It undoubtedly has a popular appeal. The young lady still in her "flapperhood" will read such learned pish with interest; the young blood will see his lax morality justified in it. Logically too he will see that it was even unjust to give Loeb and Leopold any term at all, and that to let the boys swing would have been ignorant and cruel injustice. Yet there are those who think that condign punishment is quite justifiable.

With all respect therefore to the erudite moralist, I seriously doubt his principles of morality. They are philosophically unsound. Nay, I have the audacity to enter the sanctum where he should be sanest and I make light too, of his principles of aesthetics. Since when has unpunished guilt become artistic? When did the principle of poetic justice cease to function as a principle of art? Let the critic rake over his erudition and answer me. WILFRED G. LAUER.

Unprogressive Theologians.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR correspondent in a recent issue, referring to the necessity for ministers of the church to possess themselves of the requisite information for solving the problems confronting us, certainly voiced a pressing need.

The satisfactory and permanent solution of these problems, be they social, political or individual, is not possible without a knowledge of divine ordinance, since man's propositions must of necessity meet God's dispositions in order to prevail.

This much being admitted, we would naturally seek guidance from the church and seeking fail to find, because the church is governed by a mentality, the quality of which is displayed in such episodes as those of Bishop Brown, Scopes and Rabbi Wise.

Unless it can adapt itself to the actualities of life, the church will eventually find that the ever-widening gap between itself and civilization has left it marooned upon a desert isle.

History "Debunked."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT was with interest and amusement that I read your comment on the distortion of American history. I have just finished reading an article in Harper's for December, entitled "Colonial History Debunked."

Among other things, the author says "nor was the Revolution itself any great Anglo-Saxon crusade for the protection of endangered liberty; it was a revolution brought about by economic and social interests which were different from those of Great Britain, and which can with a fair amount of accuracy be determined."

A far more important event in history was the wresting of Magna Carta from King John by the barons in 1215.

Is it not ironical that the people of this country have so little liberty, while the English, from whose rule America revolted, are the freest and most liberty-loving people in the world? Is it not also paradoxical that Americans who boast of their democracy, are one of the most snobbish nations of the world, and emphasize class distinctions which have long ago been abolished in other countries and are undreamed of in England?

Decline of the American Home.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THAT the American home was on the decline before the late war, was evident. Since that time the tendency has increased. Young people are not responsible for all of it. The saddest picture in America today is the silver-haired parents who have no religion or morals on which to build the first great institution—a home. When the home suffers, the other institutions, the state and nation, suffer. What Judge Harris of Fulton, Mo., told us in Sunday's Globe-Democrat will come true if parents do not put any restraint on the children. Children brought up without any ideas merely exist, as their souls are dead, no conscience. Selfishness and ingratitude, the two greatest sins, are too prevalent. Jazz music, jazz parties on New Year's eve in American homes will start many a young soul on a career of ruin.

INTERESTED.

RUMBLINGS AT WASHINGTON.

For years the farmer has swallowed the tariff hokum. Now he is fed up on it. That explains the trouble at Washington. The trouble is serious. So serious that the supposedly invincible Coolidge luck is staggering.

Except for the farmer there would be no dissatisfaction with the Tariff Commission other than the chronic fault-finding of the Democrats. Except for the farmer the tariff law would be enjoying popularity-plus, marred only by Democratic discontent. But the farmer, an economic outcast, is a potent political factor. His anger is something no party in power can disregard. It must be appeased. How to do it is a burning question for the administration. Can it be done by the tariff? Apparently not.

The present tariff law, so far as it relates to agricultural products, was dictated by the farmers. The schedules were written by the special representatives of the farmers in Congress; by the farm bloc under the leadership of Senator Capper of Kansas. The farm bloc went into a log-rolling combination with the other beneficiaries of protection. But protection has failed to protect the farmer.

Just what is the farmer's grievance? Is he not sharing in the general prosperity? Admittedly, he had a hard time of it after the war. But those impoverished years, we have been told, have passed. Men who ought to know have publicly rejoiced and felicitated themselves on the farmer's recovery. Mr. Coolidge has repeatedly remarked the farmer's happier circumstances. Other eminent personages have reiterated the joyful note. But a dissenting voice is heard, one that carries a good deal of authority, too.

B. F. Yoakum, a member of the board of the Frisco Railroad Co., declared in an interview in the New York World a few days ago, that "the American farmer is in a worse situation today than at any time in his history. * * * The farmer was never so unprosperous and so much in debt as he is today. The farmer's situation," he said, "presents the greatest, most far-reaching and most perilous economic problem with which the American people are faced."

The middleman, according to Yoakum, is taking the farmer's profits. Under the wretched distribution system "the producer receives a return of less than a third of the wealth he produces, while the organized distributers get more than two-thirds of the dollar paid by the ultimate consumer for the farmer's products." As a consequence the farmer is now facing bankruptcy. The remedy, Yoakum contends, is contained in the Curtis-Aswell bill. This bill would grant a Federal charter under which the farmers would control the distribution factor of their business as well as the production factor. Every other big industry, he argues, controls both of these essential factors of successful commerce. So must the farmer if he is to prosper.

Yoakum's diagnosis of the farmer's malady is unquestionably correct. But just how the remedy which he proposes could furnish the desired relief is not clear. Eliminating the middleman and making the farmer a distributer by legislative enactment seems a pretentious undertaking. Yet it is certain that the farmer cannot be condemned to poverty in the midst of the plenty of which he is the source. It is certain, too, that the farmer cannot much longer be denied his equitable share in the nation's abundance. And if it is true, as Yoakum says, that "the farmer was never so unprosperous as he is today," then the present rumbling at Washington may well frighten the party leaders and may well disturb industrial captains. They presage an upheaval.

THE ERMINE AND THE SAP BUCKET.

The ambition of most Attorneys-General of the United States is to land a place on that Olympus of the law, the United States Supreme bench. Apparently such a flame does not burn in the breast of John Garibaldi Sargent. Otherwise, how account for his failure to follow the sure-fire method of his predecessor, Harlan F. Stone?

Stone was marked for promotion the moment he began cracking heads without bothering to examine their labels. And when he horrified the Republican hierarchy by denouncing the Mellon aluminum company as an unlawful and contemptuous trust, his doom was sealed. From that moment, it was the ermine for Harlan.

Sargent, on the other hand, is just one of the boys. To him the Aluminum Trust wears a rosy aureole, and those who traduce it are muckers. So there's no point in promoting Sargent. When he has done his stint, it's the Vermont sap bucket for John Garibaldi.

RUBBER AND ALUMINUM.

Foreign monopolies in raw materials, take it from Mr. Hoover, are unjust and unsound. The Secretary of Commerce made that statement to a congressional committee Wednesday. By way of proof he told at considerable length the story of rubber. It is a sad story, and a costly experience for every American who rides on rubber tires or walks on rubber heels.

Since the British Government established its rubber monopoly the price of that commodity has gone boundingly up. It has been as high as $1.20 a pound. Now and then it has slumped, but it quickly recovers. For the last three months the average price has been $1.01 a pound. Its grand average for the whole year 1925 was 75 cents. When you compare this to the average price of 20 to 25 cents in 1924 you can see what this monopoly is doing to the ultimate consumer.

Mr. Hoover is distressed about it, and indignant. His emotions do him honor. May we venture the hope, though, that he has not exhausted his grief on rubber? We have a monopoly right here at home which, we believe, can stand right up in the presence of the rubber monopoly without batting an eye. The Mellon monopoly of aluminum is our exhibit. Aluminum prices, under the Mellon control, have done some rather lofty leaping. It is hardly too much to say that the alchemy of the Mellon brothers in turning aluminum into gold has been as marvelous as that of the British rubber barons.

Now, if it is a wicked and cruel thing for the British rubber baron to rob the American consumer is it not an equally wicked and cruel thing for an American aluminum baron to rob the American consumer? In the words of Togo, "we inquire to know." Perhaps our notion of commercial ethics is askew. Perhaps it is quite all right for an American profiteer to plunder Americans but altogether unorthodox for rapacious foreigners to do it. We dislike to think that Mr. Hoover really feels this way about it. Yet how else can we account for his arraignment of the British rubber monopoly and his serene, approving silence of the Mellon enterprise?

"THE MIRACLE'S" CHARM.

The debate of the critics concerning the treatment of the theme of "The Miracle" seems to lead nowhere. It is difficult to see any question of how the legend of Beatrice should be treated dramatically. It is the legend of Beatrice steeped with orthodox religious thought, with the medieval views of life and the divine order. To the intelligent observer who has some understanding of these things the drama is a moving spectacle, true to its theme.

In its essence "The Miracle" is a morality play, a presentation of life from a religious standpoint. Its theme is sin and its consequences, repentance and forgiveness. By the lures of the Evil One, the young nun is tempted beyond her strength, goes out into the world and is the victim of all its illusions. But she finds that "the wages of sin is death." Love and beauty turn to death and madness. Through her whole career of worldly freedom and pleasure the echo of the religious life in faint and far chants follow her—in the ecstacy of love, the height of power, and the depth of degradation—until, worn, weary and despairing, she turns back to the church and peace.

The Madonna, exemplifying divine love and mercy, steps from her pedestal as a living person, to shelter the erring and prepare the way for the penitent's return. If the Madonna did not do this, if the penitent did not return to find an opportunity for redemption and peace, there would be no miracle. The legend would be meaningless.

There seems to be a general agreement, however, on the beauty and skill of the production, the magnificence and appropriateness of the setting, the splendor of the pageantry and the charm of the music. There is a general agreement that the production touches the highest point of dramatic art.

It is not easy to account for the apparent indifference of the St. Louis people to the attraction of "The Miracle." The attendance here differs from that in any other city where "The Miracle" has been produced. The seats on the main floor are packed, while the balconies are somewhat neglected. As a matter of fact, the best view of the entire spectacle can be obtained from the balconies. To get the best impression of "The Miracle" one ought to see it from the front seats to enjoy the scenes and the pantomimic art on the stage, and then see it from the balcony, to get a full view of the entire spectacle. It is possible to get a complete view, in fact, only from the balcony. The cheaper seats are the best, and the value received is far beyond that of any other production on the stage. The increasing audiences, however, indicate that here, as in other cities, there will be a rush in the last 10 days of the engagement, which will shut out many who want to go. In all the other cities there has been a great demand for a continuation of the engagement.

As a community venture, in view of its extraordinary merits, "The Miracle" ought to be a thorough success.

A W. C. T. U. OUTCAST.

Mrs. Bertha Shippen Irving has been dropped from membership by a branch of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. because of her opposition to the present prohibition law.

Her opposition to the law, as reported by the Associated Press, is well reasoned and sincere. Prohibition, she feels, is a means of acquiring temperance. It has failed. Her conclusion is that people cannot be made good by legislation and "no law can be enforced which has not the vast majority of the people back of it."

So Mrs. Irving has been dropped. This particular branch of the W. C. T. U., apparently, demands conformity and will not tolerate honest conviction. It may comfort the deposed lady, however, to know that in her understanding of law and the limitations of the law she is in the august company of the greatest jurists.

AFTER SO LONG A TIME.

Federal and state authorities share the responsibility of avenging the murders of rich Osage Indians that shocked Oklahoma and the Southwest in 1922 and 1923. Quite recently there have been arrests, a confession and grand jury hearings that arouse hope that belated justice may be done to the criminal conspirators who would snuff out human lives for sordid gain.

Whatever grand jury hearings or later trials reveal; whether the guilty shall pay the penalty or not, these Osage murders are one of the blackest chapters in all the unsavory history of Indian spoliation by the predatory and unscrupulous white men, as murder is worse than fraud or trickery without such violent complication. But one murder is involved in the charges recently filed against four men, including W. K. Hale, wealthy ranchman, and known as "King of the Osage Hills," the list of mysterious killings is long, and all had their bearing on the wealth or heritages of the opulent Osages.

When Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, visited Oklahoma recently, he said that Indian affairs were satisfactory to the Government and the Indians. He is in a position to speak for the Government, but he might know the Indians better. They are far from satisfied with the treatment at the hands of the Government, many of them seeking a parity with the rest of the population in their affairs, and objecting to Federal restraint and leading strings. Yet, while the Government does exercise such supervision as now prevails, it should not be satisfied without proper protection for the Indians and their wealth.

Abandonment of the Ozarks by a considerable part of their population in the last few years has had the effect of bringing wild creatures back. Perhaps the wild creatures are really not any wilder than some of the people who left, but they are at least better game. The Piedmont Journal-Banner says a man living seven miles from Williamsville saw a herd of 25 deer tearing shocked corn down in one of his fields a short while ago, and the Piedmont Register reports another herd of seven deer recently seen in that part of the State. The wild turkey is coming back. It is more numerous this year than it has been in a quarter of a century. Seven wild turkeys actually flew into Cuba, Mo., just before Christmas, and five of the Christmas turkeys served in that town were bagged through the window.

The debate as to whether Frank Munsey died as a journalist or a grocer is still going on. The Pope thinks St. Paul would be a publicist if he lived now, but we don't think he would engage in the chain grocery business on the side. At any rate he said: "This one thing I do."

"Yes. The mother is the young-looking one."

TELLING ONE'S AGE.

Telling one's age is a mistake. Letting others keep tab on it besides ourselves, is not a part of wisdom. And there is no valid reason for them to know. Concealing the age is in woman an instinct, implanted by Nature; in man it must and will be implanted by dire necessity, when he finds himself in a jobless world in the prime of life. When you have reached that time of life looked upon as old age, your days of usefulness are over. Whatever your qualifications, you are put on the shelf. Is woman wise? He will discover, who broaches the subject of her age. And that wisdom must eventually and inevitably come to man. Must and will come to him in a world which has come to be almost exclusively a young people's world. Stupid man will in time find that he can profit by woman's wisdom. He will look upon those who broach the subject of his age as considering him about ready to put on the shelf; and he will say to himself, as the woman does: "Thank you! You may put me there, but not with any help of mine."

The man who is qualified and physically able to hold his own, is unjust to himself when he invites removal to a back seat by disclosing his age to the first person inquiring about his health. Let them guess. If they guess it, well and good; if they miss it by 20 years, so much better. It may mean that many more years of useful endeavor are ahead of him, in the front seats, which his ability and qualifications may entitle him to occupy.

Don Seitz, himself an editor and business manager for 30 years on a great newspaper, thinks the press is no longer the watchdog it was and disposes to fall short of those ideals laid down for it by the great newspaper makers. There is no question that this is the tendency of the press, and right grievously do we mark it. However, there are great and courageous newspapers, including that from which Mr. Seitz has just gone to the Outlook, and when the 90 schools of journalism maintained by American colleges and universities begin to flood the newspaper offices with workers inspired by the ideal of public service conceived by the great we shall have no reason to worry about the press.

"Ars longa," said the ancients, knowing quite well the patience of art. It is not a patience as quickly rewarded in our own country as one might have expected after the flying start we got in New England. Nevertheless, Publisher Nelson of the Kansas City Star left much of his fortune for a public art museum in Kansas City, which has been about as barren of art as a prairie dog is of feathers. Now comes Frank Munsey, another publisher, who leaves much of his fortune to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, something in which he had never seemed to be very much interested while alive. So art can afford to wait. Its reward is certain.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

FIRST-PAGE NEWS STORIES.

CHARLES MERZ in the New Republic.

CERTAINLY it is true that with the personal element introduced, a good story becomes an even better story. The race to Nome became a great story when we knew that Gunnar Kasson drove the dogs; the Scopes trial at Dayton reached its heights only when it had become a bitter personal brawl between Bryan and Clarence Darrow. * * * The next factor, as I see it, is that this personal fight must be between well-identified antagonists. * * * If Col. Mitchell had fired one resounding broadside and waited for the echo he would not have been a national figure for the year 1925. He was a national figure because the poolrooms and the Sunday schools, the barber shops and the cigar stores could talk him over between sallies. * * * Into the best story enters the element of suspense. The best news story, like the most successful fiction in the magazines, leaves the readers counting hours for the next edition. * * * In some form and at some point the element of suspense enters into every great news story; suspense as to the story's end in life or death, in victory or defeat, in honor or demotion. * * * It is charged that the press is willfully destructive; that it will print anything derogatory to any man on its first page, and anything commendatory to him on page 20. Thus, for example, the case of William Brassfield, a Negro arrested in New York City for the murder of a Miss Florence Kane. Brassfield's arrest was first-page news. The New York Times, for instance, carried the story there, with two full columns of newsprint and a six-galleyed headline. Then Brassfield was exonerated. What happened? The Times buried this second piece of news on page 21, with three inches of type and a microscopic headline. Was the Times out to do Brassfield as much harm as possible? I doubt it. The trouble with Brassfield's exoneration was this: with no fight and no suspense it did not make a story. Do not look to the press for exonerations. Look to it for stories.

A VISION OF THE FUTURE.

From the New Republic.

WAR DEPARTMENT engineers, surveying the Tennessee River basin, have shown the possibility of hydro-electric power greater than that to be gained in the United States by the harnessing of Niagara. Its exploitation would create a great series of lakes and a navigable waterway to the Mississippi basin. With the valuable natural deposits in the region, an industrial development is possible rivalling the Ruhr in Germany, for dominance of which nations have sacrificed lives and treasure. We suppose that most Americans will greet this news by throwing their hats in the air and cheering on the usual pioneering scramble for profits. But here is a clear alternative which should be seriously considered. We have, as a nation, discovered a new source of common wealth, a way to increase comfort and happiness for millions. By foresight and control we can get the utmost common benefit out of it—well planned industrial centers, not too large, with good houses occupied by healthy and satisfied workers with a recognized function in industry, surrounded by prosperous farming regions in which the farmers would have the advantage of cheap power and needs of the rest of the nation.

DISCUSSION OF NEW ZONING ORDINANCE AT LUNCHEON

Real Estate Exchange Members Will Meet Chamber of Commerce Men.

There will be a public discussion of the proposed zoning ordinance, which is now before the Board of Aldermen, at a joint luncheon meeting of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and the Chamber of Commerce at the chamber's dining room Wednesday.

Members of the Board of Aldermen and City Plan Commission have been invited to hear the discussion. No resolutions will be adopted and the meeting will be devoted entirely to a free discussion of the proposed new ordinance. John J. Dowling, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, will preside.

FUNERAL OF EBEN C. ROBINSON

Services to Be Held Today at First Presbyterian Church.

Funeral services for Eben C. Robinson, president of the E. C. Robinson Lumber Co., with offices in the Arcade Building, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today from the First Presbyterion Church, Washington boulevard and Sarah street. Burial will be in Valhalla Cemetery.

Mr. Robinson, who was 78 years old, died of pneumonia Friday at his home, 5507 Waterman avenue. He came to St. Louis from Kansas in 1890 and founded the lumber company which bears his name. He was active in the direction of his company until taken ill several weeks ago. He was treasurer of the Masonic Temple Association, and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Katherine Robinson; two daughters and three sons, one of whom, Arthur D. Robinson, resides in Shanghai, China.

ing the work to Manchester avenue, in the spring, at estimate cost of $1,300,000. The closed section, which is desired especially to protect Forest Park and residence districts, cannot be built till there is an adequate section completed downstream, but the river crossing at Delmar boulevard and the Wabash tracks is done.

A condemnation suit for land to straighten River des Peres was necessary, as for a street, but the suit is held up in court because of the difficulty of getting proper service on many property owners who cannot be located. Defendants number 280 property owners.

Item 8.

$2,500,000 for new parks and playgrounds—no bonds sold in 1925, but $90,000 worth sold previously to cover purchase of Lemp's Park for a community center. Progress under this item awaits development of other items.

Item 9.

$1,300,000 for improvement of parks and playgrounds—$327,000 in bonds sold, making total $602,000; $232,225 spent. Expenditures in 1925, amounting to about $70,000, were scattered about the city for various improvements, including swimming pool developments, bleachers and equipment, etc.

Item 10.

$400,000 for aquarium at the zoo—no bonds sold yet. The zoo architect has virtually completed the plans, but construction will await progress under other items.

Item 11.

$1,000,000 for municipal service building—no bonds sold in 1925 but $1,000,000 worth were sold previously, as an early start was planned; $6920 spent. However, a long wrangle ensued over details of the plan, and some further delay over selection of architects. Interest on these bonds, which so far have been almost useless, amounted to $94,375 up to Jan. 1, but about half of this was repaid in bank interest. The architects began designing this structure, which will cover all of the old Four Courts block, last month, and the contract may be let in the spring. Included in the building will be a heating plant for the whole Memorial Plaza group, a transformer station to supply the plaza group with purchased electricity, a city garage for more than 300 cars and a shop for all Fire Department testing and repair work.

Item 12.

$4,500,000 for eleemosynary institutions—$440,000 in bonds sold, making total $2,050,000; $1,153,364 spent. A $140,000 school building is about to be opened at the St. Louis Training School for the Feeble Minded and a $90,000 boys' dormitory there will be ready next month. At Koch Hospital a $283,000 men's infirmary was finished last July and a kitchen on which $70,000 in bond funds was spent was done last October, as was a $269,000 employes' building.

Boys detained at Bellefontaine Farms have been working for more than a year on a $50,000 manual training building, on which they will do all work except plumbing, heating and wiring. A contract has just been let for a $286,000 administration, employes' and kitchen building at Isolation Hospital. An ordinance to repeal selection of a site next to Sumner High School for a Negro city hospital is pending; many Negroes desire this site, but city officials believe efficiency will be served by putting the hospital next to the present institution at Fourteenth street and Lafayette avenue.

The badly needed new morgue has been delayed again by the City Counselor's opinion that no funds under this bond item can be devoted to it; there is available from the 1920 bond issue $68,000 for the morgue, but the sort of structure desired would cost $258,000; this item of the 1923 issue was supposed to furnish $140,000 more, but the Counselor's opinion was given recently when still another $50,000 was sought from this item.

Two ordinances are pending to improve city sanitarium; one would provide $466,000 for an employes' building group to give rooms and recreation quarters for 300 employes now forced to live next to insane patients; this would vacate space for 800 more patients, there being 3000 crowded there now; the other ordinance would provide $238,000 for a patients' auditorium, dance floor and gymnasium, an employes' dining room and large southern sunrooms for patients.

Item 13.

$5,000,000 for municipal auditorium—$50,000 in bonds sold, none having been sold previously; nothing spent. Condemnation proceedings for the ground, at the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Market streets, have been under way for some time, but the Memorial Plaza Commission will not begin planning this building till the courthouse is started.

Item 14.

$6,000,000 for Memorial Plaza and veterans' memorial building—$1,050,000 in bonds sold, none having been sold previously; $1030 spent. Condemnation proceedings have been under way for more than a year for the site, extending between City Hall Park and Central Library, west of Twelfth boulevard, and ordinances were passed recently permitting direct purchase of several lots facing the library on Olive street. The Memorial Plaza Commission will plan the general layout of the plaza and design the memorial after the auditorium plan is started.

Item 15.

$186,000 in bonds sold, making total $440,000; $104,412 spent. New house No. 17, Leonard and Easton avenues, costing $43,000, was occupied several weeks ago, and new house No. 56, Kingshighway and Kingshighway Southeast, costing the same, is nearly done. Five pumping engines, three aerial trucks and two city service trucks, costing a total of about $120,200, were ordered during the year and one aerial and one service truck have been delivered. There was some delay over the order for pumpers, and an acrimonious discussion, concerning specifications. Additional equipment is to be ordered soon and the horse's days of fire glory are numbered.

Item 16.

$1,600,000 for eliminating railroad grade crossings. No bonds sold in 1925, but $65,000 worth sold previously; $895 spent. An ordinance was passed recently for a $210,000 viaduct carrying Kingshighway through Penrose Park and across the Terminal Railroad; the Terminal will pay $125,000 of the cost; construction will start about March. Kingshighway now stops at either side of Penrose Park; eventually the Park Department will take up construction of a connecting viaduct to tie in Kingshighway Northeast. The Delmar boulevard grade separation has been delayed indefinitely by the appeal of the Wabash Railway to the Supreme Court of the United States from an order to carry out the city's plan for this separation; a demand by Mayor Miller that the road cease resisting has been ignored; the incidental River des Peres sewer work was completed last June and heavy traffic here still has to use a makeshift bridge.

Item 17.

$1,500,000 for western railroad approach to municipal bridge, to serve South Side manufacturers—No bonds sold yet. This is in abeyance till the general terminal situation is settled.

Item 18.

$1,500,000 for northeastern (Gerhart) approach to municipal bridge—This was killed effectually by a referendum vote.

Item 20.

$1,250,000 for public markets—$150,000 in bonds sold, making total $1,150,000; $1,000,053 spent on Union Market and garage, which is serving the people effectively. This structure cost $1,275,000, $274,947 coming from general funds, for the garage section. It is expected that about $200,000 a year will be realized by the city from stall rental and automobile storage, enough to cover retirement of these bonds and operating expenses. A plan is being worked out to use the basement of this centrally located building for an interurban bus terminal. The $249,047 left in this item will be divided evenly between Soulard and Biddle markets; studies being made indicate new buildings probably will be erected.

Item 21.

$12,000,000 for Missouri River waterworks—No bonds sold in 1925; $4,500,000 worth sold previously; $3,164,540 spent. Almost $5,000,000 worth of contracts have been let, in all, covering construction, dikes, etc., and nearly $500,000 spent for real estate and rights-of-way. The intake and low-service engine pit are nearly done and the high-service engine pit is 60 per cent complete. During 1925 three-fourths of the 16½-mile pipe line, five feet in diameter, to connect the plant with the city, was laid, and two and a half miles of roads built. Much of the work has been done on the huge reservoir at Stacy Park, Olive Street and Bonhomme roads; this will hold 100,000,000 gallons of water—only a day's supply for St. Louis. Plans and specifications for the following units, involving much office work, are nearly done: Boilers, engines, engine house, boiler house, filter house, coagulant house, filters and basins; contracts for some of these will be let within 60 days and the rest will follow at frequent intervals during 1926. Much river control and other preparatory work was done before 1925; the plant should be in service by 1928.

The total of bonds authorized for issuance in 1925 was $6,000,000, and in 1926, $7,000,000, a total of $13,000,000. City fiscal authorities are hopeful that the full amount may not have to be issued this year. As only $4,139,000 in bonds were sold last year, the city may desire to issue $8,861,000 worth this year, exclusive of waterworks bonds, of which possibly $3,500,000 worth may be issued. A tentative program for the year has been prepared by the president's department of the Board of Public Service, subject to revision and approval by that body, the Citizens' Supervisory Bond Issue Committee, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Board of Aldermen. Under this program, $4,660,000 in bonds would be sold next March and $4,279,500 worth next October. Adding the two proposed sales, this money would be divided among items as follows:

Street opening and widening, $524,000; street paving, $1,292,000; electric street lights, $1,350,000; courthouse, $2,250,000; sewers, $1,182,000; River des Peres work, $960,000; park and playground improvement, $250,000; eleemosynary institutions, $550,000; municipal auditorium, $130,000; Memorial Plaza, $30,000; Fire Department equipment and houses, $323,500; grade crossing elimination, Arsenal street bridge over Frisco Railroad, $90,000.

ated sprightliness. But this year she must stabilize or see her franc join the billion mark in ether. Then it would be better to be a British trader with a sound, if diminished business that enables him, without worry or privation, to pay the dole than a French trader who knows not where to find enough gold francs to pay his wage bill and buy his raw material. I am far from predicting disaster—or any kind of crash—for French industry.

Saving Much Paper.

Frenchmen of all classes are working well and saving much paper. They will do better when they work equally well and save gold. They have improved their factories beyond recognition. France is, since the war, one of the best equipped countries in the world. She will therefore go through the hard time whilst she is redeeming the accumulated follies of the last six years of dishonest finance.

A great French industrialist whom I saw recently, foretold that this summer would see the beginning of the French slump. The sooner it comes, the shorter it will last.

The same observations apply, but in a more limited degree to Italy. The Mussolini regime, with all its glaring faults, has balanced its budget, but it has eyt to stabilize the lira. When it does, there will be a temporary setback to the prosperity of Italian industry.

School Association to Be Formed.

A mass meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Yeatman High School auditorium, Garrison and Natural Bridge avenue, to organize the Beaumont High School Patrons' Association. William Hehmann is temporary chairman.

MOONEY SLATED FOR RED HAT

Brooklyn Paper Says American Prelate Will Be Further Honored.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Brooklyn Eagle today says that Monsignor Edward Mooney of Cleveland, O., who has been designated by the Vatican as Apostolic Deelgate to India, is slated to be the next American Cardinal.

Advices received by the paper from Rome contain news of the selection as Apostolic Delegate of Monsignor Mooney, who is now spiritual director of the American College in Rome. The Eagle states that it learned from an authoritative source that he will be further honored by receiving the Red Hat.

Reserve Regiment to Play War Game.

The regular monthly meeting of officers of the 451st Infantry, reserve regiment, will be held at Washington University at 7 p. m. tomorrow. A feature will be a war game involving an infantry division operating out of St. Louis. The following officers have been assigned commands in the tactical problem: Maj. W. P. Edmunds, Maj. T. J. Stangier, Capt. H. S. Townsend and Lieut. W. B. Peltason.

SIX MEN SENTENCED FOR VIOLATIONS OF DYER ACT

Two Who Plead Guilty Before Judge Faris Get 4 Years, Others Get 2 Years Each.

"It simply isn't done," Federal Judge Faris remarked yesterday of the practicability of keeping ahead of the law. He was sentencing Albert Burkhart, who had a criminal record, to four years in the penitentiary on a plea of guilty to a charge of driving a stolen automobile from South Bend, Ind., to St. Louis.

"I regret to see from your record," said the Court, "that you have set out to beat the law. You should know by this time that it cannot be done. History is full of such cases."

He sentenced Richard von Eschen to a like term on his plea of guilty to a similar charge. Federal Judge Davis, on pleas of guilty to charges under the Dyer act, sentenced Eugene and Charles Young and Bernard Long, who were arrested together, to two years' imprisonment, and James Henderson to 18 months' imprisonment.

552 FATALITIES IN ACCIDENTS IN ST. LOUIS IN 1925

Safety Council Report Attributes 192 Deaths to Motor Vehicles, 93 to Falls in Home.

80 PERSONS WERE KILLED IN INDUSTRY

Police Court Judges and the Police Commended for Their Work in Enforcing Traffic Laws.

Accidents claimed a toll of 552 men, women and children in St. Louis during 1925, according to figures made public yesterday by the St. Louis Safety Council.

Reviewing the year's accident fatalities under the division of "Public," "Home" and "Industrial," the report sets forth that there were 192 deaths attributed to motor vehicles, 93 from falls in the home and 26 elsewhere, 67 persons died of burns in the home and four elsewhere, and 80 were killed in industry, 22 in manufacturing plants and 58 otherwise.

Traffic Accident Situation.

As to traffic accidents the report asserts that "a close study of the facts herein cited leaves little room for doubt that improvement has been made in the traffic accident situation of the city during the past year, and that there is still room for tremendous improvement. It is not a fact, of which St. Louis should be proud, that 21 motorists out of 192 involved in accidents, in which someone was fatally injured, left the scene of an accident without even stopping to render first aid to their victims.

The Safety Council and Automobile Dealers' Association and other organizations have offered rewards for the arrest and conviction of those guilty of such contemptible felony, but even this activity has not improved the situation."

Of the total of motor vehicle fatalities, 149, or 77 per cent, were the result of collisions between motor vehicles and pedestrians, an increase of 9 per cent over 1924. Eight of the victims were under five years of age and 73 were more than 50 years old, representing 70 per cent of the 149 pedestrians killed. The report comments that 99 of the pedestrians were male and 50 were female; that 88, or 52 per cent, of the fatalities, occurred at street intersections, and 56, or 49 per cent, between intersections; four happened in parks and one on a viaduct.

How 31 Children Were Killed.

Of the 31 children under the age of 16 killed, 19 died in accidents in which passenger cars were involved, 11 in accidents involving trucks, and one child was killed in a collision with a police patrol wagon.

There were 41 accidental deaths in collisions between motor vehicles and motor vehicles with other objects such as fire plugs, telephone poles, etc. In one of these instances the driver fled the scene of accident, but was later apprehended and charged with felonious wounding.

The review also comments that the highest number of deaths—25—occurring in any one month was October. However, the point is made that in the first four months of the year there was a 50 per cent increase of fatalities over the corresponding period in 1924.

Bearing of Law Enforcement.

"It is a most significant fact," says the report, "that the change of attitude in the city courts in the treatment of traffic violators began here on May 1, this year. The Safety Council has long held that the law enforcement has a direct bearing and a very close connection with the traffic accident problem, and the figures quoted more than bear out this conclusion.

"The citizens of St. Louis should extend their thanks to the judges of the police courts for the great work they are doing in strictly enforcing the traffic regulations of this city. The Police Department, too, deserves praise for this record, as their motorcycle squad and traffic division have been unusually active under the present administration."

Figures are presented to show that 34,564 traffic cases were tried in 1925, as against 24,736 in 1924, and fines for 1925 were $245,481, as against $102,690 the previous year. Sixty-four motorists were fined $6497 in City Court No. 1 for driving while intoxicated, and 128 such drivers were fined $19,778 in City Court No. 2.

Report on Intoxicated Drivers.

"Intoxicated drivers have played an important part in the death roll for 1925," the report adds. "A special committee, of which Chief of Police Gerk is chairman, is now considering further and more impressive law enforcement measures calculated to reduce driving while intoxicated and to result in fewer motorists leaving the scene of automobile accidents."

The report also points out that there are 950 more accidents of all classifications from January to May, 1925, than for the corresponding period in 1924, while for the balance of the year, the number, by coincidence, was exactly the same.

Classification of Fatalities.

Under the three mentioned classifications, the figures for all accident fatalities for 1925 were as follows:

Public—motor vehicle, 192; falls, 26; steam railway, 16; street car, 16; horsedrawn vehicle, 3; runaway, 1; bicycle, 2; elevator, 1; poison, 3; drowning, 9; falling material, 1; burns, 4; miscellaneous, 2.

Home—burns, 67; falls, 93; asphyxiation, 11; electrocution, 2; poison, 7; drowning, 3; firearms, 10; infection, 2; miscellaneous, 1.

Industrial — manufacturing, 22; other than manufacturing, 58.

Opposition to Recognition of ico Based on Belief in Ri Destinies—Backed by Pres

By WILLIAM JE

Edited and Corrected by

NOTE:—This part of Mr. Bryan rs. Bryan during his term of offi the following article how the Sta dealt with the trouble in Mexico d position to the pressure brought to f the smoothing out of difficulti American republics.

N dealing with the Mexican situation, we had a number of important questions to consider. he first was whether Huerta hould be recognized. A great deal f pressure was brought to bear on he administration by American usiness interests in Mexico, and uch of my time during the first ew months was occupied in hear- g delegations which came to urge Huerta's recognition. None of hem attempted to defend either e character of the man or the ethods by which he had secured s office. The pleas were all along e same line and ran in substance s follows:

"We do not care to say anything bout Huerta individually nor bout the way in which he obained office, but a strong man is ecessary to preserve order in exico, and he is the only strong an in sight. If the United States ecognized him, he can get money, nd with money he can put down he insurrection."

The speeches to which I listened ere so similar that I finally adopt- a stereotyped reply, namely:

"You believe, do you, that Diaz as the kind of man needed to preerve order in Mexico?" They always answered, "Yes."

"Do you think that Huerta would itate the methods and re-estab- h his regime?"

"Yes."

"If, after 30 years of experient with his policy, Diaz, with orld-wide prestige and splendid redit could not maintain himself gainst Madero, but saw his Govrnment crushed like an eggshell, hat reason have you to believe t Huerta, not only with prestige d credit, but guilty of high ason and blamed for the death f Madero, will be able to succeed here Diaz failed?"

No answer was attempted.

istrusted Ambassador.

The American Ambassador at exico was very insistent upon the ecognition of Huerta, but the recds seemed to show that he was o intimately associated with the hange in Government to be in position to speak without bias. here were in the beginning some ficials in Washington who took e position that we could not roperly inquire into the ethics o he methods employed, or as to hether the Huerta Government epresented the people of Mexico.

My answer was, first, that I was o unaccustomed to the consideraon of public questions separated om both morals and the princiles of popular government that as not able to endorse the posiion of those who favored the recgnition of Huerta.

Second, the question of intervenng was broached from time t me, and we had to meet a danerous form of argument which as many times led nations into ar. It begins with an assumption nd upon that assumption predates an act which results in hlities. In this case the argument an as follows:

First: We must intervene soone r later.

Second: Since we must intervene me time, the sooner, the better.

Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan

Struggle to Save Small Latin American Nations From Financial Despotism

Opposition to Recognition of Huerta as President of Mexico Based on Belief in Right of People to Decide Own Destinies—Backed by President Wilson.

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.
Edited and Corrected by Mary Baird Bryan.

NOTE:—This part of Mr. Bryan's memoirs was dictated by him to Mrs. Bryan during his term of office as Secretary of State. He tells in the following article how the State Department of the United States dealt with the trouble in Mexico during the Huerta regime, of his opposition to the pressure brought to bear in favor of intervention, and of the smoothing out of difficulties with other Central and South American republics.

IN dealing with the Mexican situation, we had a number of important questions to consider. The first was whether Huerta should be recognized. A great deal of pressure was brought to bear on the administration by American business interests in Mexico, and much of my time during the first few months was occupied in hearing delegations which came to urge Huerta's recognition. None of them attempted to defend either the character of the man or the methods by which he had secured his office. The pleas were all along the same line and ran in substance as follows:

"We do not care to say anything about Huerta individually nor about the way in which he obtained office, but a strong man is necessary to preserve order in Mexico, and he is the only strong man in sight. If the United States recognized him, he can get money, and with money he can put down the insurrection."

The speeches to which I listened were so similar that I finally adopted a stereotyped reply, namely:

"You believe, do you, that Diaz was the kind of man needed to preserve order in Mexico?" They always answered, "Yes."

"Do you think that Huerta would imitate the methods and re-establish his regime?"

"Yes."

"If, after 30 years of experiment with his policy, Diaz, with world-wide prestige and splendid credit could not maintain himself against Madero, but saw his Government crushed like an eggshell, what reason have you to believe that Huerta, not only with prestige and credit, but guilty of high treason and blamed for the death of Madero, will be able to succeed where Diaz failed?"

No answer was attempted.

Distrusted Ambassador.

The American Ambassador at Mexico was very insistent upon the recognition of Huerta, but the records seemed to show that he was too intimately associated with the change in Government to be in a position to speak without bias. There were in the beginning some officials in Washington who took the position that we could not properly inquire into the ethics of the methods employed, or as to whether the Huerta Government represented the people of Mexico.

My answer was, first, that I was unaccustomed to the consideration of public questions separated from both morals and the principles of popular government that I was not able to endorse the position of those who favored the recognition of Huerta.

Second, the question of intervention was broached from time to time, and we had to meet a dangerous form of argument which has many times led nations into war. It begins with an assumption and upon that assumption predicates an act which results in hostilities. In this case the argument ran as follows:

First: We must intervene sooner or later.

Second: Since we must intervene some time, the sooner, the better.

Advice to Wilson.

After several conferences with the President on the subject of intervention, I presented my views on the subject in a letter which reads as follows:

"Oct. 28, 1913.

"My Dear Mr. President:

"From your speeches at Swarthmore and Mobile, I take it that you are revolving in your mind the statement which you are soon to make of your Mexican policy. I take the liberty, therefore, of presenting for your consideration, the conclusions that have been running through my mind.

"I was in doubt as ti how our country's position could be so stated as to link the new position with the earlier statements of the Monroe Doctrine, and did not see daylight until the publication of that statement then attributed to Huerta, but now believed to be entirely false.

"The first announcement of the Monroe doctrine was intended to protect the Republic of America from the political power of European nations—to protect them in their right to work out their own destiny along the lines of self-government. The next application of that doctrine was made by Cleveland when this Government insisted that European governments should submit their controversies with American republics to arbitration, even in the matter of boundary lines.

"A new necessity for the application of the principle has arisen, and the application is entirely in keeping with the spirit of the doctrine and carries out the real purpose of that doctrine. The right of American republics to work out their own destiny along lines consistent with popular government is just as much menaced today by foreign financial interests as it was a century ago by the political aspirations of foreign governments. If the people of an American republic are left free to attend to their own affairs, no despot can long keep them in subjection; but when a local despot is held in authority by powerful financial interests, and is furnished money for the employment of soldiers, the people are as helpless as if a foreign army had landed on their shores. This, we have reason to believe, is the situation in Mexico, and I cannot see that our obligation is any less now than it was then. We must protect the people of these republics in their right to attend to their own business, free from external coercion, no matter what form that external coercion may take.

"Your utterance in regard to conquest was timely. We must be relieved of suspicion as to our motives. We must be bound in advance not to turn to our own advantage any power we employ. It will be impossible for us to win the confidence of the people of Latin America, unless they know that we do not seek their territory or ourselves desire to exercise political authority over them. If we have occasion to go into any country, it must be as we went into Cuba, at the invitation of the Government, or with assurances that will leave no question as to the temporary character of our intervention. Our only object must be to secure to the people an opportunity to vote, that they may themselves select their rulers and establish their government. . . .

"I shall be at your command tomorrow and hold myself in readiness to call at the White House upon a moment's notice, but I thought best to put these suggestions in writing and have them ready for you on your return.

"With assurances of my great respect, I am,

"My dear Mr. President,
"Very sincerely yours,
'W. J. BRYAN."

Cultivating Good Will.

I was gratified to find the President resolutely opposed to intervention except as a last resort, and I regarded his refusal to yield to pressure on this subject as one of the most meritorious acts of his administration. Intervention was avoided with its indefinite cost of blood and money, and its incalculable penalty of incurring the ill will of all Spanish people in America.

Another problem was found in the formulation of a reason for opposing the machinations and political intrigues of foreign concessionaries in the republics of Central and South America.

The Monroe Doctrine, as interpreted and applied, gave us a sufficient reason for objecting to interference by foreign governments, but it had never been so interpreted as to justify an objection to the conduct of foreign residents and private corporations owned by foreign countries.

It had long been obvious that foreign influences exerted through private individuals and private corporations can as effectivelyoverthrow popular government in the Latin-American republics as when that influence is exerted directly by foreign governments. I laid the matter before the President and was pleased to have my suggestion favorably received.

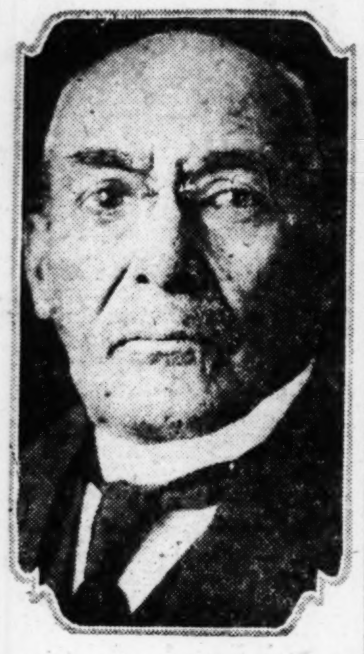
In his Mobile speech, made a few days later, he said:

"I want to take this occasion to say that the United States will never again seek one additional foot of territory by conquest."

Continuing, he declared that the American Government frowned upon efforts by any American citizens to exploit the peoples to the south of us. He denounced concessionaires who interfered with the processes of orderly government and who intrigued to overthrow one administration in Latin America so that it might be succeeded by another more favorable to these privileged interests.

No exception has been taken to this interpretation in this country or abroad.

MEXICAN WHOM BRYAN OPPOSED



ADOLFO DE LA HUERTA.

Fruits of the Policy.

Honduras has been gratified by our refusal to support as reasonable a certain loan proposition. Although this was much more favorable to Honduras than the proposition urged upon her under previous administrations, it still did not seem equable.

Colombia has been conciliated by a treaty adjusting all differences, and Chili has been pleased by the just recognition given by raising our legation to an embassy.

The phrase "Dollar Diplomacy" has been used to describe a policy under which this Government, on the excuse of representing American industry in Spanish America, used its diplomatic influence to advance the interests of American investors and promoters without a scrupulous regard to the merits of the claim. As a result of this policy in the past the Wilson administration found a number of sore spots amongst the Southern Republics.

Chili had been irritated by the Alsop claim; Honduras had been angered by the terms of a proposed loan; Ecuador was at war with an American railroad, and Colombia had for ten years been asking for arbitration of the differences which arose out of the establishment of the Panama Republic.

The first case with which the department had to deal was the controversy between the Government of Ecuador and a railroad running from Guayaquil to Quito. Under the terms of the charter, disputes were to be settled by arbitration, and an arbitrator had been named to represent this Government, when it was found that his name had already been suggested by the railroad. He was withdrawn and a new man, Judge Miller, to whom no exception could be taken, was appointed. Unofficial objections had been made to the retaining of the American Minister to Ecuador on the ground that, having been appointed by the previous administration, he labored under the suspicion of being identified with the transaction of which they complained. He was recalled and a new representative sent for the special purpose of improving the relations between the two Governments.

DEATHS OF WOMAN AND CHILD ACCIDENTS

Former Fell Dead With Heart Disease Causing Latter to Be Asphyxiated.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned at Kirkwood yesterday in the deaths of Mrs. Josephine Hudson, 65 years old, and her great-grandson, William Hanks Jr., 2½ years old. They were found dead by Sergt. William Hanks Friday evening when he returned to his home at 103 Mary avenue, Luxemburg, from duties at Jefferson Barracks, where he is stationed.

Mrs. Hudson, who had frequently suffered from heart attacks, lay on the floor in front of the gas stove, with a gash in her forehead, indicating that she had fallen there. A medical examination disclosed that a heart attack had been fatal.

Near the open stove was the baby who had been sleeping in his baby buggy at the time of Mrs. Hudson's seizure. Indications were that he never had awakened.

The father seized the child and took it to the hospital at Jefferson Barracks, but resuscitation was impossible. The baby's mother at the time was absent from home. She is employed in a downtown office.

Dr. B. F. Tate, 9441 Edgar avenue, Luxemburg, was the principal witness at the inquest, testifying that Mrs. Hudson had been subject to heart attacks and that she was dead when she fell to the floor after opening the gas burner, but before she could light it.

She is survived by one son, Henry Smith, of 1910 Withnell avenue, but made her home with her granddaughter because of her devotion to the child.

WIFE AND FOUR CHILDREN KEEP MAN OUT OF JAIL

Federal Judge English Paroles East St. Louis Dry Law Violator to Humane Officer.

Because a wife and four children were threatened with becoming wards of the county, in the event sentence was carried out, Federal Judge English yesterday suspended a 60-day jail sentence and $500 fine given a defendant and paroled him for six months to the St. Clair County humane officer.

Federal prohibition agents, last Thursday, working on another case, chanced to look into a basement window of the home of Otto Fischer, 39 years old, a carpenter residing at 2619 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis. They observed a still in operation, and, though without a search warrant, entered the house, seized the still and arrested Fischer. Friday, Fischer appeared before Judge English and pleaded guilty of manufacture and possession of illicit liquor. He was prepared to serve the sentence, when James K. Ewing, the humane officer, appeared in court yesterday and informed the Judge of the man's family circumstances.

Judge English also granted a parole from a 60-day jail sentence given to C. W. Moore, 60, night manager of the Wies Hotel, 101 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, who pleaded guilty Dec. 23 of possession of liquor. A physician testified yesterday that Moore was ill and that incarceration would be extremely hazardous to his health. He paid a fine of $325.

BRITISH DOCTORS AND BAR HUNT TEST FOR DRUNKENNESS

Joint Committee to Investigate and Decide Standard Method for Determination.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The establishment of standard scientific test for drunkenness has been brought a step nearer by a decision of the British Medical Association to investigate the question in the most scientific manner. It is announced that a committee of medical experts, in co-operation with judicial experts, will try to find an answer to the question which has been puzzling police courts for years. The committee will have 18 members, representing the medical association, the metropolitan police and stipendiary Magistrates.

This question has been agitating the authorities for so long, causing endless court debates and appeals and pleading to endless misunderstandings that the medical association has decided to go into the matter in the most thorough possible manner to determine the merits and demerits of existing tests, and if necessary, work out a new test which will be infallible.

ASKS CHURCH TO AID DRAMA

Channing Pollock Writes Theater Could Stand for Good.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The church should throw the whole weight of its membership into the support of decent and intellectual drama—of drama that is doing the same work that the church is doing. This is the declaration of Channing Pollock, playwright, in the current issue of the Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"Clergymen should advocate attendance at good plays," Pollock says. "Church organizations should be pledged to a kind of underwriting of them. Church participation in amateur drama, through amateur performances, should foster interest and understanding. Five years of that kind of effort would give us a theater that would stand with the church and the university instead of with the forces of evil."

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.

DRIVERS OF TWO AUTOS HELD AFTER FATAL COLLISION

Carelessness Charges Against Men Who Figured in Crash in Which Woman Lost Life.

PEDESTRIAN CRUSHED AGAINST A TREE

Conflicting Stories Told of Circumstances of Accident When Traffic Signal Was Changing.

Drivers of two automobiles which collided at right angles at a street intersection governed by an automatic stop signal, Thursday, resulting in the death of a woman pedestrian, were held by a Coroner's verdict of criminal carelessness, following the inquest yesterday.

The inquest was in the case of Mrs. Mamie May, 47 years old, of 3914 Delmar boulevard, who was crushed to death when one of the cars, a two-ton truck, caromed after the collision at Pine boulevard and Compton avenue, and impaled her against a tree near the northwest curb.

Bonds Fixed at $10,000.

Charles Roskowske, 27, 1805 Montgomery street, the driver of the truck, who was taken manacled before the Coroner, was held in $10,000 bond, as was Levi L. Peck, 1155 North Euclid avenue, driver of the coupe which collided with the truck. Peck, a civil engineer, is president of the Mid-Continent Co., Inc., with offices in the Arcade Building.

Peck, who previously had not been held by the police, testified he was driving west in Pine and approached the Compton avenue intersection just as the traffic signal flashed "change." The truck, going from south to north, was about 50 feet away, he said, as he started to cross the street. He had almost cleared the crossing, he testified, when the truck struck his car in the rear, overturning it.

Another Story of Accident.

A version considerably at variance with this testimony was related by Fred Kern, 8418 Hume avenue, an automobile mechanic, and W. E. Yount of 608 Westgate avenue, a passenger in Kern's automobile.

Kern said he also was driving west in Pine and had halted at the intersection. He said just as the traffic signal flashed to "change," Peck's coupe passed around him and started across the intersection, though the truck still had the right-of-way going north.

ILLINOIS GAME AND FISH WARDENS CAN'T LEVY FINES

Illegal for Them to Hold Court and Give Bail, Attorney General Says in Opinion.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 9.—Fish and game wardens of the State no longer may accept cash bail from or impose court fines on fish and game law violators.

Attorney General Carlstrom characterized these practices as "usurpation of judicial powers" in an opinion given to William J. Stratton, director of the department of conservation.

"The practice of some wardens," the attorney general pointed out, "in permitting the defendants to sign jury waivers, accept the minimum fine with court costs and later make out the regular complaint, turn the money over to the court and have the docket show the entire proceeding is not only unauthorized by law but amounts to a usurpation of judicial power. The fact that such action of the warden is acquiesced in by the justice of the peace and the proceedings shown in the docket does not legalize such action or the proceeding based thereon.

"Nowhere in the fish and game codes is authority given to any person or employe of the department to accept bail in any form or to control the prosecution of the offender. Their duties are purely executive.

"The court alone has power to decide whether the case is bailable, and if so to fix the amount of bail and make such disposition of the offender as the law requires."

Missouri Editors' Election.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 9.—Clarence Watkins, publisher of the Chillicothe Constitution, was elected president of the Northwest Missouri Press Association today. Fred Mitchell, Excelsior Springs Standard, was elected first vice president, and Fred Kenower of the Breckinridge Bulletin, second vice president; Mrs. M. E. Ford, Maryville Green and White Courier, was re-elected secretary; J. P. Tucker, Parkville Gazete, was re-elected treasurer. A resolution was adopted favoring Missouri River improvement.

BEGGS ESTATE CASE GETS INTO U. S. COURT

Mrs. Richard McCulloch Has Injunction Suit in Wisconsin Transferred.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 9.—An injunction proceeding brought by Mrs. Richard McCulloch of St. Louis, daughter of the late John I. Beggs, Milwaukee traction magnate, to prevent John Lenhouts, Assessor of Incomes, from proceeding with investigation of the Beggs estate in the matter of possible unpaid income taxes, has been transferred to the Federal Court from the County District Court. Judge F. A. Geiger has tentatively accepted the case.

The removal was at the instance of Mrs. McCulloch, acting for herself and other heirs.

Attorneys for Milwaukee County and Wisconsin, interested in the collection of income and inheritance taxes, are preparing to file a motion to have the case remanded to Milwaukee County Circuit Court.

NORWAY TO DEMOLISH FORTS

Three on Swedish Frontier to Be Razed Under Treaty Terms.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright 1926.

OSLO, Jan. 9.—All fortresses along the Swedish border are to be demolished under the terms of a proposal adopted by the Norwegian Cabinet Friday.

Recurrent wars throughout the history of the two countries naturally caused Norway to erect strong fortresses along the Swedish border and new ones were built immediately after 1905, when another war seemed imminent. But so rapidly did these nations and individuals develop friendship that the fortresses soon had outlived their usefulness. The fortresses to be demolished are at Koenigsvinger, St. Joerdal and Vaerdal. Simultaneously the military budget will be decreased by 2,000,000 kroners (about $400,000).

HELD ON NARCOTIC CHARGE

Marked money, which Government narcotic agents had given an informer and 18 grains of morphine were discovered in a hallway on O'Fallon street near Blair avenue Friday night after the informer had met Clem Gunn, 33 years old, who is being held awaiting a warrant charging violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

Narcotic Agent Thompson says three grains of morphine were purchased by the informer from Gunn, who is now under $5000 bond on a charge of violating the Harrison act.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 10, 1926. PAGES 15—24.

Sheridan's Infinite Pains Set Standard In Literary Craft

Playwright Tinkered Endlessly With Minutiae of "The School for Scandal," and at His Death Had Polished to His Contentment Only Two of Its Five Acts—Anxious Care Extended Even to Commas and Directions.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

IN one of his charming inventions, James Branch Cabell fancies that the Dark Lady of the Sonnets pays a call upon Shakspeare in his retirement at Stratford-on-Avon. She marvels anew that destiny should have lodged so divine a poet in this smug little tradesman and parasite. Amused and half-incredulous, she quotes: "Not marble, nor the gilded monuments of princes shall outlive this powerful rhyme."

"Dear, dear," cries the bard in petulant vexation, "how horribly emotion botches verse! That clash of sibilants is both harsh and ungrammatical. 'Shall' should be changed to 'will.'" And at that, Cabell relates, Mary Fitton sighed, because, in common with all persons who never essayed verbal composition, she was quite certain that perdurable writing must spring from a surcharged heart, rather than from a rearrangement of phrases.

One of the Crowning Comedies.

THAT style is a matter of implacable care was a tenet of Richard Brinsley Sheridan also. "The School for Scandal," current at the American Theater, is a classic specimen of the inquisition with which an author, enraged for perfection, may torture his own wits. It cost the playwright longer and sharper pains than all his other works together, and in consequence it ranks as one of the supreme comedies of all time.

At the age of 23, the sparkling young Irishman brought theatrical London to his feet with a farce-comedy, "The Rivals." It was hastily written, and promptly failed. A drastic revision transmuted it into a success which continues until today. Nevertheless, the dramatist had a poor opinion of the work which created his first renown. In later years he was wont to exclaim that "The Rivals" was one of the worst plays in the language, and that he would give anything not to have written it.

There was a certain frivolity likewise in his approach to "The School for Scandal," which followed two years afterwards. He announced to relatives, before setting pen to paper, that "the comedy is finished; I have nothing to do but to write it." He had discussed with them many of its characters and incidents, which related to persons of their acquaintance, and outlined the fable as it now stands.

Mastered the Art "to Blot."

SOME instinct, however, seems to have warned him that fortune had placed in his hands material with the potentialities of a masterpiece. But the outcome would depend on his own industry and zeal. The responsibility awoke in him a passion for consummate workmanship. He made himself a virtuoso of the rare and difficult practice which Pope styled "the art to blot," and found out for himself Sydney Smith's priceless counsel to writers—that whenever a passage seems to them particularly fine, it should instantly be stricken out.

The first draft was read to David Garrick, and enraptured him to such a degree that he volunteered to supply a prologue in verse. The comedy was accepted for production at Drury Lane Theater, and rehearsals began. Sheridan continued feverishly to busy himself with corrections and rewritings. The actors fumed and glowered, according to the story, and finally locked the playwright in a room so that he might once and for all have done with his "polishing touches." Finally the day came when, at the bottom of the concluding sheet, he wrote: "Finished at last. Thank God!" To which the prompter, Mr. Hopkins, appended a heartfelt "Amen!"

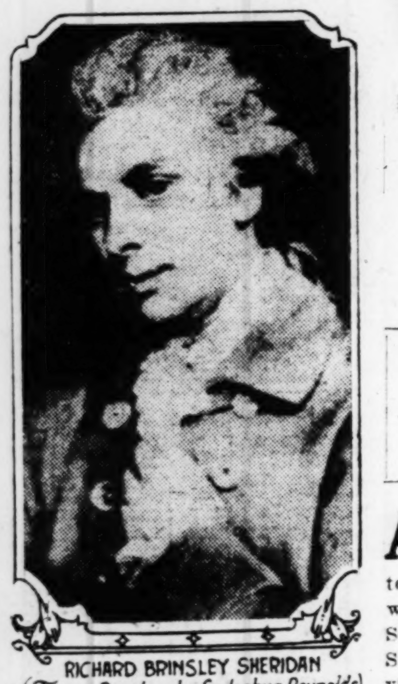
Only Two Acts Revised.

BUT "The School for Scandal" was by no means finished with Richard Brinsley Sheridan. When performed, it was instantly hailed as a marvel of fastidious writing, and a permanent contribution to English literature. It was only the author who was not content. A publisher named Ridgway offered him 500 guineas to prepare the comedy for publication. Nineteen years passed, during which Sheridan was frequently importuned for the revised manuscript. His usual reply was that he was not yet satisfied that he had brought the work to its final and inevitable form.

In the meantime, the acting version was published, and this is the one known today both to playgoers and readers. A century after Sheridan's death, his biographer, W. Fraser Rae, discovered in a heap of torn and grimy papers, put aside as worthless, two acts which had been completed for publication. Three acts still remained to be corrected.

As an object lesson in the craftsmanship of writing, it is curious to compare sundry passages in the original script with the form they took after Sheridan had brooded over them with inexhaustible and merciless devotion. An instructive example is Sir Peter Teazle's soliloquy in the second scene of the first act. This worthy was at first conceived as a veteran of two previous marriages, and was called Solomon instead of Peter. He was made to commune with himself as follows:

For ten years I kept my senses and lived single. Oh, blockhead, dolt, Solomon! Within this twelve months thou are married again—married to a woman thirty years younger than thyself; a fashionable woman. Yet I took her with caution; she had been educated in the country; but now she has more extravagance than the daughter of an Earl, more levity than a Countess!



RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN
(From a Painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds)

Raw and Smelted Ore.

Many an author would have been vain of this speech, but Sheridan perceived that it was merely raw ore. His sprightly fancy, darting forth on every side, revealed dozens of ways in which it might be amplified, enlivened and refined. Having sagely changed the benedict into a crusty bachelor, the playwright gave him a jeremiad which, in contrast with the original, illustrates vividly the distinction between the mediocrity of a "first thought" and the gusto of writing with the savor of immortality in it:

When an old bachelor marries a young wife, what is he to expect? 'Tis now six months since Lady Teazle made me the happiest of men—and I have been the most miserable dog ever since! We tift a little going to church, and fairly quarreled before the bells had done ringing. I was more than once nearly choked with gall during the honeymoon, and I had lost all comfort in life before my friends had done wishing me joy. Yet I chose with caution—a girl bred wholly in the country, who never knew luxury beyond one silk gown, nor dissipation beyond the annual gala of a race ball. Yet she now plays her part in all the extravagant fopperies of fashion and the Town, with as ready a grace as if she had never seen a bush or a grass-plot out of Grosvenor Square! I am sneezed at by all my acquaintance, and paragraphed in the newspapers. She dissipates my fortune, and contradicts all my humors; yet the

Master Comedy Is Revived Here Tonight

A MASTERPIECE of old English comedy will be presented at the American Theater tonight, and continue during the week. It is "The School for Scandal," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. This is the second revival of his works made by George C. Tyler, that of "The Rivals" having played here twice during last year.

A cast of attractive possibilities has been assembled. O. P. Heggie appears as Sir Peter Teazle, Jefferson de Angelis as Moses and Henrietta Crosman as Mrs. Candour. Julia Hoyt, otherwise known as Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, society woman and noted beauty, makes her St. Louis debut as an actress in the part of Lady Sneerwell. Three English performers, Ben Field, James Dale and Ian Hunter, take the respective roles of Sir Oliver Surface and Joseph and Charles Surface. Dale will be remembered in the role of the young Jew in Galsworthy's "Loyalties."

May Collins as Lady Teazle.

OTHER parts are assigned as follows: Sir Harry Bumper, Brian O'Neil; Sir Toby, Harold Thomas; Careless, Philip Tonge; Snake, Romaine Callender; Crabtree, Arthur Lewis; Rowley, William Seymour; Trip, Anthony Kemble Cooper; Lady Teazle, May Collins, and Maria, Miss Mary Hone.

Miss Collins, who succeeds many eminent actresses in the part of Lady Teazle, is a graduate of Jessie Bonstelle's stock company in Detroit, and was chosen not only for her ability but for her youth. Miss Hoyt played with William Faversham in "The Squaw Man," with Billie Burke in "Rose Briar," and in Henri Bernstein's "Judith." She also spent a season with Stuart Walker's stock company in Indianapolis. Miss Hone is another alumna of stock, having served

"CARMEN" GETS DRASTIC RUSSIAN HOUSECLEANING

But Essay at Reform Creates New Conventions More Absurd Than Those of Opera — Voiceless Actors Let Bizet's Glorious Music Go by the Board.

By SAMUEL CHOTZINOFF,
Music Critic of the New York World.

IN THE preface to the English translation of Constantin Lipskeroff's libretto, it is stated that Director Dantchenko got from Merimee, Bizet and Nietzsche the inspiration for this new version of "Carmen," which, under the title of "Carmencita and the Soldier," was made public Monday night at the Jolson Theater by the Moscow Art Theater Musical Studio.

From Merimee he took the original story, which the Moscow people contend was badly mangled to make Bizet's libretto. From Bizet was taken the music, but what did Mr. Dantchenko take from Nietzsche?

Nietzsche liked "Carmen" and made use of the opera to taunt Wagner when he lost patience with what he came to believe were the adolescent chromatic yearnings of the "Tristan und Isolde" of his erratic friend. In comparison, "Carmen" seemed to Nietzsche normal, realistic music which portrayed the passions of natural men and women. But Nietzsche, as far as I can discover, had no theories about "Carmen" as Bizet and his librettist wrote it. He thought the opera as he saw it presented a lyric drama that realized adequately Merimee's story.

Unoperatic Acting.

NOW, what it is that Nietzsche inspired in Mr. Dantchenko I cannot find out, unless it be the philosopher's keen appreciation of the actual, veracious quality of the passion in Bizet's music. But that can be heard and felt in the standard presentation at any opera house. Mr. Dantchenko attempts in his novel version a great housecleaning of the old operatic "Carmen." He has a new libretto which sticks more closely to the Merimee story; he transposes whole scenes; he cuts out altogether Don Jose's country love, the simple Michaela, and he causes his troupe to act as unoperatically as possible.

But in doing this he unwittingly created a whole set of brand-new artificialities. His chorus in the first act is not the miscellaneous Sevillians and cigaret girls of the opera, but a number of women beautifully dressed in colorful Spanish costume with mantillas and fans placed on the several tiers of the only set used, which looked like a cross section of the hallway of a building.

The chorus sings and postures and twirls fans, while Jose and Carmen have their scenes together. If this invasion of the privacy of a pair of lovers is not a sillier convention than anything to be found in the opera house, I don't know what is. This chorus is trained to respond in some physical way to all the emotions of the principal characters. In the toreador scene, which consisted of nothing but the famous song, the chorus vibrated to every movement of the bull fighter, called Lucas as in Merimee; when he made a dive, they made dives, and when he shuddered, they shuddered, too.

Rhythmic Choral Singing.

THIS is not to say that the spectacle wasn't in many ways noteworthy. There was a great deal of color and movement, and the chorus sustained its reputation for rhythmic singing. But in all the realism and the intensive acting

Spalding to Play Concerto by Dohnanyi

ONE of the foremost American violinists, Albert Spalding, will be soloist at the Symphony Orchestra's concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening at the Odeon. He will play, for the first time in this city, a concerto for violin by Ernest Dohnanyi, eminent Hungarian composer.

Spalding introduced this work to America, and has performed it with the Boston and other orchestras. Dohnanyi visited St. Louis two seasons ago, when he gave a recital under the auspices of the Piano Teachers' Association. His Suite for Orchestra was played here on Dec. 15 and 16, 1922.

Another work to have its first St. Louis hearings at these concerts is Emmanuel Chabrier's overture, "Gwendoline." The program arranged by Director Ganz follows:

Overture to "Gwendoline" .... Chabrier
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra .... Dohnanyi
(Mr. Spalding)
Symphonic Suite, "Scheherazade," Op. 35 ......Rimsky-Korsakoff
1. The Sea and Sinbad's Ship.
2. The Story of the Kalandar Prince.
3. The Young Prince and the Princess.
4. Festival at Bagdad; the Sea; the Ship Goes to Pieces on a Rock Surmounted by a Bronze Warrior; Conclusion.

Two Slight Squalls Relieve Doldrums in Broadway Theaters

"Head First" Is Artless Drama of a Business Woman's Oddly Swift Rise, and "Dope," Evolved From One-Act Vaudeville Skit by Neat Device of Adding Eight Scenes, Proves Soggy Social Preachment, Direly Played.

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.

IN the lull between the extinction of one O'Neill play and the premiere of another, the Greenwich Village theater wryly turned over its stage Wednesday evening to Oliver Morosco, who made use of it for the first performance of a play which he gravely announces as "a new comedy along somewhat different lines," and which bears the title "Head First."

This is an ingenuous drama about life in the cheerless home of a business woman. It was written by Willis Maxwell Goodhue, and it was animated by that faintly fabulous notion of the world made familiar in such writings as those of Daisy Ashford. Its metropolitan premiere was attended by one of those bleak audiences in which the professional first nighters, responding automatically to the receipt of free tickets, sit embedded in a mass of relatives of the company and gaze at them with "Who are these people?" expressions.

Conjugal Gallantry.

THIS is not by any means the first time that the stage of this acutely experimental theater has been given over to dramas of the caliber of "Head First." But usually they are produced at the expense of the author. This one, however, was put forth by that recently intermittent entrepreneur, Oliver Morosco, and represents still another effort to spread throughout an insensitive, imperceptive community something of his own fine enthusiasm for the art of an actress named Selma Paley, who is, I am informed, none other than Mrs. Morosco.

An earlier stage in the same gallant crusade was marked by the production of a piece called "Myrtie" at the Fifty-second street theater some seasons ago, an occasion fondly recalled by the newspaper boys because a collation was served between the acts. Mr. Goodhue wrote "Myrtie" also.

"Myrtie" escaped me, so that Miss Paley did not swim into the ken of this department until Wednesday. She impressed me as an incorrigible but seasoned amateur who had laudably decided to be as much like Jane Cowl as possible, taken aim and rather overshot the mark. I shall not soon forget her achievements in hauteur when she came doggily back from Paris in act three. I shall never forget the stage French which then sprinkled her dialogue. Unless these old ears deceived me, I heard her refer casually to "her little bijou of an apartment overlooking the Bois de Bouillon," and to the "bone" who waited on her there.

Husband Oddly Suspicious.

MORE specifically, "Head First" deals with the plight of a chronically unsuccessful file clerk whose wife goes to work in the same concern and ascends with suspicious speed to the management of the entire business, assuring her worried husband the while that many business women are as decent as his own mother.

Mortified at the contrast between their salaries, the frantic husband goes out and makes a fresh start driving a truck, loading garbage at daybreak and carting it out to the dumps.

"But it wasn't offensive," he said afterward, when success crowned his little efforts in this new field. "Each morning as I drove that garbage to the dumps I kept saying to myself over and over again: 'It's for her; it's for her.'"

At which point the mannerly gravity of the audience was threatened with isolated outbreaks of hysteria. Yet it is one of those plays in the course of which you are visited by uneasy suspicions that it is all just a great, big, good-natured joke. Perhaps we need not have choked back that laughter after all.

A Dire, Foul Deed.

SOMETHING more than ordinarily dire in the way of drama was done to a crisp last Sunday evening at the Forty-eighth Street Theater when there was vouchsafed a performance of a play called "Dope," which is scheduled for scattered matinees in that auditorium throughout the present week.

This is a melodrama, fairly soggy with sociological significance, which that expert and forceful actor, Hermann Lieb, has fashioned out of the compact, telling sketch which Joseph Medill Paterson wrote for him 15 years ago, or thereabouts, and which Mr. Lieb has been playing prosperously in vaudeville ever since.

Mr. Patterson, the Chicago publicist, who recently advanced on New York to take over the editorship of Liberty, wrote "Dope" as playlet in a casual moment, sold it to Lieb for $1000, bet this pretty sum on the Republicans, lost it and since then, I believe, has abjured the drama and all its ways.

Inasmuch as "Dope" originally consumed only 20 minutes in the playing, it took a bit of doing so to attenuate it that there would be no need any more in Mr. Lieb's life for such attendant artists as the tramp comedians, the harp players and the soft-shoe dancers who, in the two-a-day, had been wont to share the evening with him.

Nightmare for Stagehands.

THIS attenuation, however, was managed by the neat device of adding eight more scenes, and these were expounded with the aid of sundry stage hands who must have been carried away from the theater afterwards in a state bordering on collapse, and with the aid also, of course, of lots and lots of actors, some of whom dimly

Jazz a Means Which Hasn't Yet Found Its End, Casella Thinks

THE following article will have a particular interest for St. Louisans. The author, Mme. Olga Samaroff, an eminent concert pianist, is a former resident of this city and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Hickenlooper of 4543 Maryland avenue. When a recent accident temporarily interrupted her career, she was chosen as music critic of the New York Evening Post.

By OLGA SAMAROFF.

SOME years ago, at the Mahler Festival in Amsterdam, I heard Mr. Alfredo Casella, the distinguished Italian composer, conductor and pianist, speak on modern music. His original and forceful ideas, expressed with the lucidity of a skilled thinker, greatly impressed all those who were present.

My own impressions were so intensified by the subsequent reading of occasional articles by Mr. Casella in musical periodicals that I determined, with the characteristic audacity of a novice, to ask him to grant me an interview. He consented, and the following discussion took place:

Personal curiosity and the conviction that the subject could not fail to interest music lovers at a time when the question of America's future in creative music is being so widely discussed, impelled me to ask Mr. Casella as a leading question how he felt about the importance of nationalism in music. That this man, so conspicuously in the foreground of Italian musical affairs, had thought deeply on the subject was evident from the spontaneity and richness of his ideas. I give them as far as I can in his own words:

Bach, Scarlatti, Rameau.

"WAGNER said one day: 'The national color of music is only its ornament,' but this phrase seems to be in absolute contradiction to his whole life, which, broadly speaking, was devoted to the liberation of German opera from Italian and French influences and to the creation in his own work of a purely German dramatic school. One may say that nationalism in music has always existed.

"Musical art, like other manifestations of the human spirit which grow out of a given soil, must, like other arts, contain the racial characteristics of the creative artist and the country to which he belongs. For example, let us examine the style of three contemperaneous composers—Bach, Scarlatti and Rameau. It is extraordinary how they all share certain characteristics of their epoch, while exhibiting great divergency of style. But, also, how typical of his race is each of these composers: the German polyphonist, the Neapolitan virtuoso and the French intellectual, in music."

I ventured the remark that, while these examples were undoubtedly characteristic of their race in an intellectual and aesthetic sense, they did not seem to be as near to the soil, nationally speaking, as some lesser and later figures.

"It is true," said Mr. Casella, "that it is very easy to discern the nationalism of such music, as for example that of Greig or Albeniz, because their music is based on an abundant use of national folklore. It is much more difficult to analyze the nationalism of a Schumann, who, however, is essentially German."

Standard Musical Cuisine.

I WAS just about to ask Mr. Casella's opinion on the universality of Beethoven's music, which seems to me absolutely without a trace of nationalism, when he began himself to speak—from a different angle—on internationalism in music.

"It was the fashion," he said, "several years ago, to predict the advent of an international musical art. Happily, that Utopian idea is far from being realized. Imagine the catastrophe of a musical art that would be built along the same lines everywhere. It would be as bad as a universal language or a standard cuisine for the entire world!"

While I was still shuddering over the possibilities opened up by this last unexpected suggestion, Mr. Casella continued his train of thought, which pursued its course with direct forcefulness.

"Oscar Wilde once said something to the effect that art was in advance of nature. This splendid paradox, as usual, contains a kernel of profound truth. The character of a national art results from different but connected elements. First of all, the tradition of a country, which springs from the soil and which no one escapes entirely any more than we can escape the burden of individual heredity; then the assimilation and transformation of foreign ideas, born in other lands, but capable of lending themselves to different spiritual climates; and last, that part of the eternal process of renewal, which exists in the imagination of each creative spirit and which forms the most vital part of artistic progress.

"As a rule, this imaginative function consists simply in perceiving things that the ordinary mortal does not see. It is this power which enabled the impressionists to teach their contemporaries to see nature as they did, a fact which seems to justify the paradox of Oscar Wilde, for it is only now—20 or 30 years after impressionism began—that the majority of people can see the impressionistic qualities of nature which those painters discovered."

Foreign Influences in Italy.

OF course, here I could not refrain from a question as to how this theory would apply to music.

"In music also," Mr. Casella answered. "Wilde's paradox is partially true. Music, of which we are discussing primarily the national side, has in a large sense the form great geniuses have given her, and music—having no direct connection with the realities of nature—can be said, by way of analogy, to be in advance of the public. The thoughts of men lag behind the genius who dominates evolution. Jean Cocteau said: 'It is not so much that the creative genius is ahead of his time, but that the public as a whole lags behind it.' But as I have said before, the creative imagination, no matter how strong, cannot escape the imperious necessities dictated on the one hand by tradition and on the other by the spiritual conquests of other races."

I was curious to know what foreign influences Mr. Casella considered had most affected modern music in Italy. He replied: "The case of modern Italy is a typical one. During many years—roughly speaking from 1870 to 1910—Italy imported many foreign ideas and technical idioms—French, German and Russian, most particularly. It has been extraordinarily interesting to me to observe—in the last 12 or 15 years—the reaction of the Italian public against a great part of these tendencies. Wagner was accepted because of his genius, and one must believe that his must be a genius of the highest order to be accepted by a public so fundamentally opposed to an art which would otherwise have been insupportable to them.

"Certain foreign technical artifices such as the 'whole-tone scale' never found favor with our public.

"POLYTONALITY found some very tepid sympathizers, but atonality met with absolute hostility, not only in the case of the public but also among musicians. I have observed these phenomena of reaction with the most scrupulous attention, for I believe that nothing happens without a reason. And when a race has given as much to the world as ours has in the domain of music, I think that the study of these phenomena of sympathy and antipathy is the best critical means of arriving at a final conclusion.

"The formula, 'Vox populi, vox Dei,' is not exactly my favorite motto and I have never written a note of music for the purpose of courting success, but I confess that I have always written to try to give pleasure to those that listen. I employ the word 'pleasure' in its highest sense, and my present style of writing—which seems to me truly and strictly national—is the result of a long and patient study of our past and of the musical sensibility of my race today."

I now begged Mr. Casella to give me his thoughts regarding our future national music in America. He said:

"The great and very noble preoccupation of young American musicians is to create a national musical style. If America were like Europe it would be easy to say how such a style could be evolved. But, as I have said in regard to Italy—with us, the future grows out of the past—that huge, heavy past which forms the vital treasure of the Old World. America has no artistic past. Her conception of life is based on the future. America does not seem to be trying, even now, to create a past for the future in the present.

"A building in the United States, after attaining the age of 10 years, is usually torn down to make way for a newer and more up-to-date one. But it would be absurd to say America has no national music. The Negro songs and the Indian music form a musical capital, quite rich and important enough to make one suppose that a great school of music could some day be built on these foundations.

"THEN there is jazz, of which I was one of the first European admirers. However, I think the conception some young American composers seem to have of jazz is not quite correct. They lean in the direction of believing it to be an esthetic of art, whereas it is an interesting technique, which is a means to an end. In short, I believe jazz may be the foundation of a future truly American orchestration, but up to now it is a means which has not found its end.

"I think bringing jazz into concert halls and mixing it with European harmony and counterpoint is a mistake. We are disappointed to find young American composers stressing the use of successions of the chord of the ninth, which was a feature of the infancy of Debussy. They should strive for their own forms, their own harmony and counterpoint — amalgamate these with the new orchestral technique they already possess today and then turn to the rich melodic and rhythmic folklore of their soil. When all this is ready the great beauty of nature in America and the vital generosity of the race will find their musical poet to express them and America will take part side by side with Europe, in a common mystic fervor of spiritual and esthetic exaltation."

Mr. Casella then turned thoughtfully to the piano and began to play from the score of Debussy's "Sirens," which sounded like a musical realization of his last words, and I decided that I liked the task of interviewing—a Casella.

TWO SLIGHT SQUALLS RELIEVE DOLDRUMS IN BROADWAY THEATERS

suggested that they had not expected to be called upon.

It all leads up to that scene in the shabby drug store when two young welfare enthusiasts are about to pounce on the druggist for selling cocaine over his counter without a prescription, and discover that the incomes of both of them are derived from the same source, one through the wholesale drug business, the other through the rentals from the tenement in which the sorry traffic is plied.

The business of leading up to that scene is tolerably arduous. This elliptical report cannot hope to reproduce the flavor of the earlier ones. You will have to imagine for yourself the emotion of Mrs. Jabez Courtney, when, on the veranda of the old Courtney mansion on the Hudson, she learns that her elder daughter has been seen that afternoon at the Casino embracing someone "not of her set." When it is later explained to her that "this person"—her very words, I think—is a truck driver, the agitation of the Courtneys is truly moving.

Woman With the Blue Veil.

THEN the daughter bounces in, the worse for liquor. Her father immediately counters with a stroke of paralysis. Fifteen years elapse. The scene is the District Attorney's office the night after the mysterious derelict known to the police of the Second Assembly District as "The Woman With the Blue Veil" is found dead of poison back of the drug store aforesaid.

It is all set forth by the cut-back device once dear to our playwrights. As a dramatist, Mr. Lieb is so addicted to this device that he craves it as if it were some alluring anodyne. One of his characters has but to say a trifle sententiously: "Well, it was on a night in the spring of 1912," to have the lights go out and the whole scene change with almost no uproar behind the curtain.

Plays in the Offing.

THE younger generation has gone back to school, and the visitors in town have departed, saying one to another that whereas New York may be all very well for a spree, they cannot see how anyone would want to live there. So now there comes the great January lull, and, for a week or two, the clamor of new plays will be comparatively stilled. Indeed, this week has brought with it nothing so interesting as the gossip of plays yet to come.

A forthcoming piece from the French is the celebrated "Le Demi-monde" of the younger Dumas, now modernized into a play called "Close Quarters" and scheduled for production Monday night in Washington with a cast that includes Elsie Ferguson, Margaret Lawrence, Wallace Eddinger, Bruce McRae, Frederick Worlock and Geoffrey Kerr—in short, about all the actors now at liberty with the possible exception of Mrs. Leslie Carter.

The play, in 50 years, has lagged behind the times, and when it was tried out on tour last fall under the title "Spindrift" it was found that in the great scene, when the woman is told that she was tainted by her past, the audiences, even in Boston, were disposed to say "What of it?" Since then it has been rewritten to satisfy the greater liberality in such matters of a generation more tolerant than its immediate predecessors.

The Adventures of a Title.

AMONG the plays approaching New York at this moment, one can distinctly hear the hubbub of preparation for the one called "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." This is an opus evolved out of the joint consciousnesses of John V. A. Weaver and George Abbott, and since it is to be presented here by John Golden, we all have the comfort of knowing in advance that it will be what is described in the posters as a clean play to which a young girl could take her aunt without discomfort.

"Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" is a play which began with a title. The title was once only the refrain of a poem which Master Weaver published in "Vanity Fair," and, while it may be doubted whether Morris Gest is much given to the perusal of poetry, the refrain did catch the roving eye of that impresario.

A Guileless Bard.

HE magnificently agreed to produce any play Weaver would write with that as its title, and the innocent poet at once went to work. When the play was done, Mr. Gest had progressed to the point where he really could not bother with the drama unless it came from Moscow, so the manuscript fell into other hands, was produced somewhere in the suburbs of our town and there died a sudden and, from all accounts, a painful death. But everyone assured Weaver that the title was good.

Undaunted, he threw the play away and kept the title. Now he and that agreeable young actor, George Abbott, have written another comedy to go with it, and this is in rehearsal with such excellent players in it as Florence Johns, Donald Meek and Donald Macdonald. Abbott is the stalwart who played in "Processional" and who, with James Gleason, wrote "The Fall Guy."

Weaver, who has just published a fresh volume of verse in the vernacular, is also celebrated, in what is sometimes laughably called private life, as the husband of Peggy Wood, who has retired from the cast of "Candida" to their farm in Connecticut, there to await what is still often described as an interesting event.

SHERIDAN'S INFINITE PAINS SET STANDARD IN LITERARY CRAFT

worst of it is, I doubt I love her, or I should never bear all this. However, I'll never be weak enough to own it.

The marvel is that the second draft, the product of labor and sweat, appears fresher and more spontaneous than the original. One is reminded of Beethoven, whose first melodic inspirations were usually crude and harsh, and who hammered and forged them, sometimes for years, until there issued from his titanic anvil not ironwork, but flowers, and these as dewy and fragrant as if nature had only that moment unveiled their petals.

Anxious Care of Details.

NO DETAIL was too minute for Sheridan's attention. In the first version, Snake remarks that "here are two young men to whom Sir Peter acted as a kind of guardian since their father's death." It apparently occurred to the anxious self-editor that a man is either a guardian or he is not, and that "a kind of guardian" is an absurdity. So the passage was made to read: "Here are two young men to whom Sir Peter has acted as guardian since their father's death."

Snake, in the original, addresses Lady Sneerwell as "you, the widow of a city knight." It appeared to Sheridan later that the term was tactlessly uncomplimentary, so he changed the salutation to "you, widow." Snake had advised her to "close with the passion of a man with such character and expectations as Mr. Surface." On reading this a second time, Sheridan perceived that to write "close with the passion" was to write foolishly. So he repaired it to "close with the addresses."

Struck Out Commas.

HIS scrupulous care extended even to punctuation marks. The first version of a query in Lady Sneerwell's confession is this: "Cannot you surmise the weakness which I hitherto, through shame, have concealed even from you?" In recasting it, Sheridan substituted "folly" for "weakness," "thro'" for "through," and omitted the commas: "Cannot you surmise the folly which I hitherto thro' shame have concealed even from you?"

When Crabtree states that Miss Nicely is to be married to her footman, Mrs. Candour affirms that no one could believe such a story of so prudent a lady. Sir Benjamin Backbite observes, in the current version: "Oh, Lud, ma'am, that's the very reason 'twas believed at once—she has always been so cautious!" This was revised so as to read: "Oh, Lud, ma'am, you have mentioned the very circumstance that made it to be believed at once. Yes—she has always been so cautious."

Soliloquy and Aria.

THE corrections comprehended even the stage directions. One of these reads in the original: "Lady Sneerwell's house. Lady Sneerwell discovered at her toilet." This was amended as follows: "A dressing-room in Lady Sneerwell's house. Lady Sneerwell at her toilet."

In Sheridan's day, control of theatrical taste was in the hands of an educated oligarchy, well equipped to comprehend and relish bravura skill in language. If a soliloquy were brilliantly written, they were content for the action to stop while it was being delivered—much as a modern audience, at the opera, will pardon and applaud a halt of the plot for the sake of an aria's beautiful melody. If Sheridan were working today, and made one of his actors compliment a gossip on the delicacy of tint, and mellowness of sneer, that characterized her scandal, a goodly proportion of his public would ask what th' pore sap's tryin' t' get at, anyway?

NEW NOISY, OFF-KEY OPERA, 'WOZZEK,' GIVEN IN BERLIN

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—The State Opera here has become a storm center of musical discussion through its production of an opera called "Wozzek," by Alban Berg, which breaks all records for dissonance and cacophony.

The composer is acclaimed by critics in terms varying from "musical mountebank" to "inspired genius." Not content with having the orchestra attack the ears with noises so inharmonious that some listeners aver they suffer physical pain, the composer prescribes that a tin-pan piano used in one of the scenes must be out of tune and that the vocalists must sing off key.

ONLY 12 OF 250 MOVIES LAST YEAR WERE GREAT

Picture-Play Fans Less Enthralled by Sincerity and Logic Than by Profile Stares, Hurdling Eyebrows and Sneering Mustaches of Star System Divinities.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN,
Motion Picture Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is with some hesitancy that one attempts to think about the movies shown here during 1925. So few of them were made to be thought about. The vast majority came, untouched by human brains, from factory to consumer. As to their effect on our 200,000 avid St. Louis cinema suckers, we are entirely optimistic. Each movie provided exercise for the muscles of the eyes which oculists say is wholesome and beneficial. Of course, certain picture-play enthusiasts may have carried such muscular activity to an extreme, but on the whole, barring two or three sad cases of myopia, the local movie public survived the year in excellent shape.

Our movie theaters, likewise, are in a sound, happy, flourishing condition. True, there has been a definite amount of wear and tear on Versailles lobbies. Several imported chandeliers are shy a crystal or two. One doorman lost an epaulet, six ushers have required new swagger sticks, the dinner jackets of two assistant managers look a little threadbare, and the tremolo in one of the mightiest of the pipe organs needs overhauling. Aside from these repairs, about five barrels of gilt will restore the Grand boulevard palaces to more than sufficient splendor.

The Company of the Bored.

THE last year has been, therefore, encouraging. Five, six, or seven first-run pictures have been shown here weekly—a total of at least 250 in the 12 months. While not more than a dozen of this number made any pretension to artistry, logic or sincerity, and scarce a dozen more were even polite to the intelligence, this dismal thought is quite beside the point.

The hordes clamoring at the doors of Lowe's State, the Missouri, the Grand Central and the St. Louis cared little whether the picture within was bad or good. Say not that St. Louisans should have been more discriminating. These were not St. Louisans. All trace of city dropped from them amid marble foyers. They became part of a nobler company, entitled "Those who are bored with themselves." They were, quite simply, Gloria Swanson's public, or Mary Pickford's public, or Jackie Coogan's public, or some other star's public.

Star-worshippers. That is to say, the form of entertainment they demanded from the movies was more elementary than the dramatized story. They wanted their drama condensed in one person or a few persons. Hence the advertisements worded: "Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q.,'" not "'Don Y.' With Douglas Fairbanks." Star first, story afterwards. That was their pleasure; and the movie producers last year, with a few blessed exceptions, gave them what they wanted.

Prancings and Grimaces.

THEIR favored puppets danced and grimaced on the screen. Doug Fairbanks romped up trellises and performed amazing feats with a bullsnake whip. Mary Pickford forced her matronly bones into a child's dress and suffered tortures trying to look young enough to play "Little Annie Rooney," while all but her fans suffered tortures, too. Pola Negri switched weary hips in "Flower of the Night" for the delectation of soda clerks who think they'd like to wed a Spanish madcap. Corinne Griffith mouth-breathed her way through "Classified," with her lips curved into the classic twin bows her public likes to see.

It was much easier for picture theater crowds to think of a kiss they'd like to see Gloria Swanson give some harried leading man, than to reflect on a book or a play they'd like to see her do. Hence, "Madame Sans Gene." Easier to call for a grin from Ben Lyon than a plot. So they got the grin but not much else in "The New Commandment." This exaltation of the player above the play is keeping alive the star system — a spectacle that sickens the soul.

Working an Eyebrow to Death.

FOR these ex-chorus girls and seamstresses, these former ragpickers and college professors who find themselves idolized overnight—their pictures going to bed with flappers in every town and hamlet, their moronish ideas broadcast in movie magazines and press sheets—ride high horses. Finding that thousands of free and white Americans are breathlessly interested in the personal hygiene, morals, garments, noses, chins, eyes and hair of movie actresses and actors, they demand their rights. Stories must be changed out of all proportion to allow for endless closeups and strong "leads." If a pained expression registering love went over big in the last picture, the current opus fairly writhes with the same expression repeated.

Last year in St. Louis we saw Marion Davies reiterate the profile stare her public loved in "Little Old New York," and almost repeat this picture scene for scene when she played "Lights of Old Broadway." Constance Talmadge had saved up all the shades of eyebrow lifting she used to advantage in "Dulcy" for further use in "Her Sister From Paris."

In Norma Talmadge's face there is a wrinkle on each side of the nose, which makes a perfect rivulet for glycerine tears. Hundreds of St. Louis movie fans would know at once if her tears took the wrong course during a close-up, but any serious flaw in the plot of "The Lady" would amiably escape them. Even Master Jackie Coogan knows his charm in old pants, and came back at us with further adventures of Cohen and Kelly called "Old Clothes," and with the same pants.

A Mental Collapse.

THERE was something pathetic in the mobs who stormed our movie theaters to see these cheap personalities do their tricks last year. It signified a mental indolence—an interest in human jumping jacks rather than in ideas. It suggested a complete collapse before the terrible fame of the picture actor. It indicated an acquiescence in the unreal values of life towering above the masses at Hollywood—dumb doras who should be selling hosiery, riding in Rolls-Royces and giving interviews on "My ideal man," or capable stable grooms like Tom Mix and Harey Carey luxuriating in California bungalows.

How is a public which must accept these things to judge, critically, the work of the gods and goddesses it has created? A movie theater is no place for blasphemy. Movies, after all, are the pastime of idle people. Their tendency is always to tolerate, to accept what is put before them. They seek only entertainment, and suffer any sort because there is nothing to do at home.

Seated in overstuffed loge chairs, they watched while "The Iron Horse" rolled its dime novel way along, or "The Midnight Express" carried a brave engineer to impending doom, or "The Overland Limited" hurried after. Gloria languished in "The Coast of Folly" and it was some languish! Tommy Meighan had a world of "Irish Luck" to get by with such a picture, and "The King on Main Street" should have been run out of town. Instead, the king was welcomed because Adolphe Menjou twirls a mean mustache.

Terrors of Realism.

THE blurry, overdrawn, artified "Merry Widow," (Mae Murray) was hailed as an artistic triumph, and wistful Norma packed them in for "Graustark." They sighed at "The Ten Commandments," half of which was excellent costume drama and the other half, in modern dress, a crime against every rule in the decalogue, cheap, shoddy, sex stuff tacked on to the majestic indecencies of the Old Testament. The pish-tush of Lillian Gish almost ruined "Romola," but hundreds think Lillian the sweetest fairy on the screen.

St. Louis movie audiences did not like realism, and who can blame them? Realism becomes entirely too real on the screen. The legitimate theater softens it with illusion, and its force strikes the mind rather than the heart. But the movies give a verisimilitude to life that strikes the heart with terror. Besides, theater audiences as a rule are richer in purse and intellect than movie audiences. They can better stand stark reality for the same reason that it is easier to be an atheist in a swivel chair than when dangling over the brink of a precipice.

Thus, Eric von Stroheim's "Greed" was a flop here, though approximating perfection as a photograph of life. It got too near home to the lives of the masses. It takes your philosopher with a limousine to step into after seeing a play like "Desire Under the Elms" to thrust from his mind the horror of the tragedy. The shoe clerk on the tick of being fired who dropped into a movie to take his mind off his troubles did not like "Greed." It scared him and depressed him. He has enough of fear and depression outside in the world. Why pay 65 cents for another dose?

THE critic, consequently, can have no quarrel with the 1925 run of movies because they were too goody-goody or falsely optimistic. They were both falsely optimistic, such as Johnny Hines' "Early Bird," and falsely vicious such as Rudolph Valentino's "Cobra." They erred on all sides, shot all around the target, and occasionally drove straight at the mark.

The pictures which stood out in 1925 here were good in spite of the public demand, and in contradiction of public taste. Many of them were shunned. Most passed without comment from patrons. All denied in some way the star system. They were not stories built around the ankles or eyebrows of a favored puppet. The play was the thing.

As nearly as we can recall, the following pictures approximated decent achievement: "The Dark Angel," "Peter Pan," "A Kiss for Cinderella," "The Last Laugh," "The Unholy Three," "Shore Leave," "Siege," "Beggar on Horseback," "The Freshman," "The Goose Woman," "Are Parents People?" and "Welcome Home."

Charlie Chaplin Fetched by Art.

IN deference to the clap-trap from coast to coast about Charlie Chaplin's genius, his "Gold Rush" might be included in the above list. We are inclined to the opinion that while "A Woman of Paris" indicated what goes for genius in direction, Chaplin as an actor has been only a very talented clown.

"The Gold Rush" is the least entertaining of his buffooneries. Art seized him. He stretched out a good two-reeler into feature length, worked the old gags of the house tottering on the edge of a cliff, the clock that falls on a man's head, dance hall jealousy, eating the sole of his shoe, etc. Most of it was not very funny.

Two comedies are included in the list of 12. "The Freshman" was by far the best slapstick product shown here, and "Welcome Home" represented the comedy of situation splendidly developed. The latter picture, by the way, was shown to handfuls at the Delmonte, while thousands clamored to watch Buster Keaton make love to a cow.

Three Masterpieces of Fantasy.

IN the realm of the fantastic, where movies can suggest the impossible far more plausibly than the legitimate theater, there were three masterpieces, "The Last Laugh" and the two Barrie pictures. Every first-run house turned down "The Last Laugh" and it was hawked about the neighborhood theaters, where audiences wondered if it was a German's idea of comedy.

No finer portrayal of the tragedy of old age was ever screened, but not 10 persons in St. Louis swear by Emil Jannings' beard. Theodore Roberts is liked much better. Plenty swear by his beard. The Barrie pictures were almost above reproach, so faithfully did they follow their text, with Betty Bronson recapturing the playwright's sweet whimsicality. "Beggar on Horseback," a fourth admirable fantasy, was a trifle too obscure for movie-goers to grasp. All these pictures were triumphs of the story first and the stars next.

Actors Who Surpassed Themselves.

FROM time to time during the last year movie actors and actresses rose out of a good story, transfigured, and dropping the usual balderdash employed by their ilk gave splendid performances. But mark this—they rose out of good pictures. Thus, Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky contributed the finest love scenes of the year to "The Dark Angel." Richard Barthelmess forgot to look cute in "Shore Leave" and created a marvellously veracious character of a young gob who kisses and forgets.

Mary Alden in "Siege" did beautiful work as the proud mistress of a once-proud family; Louise Dresser made "The Goose Woman" an unforgetable portrait. So also with Lon Chaney in "The Unholy Three." This was a first-rate crook story, sincere for its type, and it supported Chaney's grotesqueries far better than did "The Tower of Lies" or even "The Phantom of the Opera." Likewise, Adolphe Menjou gave his best performance of the year in "Are Parents People?" because it was neat little satire in its own right and was not an effort to make a picture out of Menjou's ability to look wicked.

"The Forgotten Man."

WELL, there they are—a dozen first-rate pictures among 250. But, come to think of it, four per cent success is not so bad. The movies are running along as well as the public and the stars will let them. Gloria Swanson's three-quarter view and John Gilbert's eyes are still more interesting to the shoving hosts of subtitle readers, gum-chewers, candy-talkers and loge-chair sobbers than any plot.

But scattered here and there in the gloom last year were a sort of composite fellow and his wife who see all the faults of the movies, groan at their stupidities, enjoy the bright spots and remain loyal in hope of a brighter day. I think this fellow is called "The Forgotten Man," but I forget what they call his wife. Anyway, thank heaven, both are pretty numerous.

Barefoot Color for New Shoes.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Flesh-colored shoes have appeared on the fashionable London ballroom floors, being worn with hosiery of the same tint, and at a distance creating the impression that the dancers are in bare feet. This novelty in footwear is attributed to a desire for relief from the black evening frocks to which women were drawn by the instinct for smartness and economy. The only objection to the "barefoot" craze, say the modistes, is that the flesh-colored shoes have a tendency to give the wearer a "flat-footed" appearance.

MASTER COMEDY WILL BE REVIVED TONIGHT WITH REMARKABLE CAST

with the Malcolm Fassett troupe in Louisville and Miss Bonstelle's company.

Staged by Basil Dean.

THE comedy is staged by Basil Dean, a prominent English producer, who has devised a unit set making possible such speed in scene shifting that the entire text may be given without cuts. The play was originally in five acts, but has now been arranged so that there are two intervals of six minutes each.

"The School for Scandal," heralded by the previous success of "The Rivals," was produced with signal triumph on May 8, 1777, at the Drury Lane Theater, London, of which Sheridan, though only 25 years old, had recently become manager. An attempt was made to prohibit the performance on the ground that the character of Moses, a usurer, was a lampoon upon a certain candidate for Parliament. The censor declined to interfere. David Garrick superintended the rehearsals and provided a prologue. The cast was so admirable that Charles Lamb thought it one of the compensations of growing old to have seen it.

Washington's Favorite Play.

DURING the first two seasons the comedy was performed no less than 73 times—a miracle in those days. It was produced in New York during 1785, and is said to have been George Washington's favorite play. It has been translated into most of the tongues of Europe, and was played in many of its capitals. In France, as a text-book, "The School for Scandals" holds for young students of English the same melancholy eminence which Caesar's "Commentaries" occupies with tyros in Latin.

To name the actors and actresses who have appeared as this character or that in Sheridan's masterwork is to call the roll of honor of the English-speaking stage. The list includes Mrs. Abington, the original Lady Teazle; Miss Farren, Wallack; Fanny Davenport, Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, Sara Jewett, Sol Russell, Louis James, Mrs. Kendall, Ellen Terry, Ada Rehan, Irving, Cyril Maude, Ada Neilson, Mrs. Langtry, Lady Tree, Gladys Cooper, Richard Mansfield, Sir Beerbolm Tree, Marie Loehr, Charles Hawtrey, Irene Vanbrugh and Godfrey Tearle.

The Rooneys Are Here.

AFTER 20 years in the two-a-day, Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, his wife, have at last entered the legitimate field with a musical comedy entitled "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," which goes on view tonight at the Shubert-Rialto. It was formerly a one-act vaudeville skit, called "The Shamrock." Pat Rooney Jr. is also featured in the cast, which includes Frank Corbett, Martha Vaughn, Rose Kessner, Frank Gardiner, Vivienne Glenn, Anita Nieto, Molly Doherty and Muriel Stryker. Dance numbers prevail in the entertainment.

Frank Craven will appeal next week at the American in his own comedy, "New Brooms." That capital musical play, "Rose-Marie," comes to the Shubert-Rialto next Sunday for a return visit of a week.

"CARMEN" HAS DRASTIC HOUSECLEANING IN NEW MOSCOW THEATER GUISE

one thing went completely by the board, and that was Bizet's glorious music. It was nothing less than excruciating to hear the familiar music delivered by people without voices, to listen to the sharp and strident quality of tone with which these Russians sing to a man.

Carmen's saucy answer to the Colonel in the first act, La, la-la-la, sounded ludicrous, and the toreador made sad havoc of his song. The Jose was the only one in the cast who possessed any sort of a voice. But in action and appearance he wasn't up to Mr. Dantchenko's standard.

The versatile Olga Baklanova was the Carmen, or Carmencita, to call her by her new name, and acted and sang much the same as she did in Offenbach's "La Perichole." Her impersonation had all the elements that the program note attributed to her—"a lithe and willful tigress, conscious of her power but applying it by instinct rather than by calculation, ecstatic in love, intense in hatred."

Too Taut an Intensity.

BUT I, for one, was unmoved. I thought Miss Baklanova too determined to be intense, without a let-up, something which Mr. Dantchenko apparently demands of all his artists. What she did seemed always overdone—the allure, the passion and the hatred. And I could not find evidences of the illuminating quality of imagination.

It seems to me that Mr. Dantchenko should have gone one step further in his drastic alterations. He should have cut out Bizet's music. Then one might have witnessed a fine play made from Merimee's story, and acted for all it was worth.

Salvi Plays at Principia.

A RECITAL will be given Friday night at the Principia by Alberto Salvi, distinguished harpist. He has recently invented an eight-pedal for his instrument. It is a damper, intended to stop the resonance of the strings before attacking the next phrase. This has hitherto been done by muting the strings with the hands.

Ignace Paderewski, formerly Premier of Poland, will give a piano recital at the Odeon on Jan. 21. O. Wade Fallert will give a free organ recital at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Scottish Rite Cathedral. Miss Ruth Mitchell will assist. Members of the Mel-harmonic Club will give a musical program Saturday afternoon at Vandervoort's recital hall. Hans Kindler, 'cellist, will be soloist with the Jessie L. Gaynor Choral Club at the Webster Groves Armory, on Jan. 28.

The Washington University Quadrangle Club will give its annual concert Tuesday night at the Odeon. Among the choral numbers will be Horatio Parker's "The Lamp in the West," "Dedication," by Robert Franc, arranged by Eugene W. Wyatt, and the college song, "Washington," by Gustav Luders. Instrumental pieces will be "Overture to Venus" and "Visions of Salome." Guy Golterman Jr. will be soloist.

MODERN 'DIE WALKUERE' IS SHOCK TO GERMAN AUDIENCE

Play of Features by Beardless Characters, However, Gives New Meaning to Text.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—Wotan without whiskers, appearing recently in a modernized piece of "Die Walkuere," gave Frankfort admirers of Richard Wagner a shock that will be long remembered. The performance was based on an idea similar to that back of "Hamlet in Plus Fours," and made no more of a hit with its audience than the modernized version of Shakspeare's masterpiece previously had made with German audiences.

Siegmund and Hunding were also beardless, but they made up for the hirsute loss by a play of features which gave new meaning to the Wagnerian text. Siegmund and Sieglinde were draped in flowing robes instead of the usual bearskins. The final act, beginning with the wild ride of the Valkyries through the clouds, was represented as taking place in the afternoon instead of in the bewitching darkness.

BRITAIN'S SHINGLED PRINCESS WEARS A WIG TO THE PALACE

Alexandra, Wife of Prince Arthur, Only One of Royal Family to Bob Her Hair.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Princess Alexandra, wife of Prince Arthur of Connaught, has given distinction as the only shingled member of the British royal family. It is noteworthy, however, that whenever she appears at formal dinners at Buckingham Palace the Princess has always worn her "evening locks" as wigs for the bobbed or shingled are called in society circles.

Just what Queen Mary, who has a wealth of gray hair, which she wears becomingly, thinks about the bob the public does not know, but there are strong hints in Mayfair that she does not care for it for girls who have passed their teens. Princess Alexandra was born in 1891.

The Queen of Spain and Queen Maud of Norway, both recent visitors to London, still wear their hair long, as do Queen Marie of Rumania, the troubled mother of the romantic Prince Carol, and the Queen of the Belgians, who recently wase incorrectly reported to have been shingled.

Some of the younger members of the various royal houses, have had their hair cut, but Princess Alexandra of Connaught is the only member of Britain's royal family who thus far has adopted the fashion.

NEW CHURCH FOR JOAN OF ARC

Foundation to Be Laid in Paris on "St. Joan's" Day.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—When St. Joan of Arc's day comes again, May 9, the foundation stone for a new church in her honor will be laid in Paris in fulfillment of a vow made to her in the dark days of early September, 1914, when the Germans seemed destined to occupy Paris.

The late Cardinal Amette, then Archbishop of Paris, made a solemn vow in the Cathedral of Notre Dame that if France were victorious the Catholics of the country would build a church to St. Joan as a thank offering. Plans for the church have been drafted, and a site covering 30,000 square feet purchased between Paris and its suburb of St. Lenis. It was here that Joan prayed before her troops made their attempt to recapture Paris from the Dauphin's enemies and where she prayed again after the failure of that ill-advised attempt, in which she was wounded by an arrow.

COOLIDGE AND MUSCLE SHOALS.

(From Labor, Organ of Rail Unions.)

One of the most remarkable sections of President Coolidge's message is his reference to Muscle Shoals. The President wants to get rid of the shoals. In fact, he is so carger to get rid of the plant that he ignores the most ordinary business prudence in his remarks.

He belittles the "market value" of the Shoals. It's probably not worth more than a first-class battleship, he says, thus suggesting that the plant shall be handed over to "private management" for about one-third of what the Government has put into it.

He insists that the National Government has "demonstrated its utter incapacity" to handle commercial enterprises.

There is much to be said on both sides of the question of public ownership, but Mr. Coolidge's criticism of such ownership as being invariably and inevitably inefficient simply isn't true.

The province of Ontario, Canada, has public ownership of hydro electric plants. It has followed that policy for years. Its hydro electric commission, commonly called the "Hydro," is the biggest power distributing concern in the world—and it sells the cheapest current on the continent of North America.

Ontario has about 2,000,000 inhabitants. It has invested about $250,000,000 in power plants, which is twice the sum this far invested in Muscle Shoals.

The Hydro pays its way, pays all expenses of development and distribution, and is laying by in addition a sinking fund which eventually will retire the whole capital invested in this public enterprise.

And electric current in Ontario costs from two-thirds to one-sixth what it costs on this side of the line! Anything inefficient in a business like that?

The plain truth is that our National Government has bungled Muscle Shoals because the administration wanted, and still wants, to bungle it. No enterprise goes well when managed by men who do not believe in it, and who want to turn it over to someone else.

The prime reason why the Federal Government cannot do as well at Muscle Shoals as the Hydro is doing in Ontario is that President Coolidge and his predecessors and advisers are anxious to turn over the Alabama plant to a private monopoly while the leaders of thought and political action in Ontario are determined to keep the water power of that province for the permanent benefit and use of all its people.

CAPITAL'S PET DICTATORSHIP

(From the Upholsters' Journal, Organ of Upholsterers' Union of North America.)

Our 100 per centers have always felt proud of the American tradition, "Let the people rule," and profess to look with horror on the Soviet dictatorship. At the same time they accept the dictatorship of Mussolini over Italy and sponsor it and aid it with a $50,000,000 loan raised by the J. P. Morgan & Co.

America's industrialists are upholding in Italy what they condemn in Russia. And the reason is simple, the Italian Soviet is for, by and of the money class.

The Coolidge administration has shown absolute disregard for national traditions and the rights of the people in the debt settlement with Italy. In accepting 20 cents on the dollar, 62 year payment, we have given Mussolini a new lease on his hold on the Italian people for even tyrants must have finances with which to carry on. It emphasizes also the deplorable state of Italy's finance. Yet with the settlement made the Morgans immediately offer a private loan of $100,000,000 with $60,000,000 more promised. Thus does the United States, the cradle of liberty, help saddle on a helpless people, a Mussolini.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

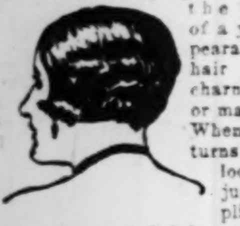
SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK



Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, for only 75 cents." This is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This homemade remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

LIVELY INTEREST IS ENCOUNTERED IN WOMEN'S FETE

Organizations in Nearby Communities Eagerly Receive Information of Exposition Plans.

ADVANCE SALE OF TICKETS STARTED

Concession in Price Made to Early Buyers; Unusual Effects in Decorations Promised.

Speakers were sent out last week to appear before women's organizations in nearby communities to assist in the advance exploitation of the Women's National Exposition to be held at the Coliseum, Feb. 16 to 22.

An outline of the 175 exhibits which will be presented to depict woman's achievements in the struggle for complete emancipation in business, industry, politics and the arts was presented by Mrs. Howard R. Clark, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the organization sponsoring the exposition, and Mrs. Thomas D. Shaffer, chairman of the ticket committee. They reported they found a lively interest in the project in East St. Louis, Granite City and Alton.

The exposition has placed 100,000 tickets on advance sale at headquarters in the Town Club Building, at three for $1. The price after Feb. 9 will be 50 cents each. Any organization handling tickets will receive 10 per cent commission.

Congress of Women Important.

The Congress of Women, to be held in conjunction with the Exposition, promises to attract several women of national standing. Among these, as announced by Mrs. N. A. McMillan, chairman of the program committee, will be Miss Mary Anderson of the United States Department of Labor, who will appear under the auspices of the committee directing the exhibit of "Women in Industry"; Major Julia Stimson, superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps, formerly of Barnes Hospital; Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant Attorney-General of the United States, and Mrs. Bessie Parker Brueggemann of St. Louis, chairman of the United States Employes' Compensation Commission, at Washington, D. C.

Space has been arranged for 145 booths in the Coliseum, most of which have been allotted. The decorations will present magnificent Roman fete-rainbow colored canopies over rows of booths, each booth presenting a different ware or theme and presided over by attractively garbed young women.

Decorations to Be a Feature.

"One of the most striking things about the Exposition," said Mrs. Louis J. Brooks, executive chairman, yesterday, "will be its Roman decorations. It is the frist time they have been used in this city and we will have the use of them for four consecutive years. They will form a dazzling background for the booths and our other attractions.

"The stage will be at the south end, where the 'Congress of Women' will assemble. The booths will all center around it and we promise visitors a treat in color and arrangement."

The Missouri Pacific booth, it was announced yesterday, will contain five rooms, one a reception room, where Mrs. L. W. Baldwin, wife of the president of the road; Mrs. John G. Lonsdale and Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus will receive.

MRS. CHRISTINE COMPTON IN CAST AT EMPRESS

St. Louis Woman Appeared with Woodward Players in "So This Is London."

Mrs. Christine Compton of 8 Beverly place, granddaughter of Edward Bates, Attorney-General in Lincoln's Cabinet, and niece of Lieut.-Gen. J. O. Bates, played one of the roles in "So This Is London" last week at the Empress.

She appeared professionally in New York as the foster mother in a production called "Edgar Allan Poe," starring Lila Lee and James Kirkwood. Coming to St. Louis to visit her children during the holidays, she prolonged the stay to appear with the Woodward Players. She returns to New York tomorrow.

Germans Oppose Newer Dances.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—German conservatives, notably supporters of the monarchistic regime, are attacking the modern dances. The campaign was started by the former Kaiser in 1913. He issued an order forbidding his officers to dance the tango in public. The campaign failed because even the former Crown Prince and his set ignored the order. Now men like Siegfried Wagner, who play politics of the Ludendorff-Hitler variety, have pounced on the Charleston. The royalist set in Bavaria has barred the dance from its social functions and permits nothing but waltzes, polkas and similar dignified dances.

CHANGE AGREED ON FOR ILLINOIS ROAD NO. 12

Route Will Run Along Thirty-first Street in East St. Louis, From French Village.

A meeting of property holders with D. O. Thomas, County Highway Engineer of St. Clair County, was held Thursday in East St. Louis to obtain signatures of landowners for completing the proposed new right-of-way leading into East St. Louis over State Highway No. 12, the Lincoln Trail from Baltimore to St. Louis. Afterward Thomas said 19 signatures still are needed and he expected to obtain the entire right-of-way without condemnation proceedings.

An agreement has been reached between city officials and the Illinois Division of Highways whereby a change in the city limits at 5100 east, across St. Clair avenue extended, will permit the new route to be brought by the State into Thirty-first street along a four-mile stretch from French Village. St. Clair avenue is to be improved and will meet the State road at Thirty-first street.

At present Route 12 runs through the bluffs to French Village, and follows north along the foot of the bluffs to State street west. The new route will turn west at French Village, will parallel the St. Louis and O'Fallon Railroad tracks to Fifty-first street, where it will cross, continuing west to meet St. Clair avenue.

The Lincoln Trail is one of the principal East and West highways into East St. Louis. When the proposed change is completed, it will join the National Old Trails road, from Washington to Los Angeles, at Tenth street and St. Clair avenue, both following the same route to the Free Bridge and into St. Louis. With the completion of the entire plan of the Ninth street subway improvement, which provides for the re-routing of State Highways 3 and 4 through the subway instead of through Brooklyn, the Lincoln Trail will also join these highways at Tenth and St. Clair avenue.

Surveys have been made for the re-routing of 3 and 4 through Madison County by the State Division of Highways but the right-of-way has not been acquired. Both follow the same route through the Tri-Cities to Mitchell, from where Route 3 leads to Alton and Jacksonville and Route 4 to Chicago, the shortest route from St. Louis.

INDIGESTION RELIEVED BY BLACK-DRAUGHT

"I have used Black-Draught for 25 years and keep taking it once in a while when I need medicine," says Mr. A. C. Whittle, proprietor of the Whittle Hotel, DeKalb, Texas. Mr. Whittle has been a well known citizen of Bowie county for a great many years, although coming originally from Dalton, Ga.

"I began taking Black-Draught for indigestion," continues Mr. Whittle, "spitting up of my food, and a tight, close feeling in my chest. I had this trouble about two years. I finally read of Black-Draught and began taking it and soon I was rid of the trouble.

"No one knows what I suffered. Even water would come back. I could eat such a little. Black-Draught helped me, so I could eat most anything.

"I took it a year or so and then left it off and after a while I had a return of this dyspepsia, spitting up sour. I went back to Black-Draught and was relieved again and have never entirely left it off since. I think it a splendid liver medicine."

Mr. Whittle would not have continued to take Black-Draught consistently for 25 years, if it had not benefited him. Other people in great numbers have told how Black-Draught has been used in their families over long periods of years—in many cases for several generations.

Thedford's Black-Draught is no new-fangled "cure-all." It has been used by the public for over 80 years in the treatment of indigestion and torpid liver. It is made from pure, medicinal roots and herbs, finely powdered and carefully and scientifically mixed in modern sanitary laboratories. Black-Draught contains no harmful mineral drugs.

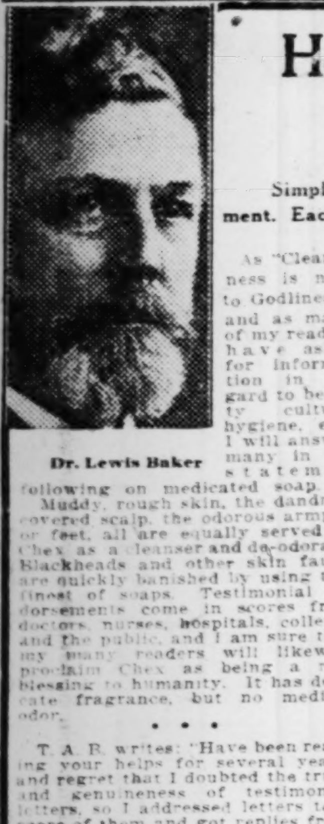
Fee-Fixing Grave Digger Jailed.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—The official grave digger at Rheinach, near Bonn, failed to impress the Court with his defense when haled in to answer a charge of price juggling. His fee for digging a grave in the Christian Cemetery, it was shown, was 12 marks, whereas he demanded 18 marks for performing the same function in the Jewish Cemetery. His defense was that the soil in the latter was heavier and, therefore, the making of a grave required more labor. This failed to convince the local Magistrate and he was sentenced to spend two weeks in jail and to pay a fine of 20 marks.



Dr. Lewis Baker

Health Questions Answered

By Dr. Lewis Baker and Associates

An Advertisement Informing the Public In a Common-sense Manner How to Distinguish the Simpler Ailments and Symptoms, and the Right Remedies for Treatment. Each Medicine Possesses the Highest Qualities for the Purpose Intended.

As "Cleanliness is next to Godliness," and as many of my readers have asked for information in regard to beauty culture, hygiene, etc., I will answer many in the statement following on medicated soap.

Muddy, rough skin, the dandruff covered scalp, the odorous armpits or feet, all are equally served by Chex as a cleanser and de-odorant. Blackheads and other skin faults are quickly banished by using this finest of soaps. Testimonial endorsements come in scores from doctors, nurses, hospitals, colleges and the public, and I am sure that my many readers will likewise proclaim Chex as being a real blessing to humanity. It has delicate fragrance, but no medical odor.

T. A. B. writes: "Have been reading your helps for several years, and regret that I doubted the truth and genuineness of testimonial letters, so I addressed letters to a score of them and got replies from all but one. All praised and verified your every claim. I need a true laxative to avoid constipation. Do you advise pills or liquid?"

Answer: All letters published are guaranteed genuine. If all received were published each month the space required would fill this whole newspaper. I recommend Casca-Royal Pills as best suited to relieve constipation of children or adults.

S. A. G. asks: "I am weak, nervous, run-down and pale, and am sure I need a good tonic. What do you advise?"

Answer: The fine tonic properties and digestive aids in Cadomene Tablets should be adapted for such condition due to an anemic undernourished blood stream. Take regularly for several weeks or months as your case requires.

T. R. L. asks: "I was forced by circumstances to very hard work where I was exposed to damp surroundings, and developed painful rheumatic condition from which I am seeking relief. Will you kindly suggest medicine?"

Answer: For relief of acute pain take five grain Su-thol Tablets. To help clear the system by elimination I advise Cardiol Tablets, as being exceptionally effective.

N. B. B. asks: "I want medicine to aid the kidneys and bladder. Have frequent backache. My night's rest is disturbed."

Answer: I suggest you use Balmwort Tablets, which are exceptionally effective in relieving and overcoming such symptoms.

R. C. R. asks: "Can you advise a laxative which will tend to relieve a case of piles?"

Answer: If you have this trouble, because of constipation, I advise that you take Sulpherb Tablets. They contain purified sulphur, cream of tartar and mild herbal ingredients which act most favorably in congested conditions.

N. C. K. asks: "Will you kindly tell me a remedy for severe headache, due I think to neuralgia?"

Answer: Obtain Su-thol Tablets and take as directed. These tablets do not depress the heart and are useful in relieving acute, agonizing pain due to functional disturbances.

Mrs. L. C. C. asks: "Will you tell me of a cough remedy safe to give my children?"

Answer: I recommend Mentho-Laxene as the most effective and harmless, as it contains no opiates or chloroform and is quite inexpensive. Children take it willingly, as the taste is pleasant.

Miss T. C. asks: "I want to reduce about 20 pounds, and would be glad to know of a safe obesity treatment."

Answer: I have recommended Arbolone Tablets and thousands have used them to cause reduction of from 10 to 50 pounds. Reducing five to ten pounds a month is fast enough.

Answer to C. C. T.: You can check a cold and prevent much suffering, by applying Mentho-Laxene Salve in the nostrils at the first signs of irritation. For catarrh of the head it is very quickly effective.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

ST. LOUIS ORGAN BUILDERS GET CONTRACT FOR VATICAN

$15,000 Instrument to Be Installed in Pontifical College Now Under Construction.

George Kilgen & Son, Inc., organ builders, of 4016 North Union boulevard, has been given the contract to install a large organ in the Pontifical College of the Propaganda of the Faith, a building now under construction in the Vatican group of buildings at Rome.

The building probably will not be completed until early next year, and the organ will be installed immediately after the structure is completed. The organ will cost about $15,000, exclusive of shipping and installation costs.

Alfred G. Kilgen, vice president of the company, visited Rome last summer and virtually completed negotiations for the sale of the organ at that time.

ADVICE OF PREMIER BRIAND

"Don't Preside Over Government of Your Country," He Says.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Premier Briand often shows signs of impatience with the wranglings which are continually cropping out during the discussions of the various plans advanced by successive finance ministers for the restoration of France's treasury.

Emerging from a particularly heated session of the Finance Committee of the chamber, M. Briand, with head bowed and hands behind his back, was crossing the large ante-chamber to the deliberation room, when he was surrounded by correspondents. "Boys, let me give you some sound advice," the Premier began, thus cutting off any indiscreet questions. "If ever you are offered the honor of presiding over the Governmnt of your country, don't accept." And he walked away without another word.

RISE ABOVE ENVIRONMENTS

Dock Laborer, Stevedore and Others Fill Roles on Stage.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—A dock laborer, an aviator and a school teacher took leading parts in the production of John Galsworthy's "The Pigeon," staged at the East Ham Town Hall by the Workers' Union, which is endeavoring to provide good plays at popular prices for the laboring classes of London.

A young stevedore was acclaimed as impressive a Judge as ever graced the stage or the bench. An insurance agent impersonated the ancient cabman with his red nose, while other parts were taken by a tramway conductor, a shoemaker, a truck driver and a girl who operates a sewing machine in a pajama factory.

Music Guild Meets Today.

The January meeting of the Musicians' Guild of St. Louis will be held this evening at Hotel Chase. After a business session at 4:30 o'clock, there will be a program by Mrs. Karl Howard, soprano, and Alfred Schmied, pianist; and a demonstration of work at the settlement music school by Misses Agnes Gray and Edna Lieber.

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Health Wealth and Opportunity in FLORIDA

LIVING COSTS CONTRIBUTE TO THRIFTINESS

Visitors to Florida express surprise over the moderate costs of living. Here, as everywhere, you spend what you are willing to pay for the living scale you prefer.

Hotels, apartments or living rooms may be had at no more than you pay for similar accommodations elsewhere; Florida provides vegetables, milk, butter, eggs and fruit at prices wholly comparable with rates throughout the country.

If you wish luxury, you pay its price; if your demands are modest, so are the costs.

Taxes are low, and there is a $500 exemption on your personal property.

You will enjoy living, working, making your home in Florida, where health, wealth and opportunity every day demonstrate their abundance.

There is no marvel about the turn of popular interest toward Florida. It is simply the age-old tendency of man—your tendency—to secure his wants.

Men have traveled the world in search of health, and have found it in Florida where sunshine, soil, ocean and Gulf yield comfort and vigor. Forest regions and 30,000 lakes give sportsmen rare enjoyment; 10,000 miles of water frontage, hundreds of golf courses and thousands of miles of motor roads offer varied recreations.

And as the foundation—the substantial, basic groundwork—acres of unsurpassed fertility, some yielding five crops a year; more than 2,500 manufacturing plants, immensely rich mineral deposits, and numerous industries based on the resources of forest, river, lake and sea. Nor is opportunity closed in any channel to the man who brings to Florida the equipment of energy and ambition.

Boy Scouts and Their Activities

Members of Troop 28 on a truck on a recent outing.

Troop 28 is proud of the fact that it "runs itself." During the 10 years of its existence, despite a registered enrollment of 105 scouts, it has been under the supervision of Scoutmaster Paul H. Miller, for almost the entire period. It would be impossible, Miller says, for one man to handle so large a troop, were it not that the troops' activities in charge of leaders chosen from the troop active membership.

A two-day camping trip held over the New Year's holidays to the Big River, 30 miles from St. Louis, offers an example of their self-government. Although the scoutmaster was present, the entire camp program was prepared and put into execution by three Eagle Scout members of the troop: Present Senior Patrol Leader Carl Yeckel, George Werntz, and Fred Goessling, the latter former Senior Patrol Leaders and now acting as troop counsellors.

These three boys submitted a menu for six meals, which was approved without change, took charge of the cooking, and divided the troop into "fatigue" details for the two days. They also directed the operation of a two-ton truck, provided for transportation by Troop Committeeman J. E. Bacheider. Although the cooking for 30 scouts was done on a two-burner oil stove, it was managed without difficulty.

The Scoutmaster believes that training in leadership is one of the outstanding opportunities the scouting program offers to boys.

Official plans for the nation-wide celebration of the sixteenth anniversary week of the Boy Scouts of America, Feb. 7-13, in which more than 24,500 troops with 800,000 members will take part, were issued Jan. 2 by national headquarters at New York. The days of the week have been designated as Church, Anniversary, School, Home, Service, Patriotism, and Good Health day, each day to be marked by appropriate observances.

St. Louis will follow this plan only generally. As in other cities, special Scout services will be held at many churches on Church day, but the St. Louis program will center around the Annual Scout Circus at the Coliseum Feb. 12 and 13. At the circus all troops under the council will unite in one great demonstration embodying all of the principles and activities of scouting.

Ralph Hubbard, son of Elbert Hubbard, founder of the Roycroft printeries and cult, will direct and take part in a picturesque Indian pageant at the circus. Hundreds of Scouts will appear in the Indian dances and ceremonies, and Hubbard brings with him costumes and accessories of great value which he has gathered in his years of study of Indian lore and practices.

Hubbard is connected with the University of Colorado, and is known as one of the greatest authorities on Indian life and history. He was director of American Indian pageantry at the International Boy Scout jamboree in London in 1923, and has produced the Indian pageant in many cities of the United States and abroad. The Boy Scout cricus will close the St. Louis achievement round-up, and there will be many events of interest in the arena as well as the Indian pageant.

North District.

Scoutmaster Thomas A. Everson was unable to attend the last meeting of Troop 22 because of illness.

Troop 65 will hold a formal investituture ceremony next Sunday at 7 p. m. at the Mount Auburn Methodist Church, Hodiamont avenue and North Market street. All scouts are invited.

Troop 84 visited an orphans' home Christmas morning and distributed toys and candy. They also contributed $10 toward the support of their church for the coming year.

Troop 92 has moved to the Samuel Cupples School. Several new members have been added recently.

Tuesday's meeting of Troop 147, held outdoors, was devoted to instruction in the proper use of the ax, knife and hatchet. Logs were set up, felled and cut up into firewood. After inspection popcorn balls and coffee were served. A week ago Saturday this troop hiked to Kenwood Springs and spent the day studying methods of trailing and fire-building.

Troop 156, St. Casimer's Catholic Church, Eighth and Mullanphy streets, registered for their second year under Scoutmaster Ben Modinski, with 17 scouts. Their registration last year was 27. They have set this number as their achievement goal in the roundup.

Scout Harold Tyberendt of Troop 162 is the first Scout in the north district to qualify for his first-class gold badge in the achievement roundup. He was a maverick in last year's roundup.

Although only five merit badges were needed to meet their roundup quota, Troop 172 at last meeting reported 16 passed. This troop has set a goal of at least two hikes a month for the coming year.

A group of scouts from Troop 85 sang carols throughout Maplewood, Christmas eve, collecting $25 for the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The troop presented their scoutmaster, J. H. Bell, with a chair for Christmas. He has been their scoutmaster for 11 years.

West District.

Troop 7 took an overnight hike to Jefferson Barracks last Saturday and Sunday, despite inclement weather.

Troop 20 took its first hike of the year to Sugar Creek, following a trail three miles to camp. A hot meal of camp stew was followed by games and tests, the hike terminating in a game of capture the flag.

Clarence E. Mange has resigned as scoutmaster of Troop 30, a position he has held for six years. He has been very active in scout work for 13 years. He is being replaced by B. M. Goldsmith, president of the Goldsmith Clothing Co.

Troop 31, under Scoutmaster W. C. Coulson and Priestly Melton, formerly a scout in Troop 60, is making rapid progress in reorganization. The field executive visited the troop last Wednesday.

Troop 59 is holding special mid-week meetings at the scoutmaster's home for the benefit of scouts wishing to pass tests for the round-up, and the scouts are taking advantage of the opportunity. The drum and bugle corps are meeting each week under the direction of Troop Committeeman Rueweler.

Troop 46 spent Saturday, last week, at the Missouri River, cutting material for the 35-foot tower they plan to erect at the circus.

Assistant Scoutmaster C. E. Eickmeyer of Troop 223 has been discharged from a hospital, where he recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

South District.

A pie-eating contest, which was won by the Patrol Leaders, featured the last meeting of Troop 185. An investiture ceremony also was held, at which the troop commitee presented each scout with a 1926 diary.

As this troop is planning to hike to Camp Irondale next summer, they are holding short hikes to condition the scouts. Last Saturday week seven of the smaller members hiked 20 miles to Rankin Cave, west of Valley Park. They explored the cave and took several tests in cooking. Two scouts from Webster Groves Troop 9 were guests. The remainder of the troop hiked to Ferguson.

Troop 77 raised $15 for troop activities at a social last week. The Mothers' Club furnished refreshments for the meeting.

The Panther Patrol of Troop 18, planned an entertainment and collected presents for the boys' ward in a hospital Christmas. The patients were under quarantine so the scouts were required to mail the gifts, with Christmas cards and letters. The troop sang carols and scout songs at St. Luke's Hospital.

Suburban District.

In appreciation of his work for the troop, Troop 3, Webster Groves, held a surprise banquet Thursday evening for Scoutmaster Nat Smith, presenting him with a scoutmaster's hat. Assistant Scoutmasters Perry Pettengill and Hervey Roberts were presented with Scout rings. The new troop committeeman, E. C. Adams, acted as toastmaster, and Troop Committee Chairman G. O. Peters spoke on "The Meaning of the Scout Movement." Plans for the Roundup were discussed and games played.

A week ago Friday, Troop 9, Webster Groves, entertained their parents and Scoutmaster G. V. Brackbill, the scoutmaster, was presented with a statue of a Boy Scout. The Bear Patrol conducted the program. Scoutmaster Brackbill spoke at the meeting.

Tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union and Kensington avenue, scout leaders of the West District will hold a dinner, at which their new field executive, S. C. Reaves, will be introduced. Final details for the circus and roundup given by Scout Executive Earle W. Beckman will be discussed. The leaders of the Diamond W. Troop have arranged a program of music and scouting activities. Tickets are obtainable at headquarters.

All organized drum and bugle corps and all individual drummers and buglers are requested to report next Saturday at 2:30 p. m. to J. S. Bladder Weakness Quickly Corrected by Recent Scientific Discovery for Old and Young

Free 50c Package

What a wonderful comfort in sleep all night and not get up once, from bladder weakness.

The scientific discovery upon which Kellogg's Brown Tablets are based, is to insure a night's rest by making the kidneys function properly. Successes have been had with thousands of men of eighty and ninety years.

Every man, young and old, should try this wonderful treatment and end nights of untold misery.

"Hurrah for Kellogg's Brown Tablets! Life Is Worth Living Again. No More of that Tired, Worn-Out Feeling From Losing Sleep at Night."

Wants His Name Used

"Had kidney and bladder trouble ever since I was a boy. Had to get up 12 times per night. My night's rest was continually distrubed. I sleep and feel good through the day. I am a baptist minister, and if anyone desires to write me they may."
REV. S. V. BAISE, Ethridge, Tenn.

Brown Tablets Avoid Operation

"I began taking your tablets in 1920. A doctor said the only thing was an operation, then I saw your ad in the paper and sent right away for a treatment. Today I am feeling fine."
FRED W. ZIMMERMAN,
740 Elizabeth St., Flint, Mich.

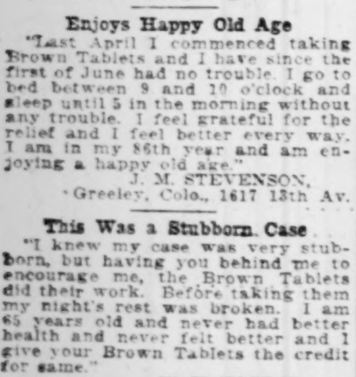
"Wonderful! Wonderful! Sleep Like a Top All Night Long Kellogg's Brown Tablets Make One Feel Young Again."

Enjoys Happy Old Age

"Last April I commenced taking Brown Tablets and I have since the first of June had no trouble. I go to bed between 9 and 10 o'clock and sleep until 5 in the morning without any trouble. I feel grateful for the relief and I feel better every way. I am in my 86th year and am enjoying a happy old age."
J. M. STEVENSON,
Greeley, Colo., 1617 13th Av.

This Was a Stubborn Case

"I knew my case was very stubborn, but having you behind me to encourage me, the Brown Tablets did their work. Before taking them my night's rest was broken. I am 65 years old and never had better health and never felt better and I give your Brown Tablets the credit for same."
W. H. FOSTER,
Eldorado Springs, Mo.



"To Sleep All Through the Night, Makes Us Old-Timers Boys Again."

Feels Like a 2-Year-Old

"I have taken your Brown Tablets and it is really wonderful how much better I am already. I sleep well now. Before I could not sleep more than two or three hours of the night. Your Brown Tablets are wanderful. I was going down hill fast. I could hardly walk; now I get around like a young fellow and feel like a 2-year-old in the track."
H. C. AUSTIN,
Asheville, N. C., R. 1.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL
AT THE AGE OF 83

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

SAYS SHE IS GLAD TO ENDORSE IT

As She Feels It Is Her Duty to Let Others Know the Wonderful Results She Obtained from the Use of HERB JUICE.

"I am really glad to endorse Herb Juice as the greatest medicine that I have ever used with the hope that other sufferers may read my statement and be induced to try this great remedy which has relieved me and my husband of indigestion, constipation, severe stomach trouble, headaches, etc. And no matter how much I praise Herb Juice I don't believe I could say enough to justify the improved condition that my husband and I are now enjoying," said Mrs. L. E. Byrd, who resides at 6418A Nashville, ave., St. Louis, Mo., when she called to see the Herb Juice man recently.

MRS. L. E. BYRD.

Continuing her remarks Mrs. Byrd said: "I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble, constipation and heartburn for a number of years. It seemed that after my meals I would have those dreadful gas attacks, regardless of how light my diet. I would suffer intensely with heartburn and was dreadfully constipated. No matter what I tried it seemed that nothing gave me any relief and my ailments had me in a pretty badly rundown condition. My husband was in practically the same condition that I was, and he was told that he had ulcerated stomach. He also had violent headaches, and his rest was badly broken. We kept hearing so much about Herb Juice and so many people recommended it so highly that we at last decided to try it ourselves. And from the very beginning we could see a change. We have been taking Herb Juice constantly now for some time and must say that we both are 100% improved in every way. I am never troubled any more with that terrible gassy stomach and my heartburn is all gone. I never know what it is to suffer from constipation. My husband joins me in giving Herb Juice a hearty endorsement as the greatest medicine we have ever used and the only medicine that has given us the relief for which we have long sought. I know beyond a question of a doubt that anyone suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments will find Herb Juice is all that they need."

Herb Juice is the biggest selling medicine on the market where it is known. Hundreds are calling daily to see the Herb Juice man at Walgreen Drug Co., 514 Washington Ave., giving statements for publication and praising Herb Juice, that their friends may be induced to try this great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers in St. Louis.

MASONIC CHILDREN'S HOME SETS RECORD

Only One Death Among Inmates Since Institution Started 37 Years Ago.

But one death among its inmates in 37 years is the unusual record of the Masonic Children's home, 5351 Delmar boulevard. And officials of the home have no formula to offer for such successful child-rearing.

"We have no 'trick methods,'" Sol E. Waggoner, superintendent of the home for the last seven years, president of the Masonic Children's Home Association and connected with its work in one way or another since its inception in 1889, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. "We haven't a formula, expressed in calories, that is guaranteed to fit the needs of every child. Neither do we let each one work out his daily life to suit the needs of his own real or imagined individuality. And yet the only death we have had was that of an infant brought in and marked "deceased" in the register the next day."

Divided in Groups.

There are at present 128 children in the home, Waggoner said, ranging in age from 3 to 18, but mainly between the ages of 8 and 14. They are divided into two groups, with a slightly more superintended program for the younger children.

The babies go to bed at 7:15, the older boys and girls at 9:15. Everybody gets up at 8. The children serve their own meals: Breakfast at 8:15; lunch, for those who can get home from school, at 12; supper at 5:30.

The youngsters are allowed to play all day—"and more in summer," Waggoner added—under the eyes of a nurse. The older children, since they go to school, have home-work, and help in the routine work of the home, have less time for playing—three hours in the afternoon. They have a completely equipped playground with everything from skipping ropes to a flying dutchman.

Like Cold Showers.

Daily baths are provided for the babies. The others must take warm baths at least twice a week, but most of them bathe oftener and like to finish off with a cold shower, Waggoner said. Immediate medical attention is accorded even the slightest scratch on the finger.

"When the doctor suggests that our program doesn't meet the needs of some sick or unusual child," Waggoner explains, "we try to give it the particular care it requires."

Two hundred and thirty boys and girls have been raised from infancy at the home, according to the records, and placed in remunerative positions upon "graduating." The number of children who have spent shorter terms at the Home is not accurately known but totals above 600.

According to last year's treasurer's report, no special contributions to the Home are accepted, its expenses being defrayed from the budget of the State Masonic Association. In 1925 each child cost the Home between $400 and $500. The institution is exempt from city, State and national taxation.

LONDON BRIDGE ENDANGERED

Tides Weaken Stone Successor of the "Falling Down" Spans.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Once again London bridge is in danger of "falling down." Observers of water stages in the River Thames claim that the famous old Waterloo bridge, recently condemned as unsafe, is not alone in being threatened by the tricks of the tide and the frequent dredging operations, but that London bridge also will soon have to be replaced by a modern structure.

Like the doomed Waterloo bridge, London bridge is of stone. It was built a century ago, replacing anotherd stone structure which replaced the famous old wooden span which, after "falling down" for centuries, was so badly damaged in the great fire of London, in 1666, that it had to be demolished.

Bride Carries Her Dog to Altar

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—A bride who carried her pet terrier to the altar on her wedding day attracted much attention here. She was Miss Barbara Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hill of Arlington Lodge, Eastbourne, who became the wife of Lieut. Alexander Leslie of the royal navy, in St. James' Church, Piccadilly. Just before the ceremony Miss Hill handed the dog to one of her friends to hold during the service. Afterward she carried it to the waiting automobile, which was surrounded by a curious crowd.

Clewiston is a property unlike any other in the state of Florida. It is the site of a model community—selected in 1923—under development since then—and destined to become one of the finest garden spots and one of the principal cities of Florida's lovely interior.

Picture to yourself a community—small enough to be select and large enough to be alive and secure. Give it the personal planning of such a master as John Nolen. At its front door, place a great Inland Sea—sparkling under the golden warmth of Florida's year-round sunshine. At its back door, provide it with a tremendous area of the richest agricultural soil in the world—the large part of which a great northern industry owns and cultivates for the production of its raw materials. Require of it any outdoor sport you may name. Fishing—in a fresh water sea where hundreds instead of dozens of varieties of fish abound. Hunting—nearby. Swimming, golf, boating of all kinds—charming roads to motor on and bridle paths to explore. A city beautiful—set amid the soft verdure of the tropics—promising warmth, color, health, longevity of years.

This is the picture of Clewiston. This is a picture of the community that was selected before Florida's boom began—a place endowed with bounteous gifts by nature. The site of values today. The city of an assured future; a permanent development.

Clewiston presents today—if you do not wait too long—the opportunities and pleasures of Florida at a price level which you can afford.

Basic Community Building Forces

Back of Clewiston are four basic community building forces combining to assure a steady growth and increasing wealth.

1. An ideal climate and natural healthy environment, so necessary to the prosperity and social upbuilding of any community.
2. Transportation facilities. Clewiston enjoys rail transportation with Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and will have water connections through canals and river to both ocean and gulf. It is now being connected with both coasts at Ft. Myers and Palm Beach by the new Cross State Highway, expected to be finished early in 1926.
3. Agricultural wealth—super-production in all seasons of the fruits, vegetables and cereals of the temperate zone and in due season of subtropical products, oranges, lemons, nuts. And sugar-cane soil equal to the richest in the world.
4. Industrial activity—with raw materials right at the door, the native products of the surrounding soil. The sugar-mill and other industries contemplated for Clewiston should create a circulation of wealth, a basis for business and professional activity—the dawn of industrial Florida.

The combination of these four great elements offers a firm basis for the prediction that Clewiston will become one of the great cities of Florida. Send for maps showing railways, highways and canals

NEW FLINT JUNIOR SIX, MADE ONLY IN COACH MODEL

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—With several surprise cars, including the new 92-horsepower Chrysler "Imperial," the new Stutz 92-horsepower straight eight with worm drive and floor five inches lower than in other automobiles, the new Willys-Knight "70" six, and the new low-priced General Motors Pontiac six, the National Automobile Show opened here today with prospects of being accepted as the most interesting ever held. (Full descriptions of these new automobiles, and of others, will be found on other pages of this automobile section.)

The show assumes an international aspect by reason of the World Motor Transport Congress which is being held with it and is attended by delegates from most parts of the world.

A motor truck congress is another feature of show week. The show is staged in Grand Central Palace, which is in the very center of the city, convenient to hotels and theaters. It is the most elaborately decorated of motor car shows, being presented with an Italian setting that has permitted some beautiful effects. Tomorrow and Tuesday, there will be trade sessions at the show until 1 o'clock, so that manufacturers, dealers and others in the industry may inspect the exhibits more carefully than is possible when the exhibition is open to the public.

The "New Day" Jewett, which was introduced only recently in the $1000 class, will also be a center of interest at the show. The Jewett's speed and dash in traffic and ease of handling and parking make it a most interesting car.

So will the new Reos, for not only have the Reo body lines been somewhat changed, but the new Reos have standard gear shift and option of standard brake pedals system or of the braking system that has been peculiar to Reo for years.

There was much interest in the new Auburn four, which has a 5-bearing motor and is in the medium-priced field with the same body designs as the Auburn six and eight, to which it will be a companion.

The St. Louis-built Diana straight eight, the Jordan light line eight, which was introduced a few months ago, the Nash-built Ajax six, the light Peerless six, also will be shown for the first time at a national show.

The same is true of the new Star six, which was launched so recently that dealers are only now beginning to obtain it in quantity. The Star six, which is to be a companion of the Star four, as the new Pontiac is of the Oakland, has a powerful motor, which, combined with light weight and advanced design, makes it an unusual performer. Prices of Star six models are the lowest for a six yet announced.

Pontiac Six at Show.

The Pontiac, which General Motors has been developing for several years, is to be priced between the Chevrolet and the Olds six, and is reported to have been developed to be the lowest priced six in the world. It has an engine of unusual dimensions, the bore being 3¼ inches, while the stroke is only 3¾ inches.

Marmon is showing a new line of special models, similar in chassis and bodies to the standard and de luxe lines, but half way between them in luxuriousness of appointments.

Packard offers a new speedster on single six and straight eight chassis that is very attractive.

Cadillac, whose new line was introduced last fall, exhibits some attractive custom-built designs as well as standard models.

Closed Bodies the Rule.

Closed bodies, of course, rule the show, although some of the most interesting models are among the higher priced roadsters and four-passenger speedsters. Virtually all makes of cars show body design refinements and chassis refinements. The trend toward more colorful body finish is in evidence throughout the displays, while lacquer finishes are general.

Improved lighting and especially better vision for the driver are noteworthy in the new offerings. Front pillars have been cut down by the use of steel supports, in some instances to not more than 2½-inches. The all-steel body is growing in favor.

Primarily this development is important because it makes for safety, but it has many other advantages as well, notably, manufacturing economies which are being passed on to the buyer, durability and freedom from squeaks and rattles and finally, ease of repair in case of dings or dents outside, or worn or torn upholstery within.

The trend toward de luxe models is unmistakable. Rickenbacker has gone wholly on a de luxe basis for both its six and vertical eight lines.

Rubber spring hangings, which are a feature of the new Chrysler "Imperial," are shown on the Locomobile Junior eight, the Revere, the Duesenberg eight, and other cars.

Air cleaners, oil filters or rectifiers and gasoline filters are installed on a number of cars, either all of them or in some combination.

Chandler has installed the "One Shot" chassis lubricating system, which was first used on the Cleveland six. Packard and Marmon have their own form of this system, while the new Stutz uses a system that is supplied from the engine.

Shock absorbers, snubbers or stabilators are fitted on most cars priced above $1500, and on some cars in the lower priced fields.

Most cars exhibited have four-wheel brakes, and virtually all have balloon tires.

The most interesting brakes at the show are the Timken hydrostatic four-wheel variety used on the new Stutz eight. The brake bands are in six segments, which are expanded against the drums by the pressure of a nonfreezable liquid that inflates a moulded rubber tube, in much the same fashion as a tire inner tube is inflated with air. These brakes require no adjustment.

Fifty American automobile factories have exhibits at the show.

The HUPMOBILE 6

Judge this great new Hupmobile Six on its performance as compared with performance that costs hundreds more.

Compare its silky smoothness—its even power-flow—its charm of appearance—its comfort.

Compare its inside construction—the mechanical advantages which assure characteristic Hupmobile low upkeep cost and long life.

A genuine Hupmobile—this fine quality Six—with attributes which lift it far above its price class.

Be your own demonstrator—drive it yourself as you like to drive.

DODGE PRICE CUT SUBSTANTIAL ONE

Reductions Range as High as $180, and Are Retroactive to Dec. 15.

The Dodge Brothers price cut, which had been the object of general curiosity since it was announced Dec. 15 that one would be made, ranges from $180 on the type A sedan to $75 on the chassis and $60 on the roadster.

The reductions and new prices, as announced, are as follows: Touring car, reduced by $80 to $795; roadster, by $60 to $795; type B sedan, by $150 to $895; type A sedan, by $180 to $1075; coupe, by $115 to $845; panel commercial car, by $75 to $885; screen commercial car, by $75 to $810; chassis, by $75 to $655.

Graham Brothers' truck prices were reduced as follows: One-ton chassis, to $975; 1½-ton chassis, $1245; M. B. M. low chassis, $1295.

Graham Brothers' bus prices are reduced proportionately.

In the Dec. 15 announcement, it was stated that the price cut would apply to all cars purchased after that date. So the Tate Motor Co., Inc., local Dodge distributer, and Dodge dealers all over the country have written many checks refunding to buyers since Dec. 15 the amounts of the price cuts.

Explaining the reductions in the face of mounting tire costs which have blocked price cuts planned by some other factories, Robert C. Graham, general sales manager of Dodge Brothers, said:

"The reduction is made possible by a $10,000,000 investment in new buildings and equipment which will greatly increase capacity for 1926. This expansion program has greatly improved our already highly developed and economical system of progressive assembly and reduced production costs. We believe in giving the owners of Dodge Brothers cars the benefit of this reduction. These new prices apply to a product that is far and away the finest Dodge Brothers have ever produced. There is no change in the policy upon which Dodge Brothers established their leadership—that of constant improvement without yearly models."

FORD SHOW WEEK OPENS IN ST. LOUIS

Ford national show week in all Ford dealers' showrooms, which opened yesterday and will continue through next Saturday evening, has brought out the greatest exhibit in the history of the Ford Motor Co. Not only is a full line of improved Ford cars being shown, but the lines of the various types are enhanced by such new apopintments as top boots and gypsy curtains, windshield wings and automatic windshield wipers, all supplied by the Ford company. This special equipment is being exhibited for the first time.

Types of Ford ton trucks and Fordson tractors, with industrial and agricultural equipment are displayed by some dealers.

Arrangement for the week were made by the St. Louis branch of the Ford company to coincide with exhibits by dealers all over the United States.

The purpose of the display is to give the people of St. Louis an opportunity to become better acquainted with the improved Ford cars. Ford service so thoroughly covers the city that there is a showroom convenient to practically every home, and the displays will remain open in the evening.

The first impression of the Ford cars for 1926 is one of increased beauty and smartness. Bodies are longer and lower, fenders hang low over the wheels and closed cars are finished in harmonious color schemes. Riding comfort has been increased by wider, lower seats and more legroom. The gasoline tank is now filled from outside the car, and, in the open types, a door at the driver's left permits entry or exit without disturbing the front-seat pasenger. Both transmission and rear-wheel brakes have been enlarged.

SEES CLOSED CAR TREND GROWING

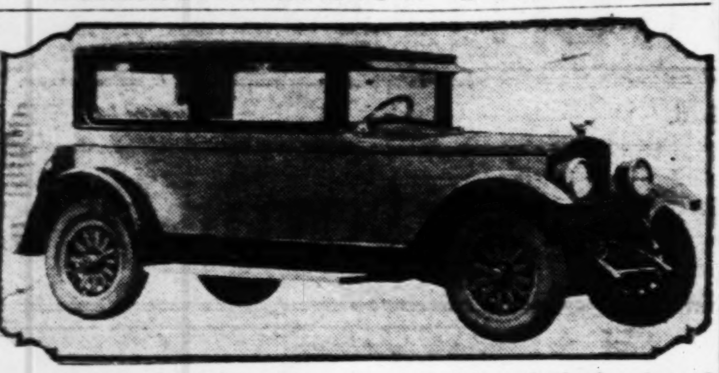
It is pretty generally agreed that 1926 should prove the most prosperous year in American business history. Certainly every well-informed executive in the automotive industry expects to see a new high mark set in production and sale of automobiles. In fact, many car builders have begun a program of expansion in manufacturing facilities to proceed with production at a greatly accelerated pace," says Russell E. Gardner Jr., president of the Gardner Motor Co.

"Plans for capacity operation throughout the winter months have already been announced by at least 10 leading manufacturers.

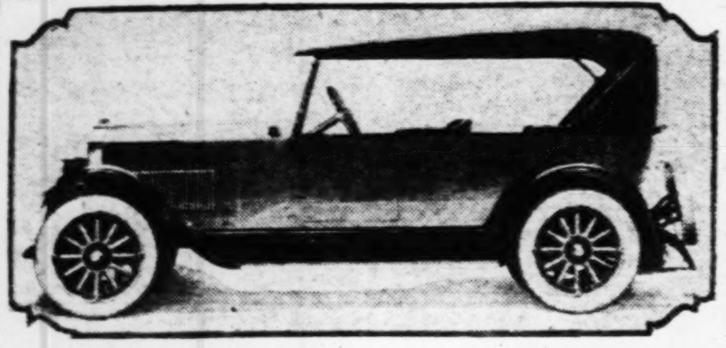
"A feature is the proportion of open and closed cars on production schedules. The growing popularity of the closed car is expected to continue until closed models constitute from 75 per cent to 80 per cent of all passenger cars produced.

"Gardner's experience indicates the strides made by the closed car. Not long since our total closed car production did not exceed 25 per cent of our output. In 1925, 85 per cent of Gardner production was of closed models, and we expect this ratio to be maintained this year."

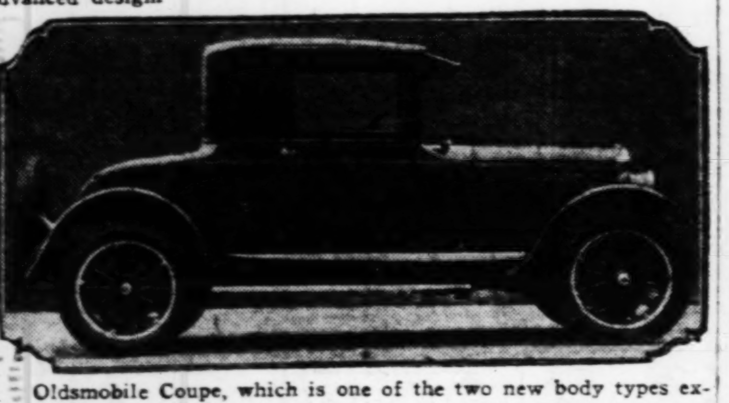
Some of the New Models Exhibited at New York Show



Rickenbacker Coupe Sedan, a new model on both the six and vertical eight chassis and the lowest priced car in the Rickenbacker lines.



Touring model of the newly announced Star Six line, which is to be a companion to the Star Four. It has a 40-h. p. engine and advanced design.



Oldsmobile Coupe, which is one of the two new body types exhibited on the Oldsmobile Six chassis at the New York show and also shown in St. Louis.

PRICES LOWERED ON CHEVROLETS

In the face of a 40 per cent increase in tire prices effective Jan. 1 and rising prices of material generally, the Chevrolet Motor Co. was able to announce its reduction in the prices of all Chevrolet passenger cars and the commercial chassis.

The decrease comes at a time when several other manufacturers have increased prices.

"The reduction in Chevrolet prices was made possible by the tremendous productions established in 1925, when the company set a new mark by building more than a half million units," said W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the company. "No other manufacturer of three-speed gear-shift cars has approached either that total or the aggregate production of 2,000,000 cars and trucks which Chevrolet passed last autumn."

The revised price list is: Coupe, reduced to a new price of $645; sedan, $735; coach, $645; touring car and roadster, $510; commercial chassis, $395. The utility express truck chassis remains at $550. The new prices are effective as of Jan. 1. This is the second Chevrolet price reduction in six months. Aug. 1 coach and coupe prices were reduced $40 each and the sedan price was reduced $50.

Vanity Mirror Lights Up.

An illuminated vanity mirror for automobiles has been patented. It is installed on the instrument board and the mirror and an electric lamp at the top of it are all in one piece, provided with a handle at the side by which it may be slid out of holder.

PAIGE-JEWETT AT CAPACITY

The Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. is running on full production schedule, following the recent introduction of the "New Day" Jewett six. For the first time, the factory has placed in operation new buildings and machinery made necessary by the new car, according to word sent to the Wilson Motor Car Co., Jewett and Paige distributors.

The Paige-Detroit factory, although recognized as one of the newest and most efficient since its completion on its new site, had to be considerably enlarged, remodeled, and equipped with new machinery to handle the "New-Day" Jewett.

In the main assembly buildings, an additional motor conveyor for the new engines, with a capacity of 300 every eight hours, was installed. The motor-paint oven was enlarged 50 per cent, while the chassis assembly conveyor, a fifth of a mile long, was increased in capacity.

The two parallel final assembly conveyors, each 864 feet long, the longest in the world, were remodeled.

The largest of the new buildings is for material storage. It is 530x70 feet, two stories of steel and concrete.

Another new building, 260x60 feet, is to be devoted to nickel plating, the parts to be handled by automatic machinery on a new progressive system.

Frames of the New-Day Jewett are riveted in a third new building, 140x60 feet, equipped with a battery of heavy punch presses, riveters and gas rivet heaters.

AUTO PRODUCTION TOTAL 4,325,000 IN U. S. IN 1925

Best Previous Car and Truck Record Is Beaten by Nearly 300,000 Motor Vehicles.

Production of motor vehicles in 1925 reached a new high record of 3,883,000 cars and 492,000 trucks or a total of 4,325,000, according to a statement issued this week by Charles Clifton, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The highest previous year's production was in 1923 when 4,086,000 cars and trucks were produced.

The wholesale value of cars and trucks manufactured this year approximates $3,000,000,000.

The year was particularly favorable for the motor truck industry, which turned out nearly 500,000 vehicles. This is nearly 12 per cent of the total output of the industry.

Figures, as in the case of monthly statements, include the production of Canadian plants making cars of U. S. design.

This year the export figures passed 550,000, as compared with 386,000 last year. Accordingly, it is clear that a large part of the credit for new record should go to sales in the foreign market.

Motor vehicles registered in the United States total 20,229,025 of which motor cars number 17,500,000 and trucks, 2,500,000. The increase in registrations was 2,629,000.

Special Federal excise taxes paid by the automobile industry in 1925 were $126,552,000.

Persons employed in motor vehicle and allied lines number 3,200,000.

Miles of highways in this country total 3,002,916.

Carloads of automotive freight shipped over the railroads in 1925 numbered 3,040,000.

Motor buses in use number 70,000, and 15,000 were produced in the year.

Motor vehicles exported numbered 550,000, and value of motor vehicles and parts exported were $292,600,000.

Car and truck dealers number 47,014, and public garages, 55,000.

Two New Olds Models Shown

TWO new Oldsmobile models—a de luxe four-passenger roadster and a multi-purpose coupe—were displayed by Olds Motor Works at the automobile show in New York Saturday, according to announcement by the local distributors, the De Luxe Auto Co. Both are of the latest design, are finished in two-color Duco and mounted on the proven Oldsmobile chassis with 40-horsepower 6-cylinder engine.

The new body types are designed to appeal to a wide range of buyers, the professional and business man, the commercial traveler, the "younger" set and those who like the personal car with its exclusiveness.

The de luxe roadster is finished in sea fog gray and ocean blue duco. The gray is used on the lower part of the body. A black molding and ivory striping run from the radiator shell to the back of the body. Above this, the ocean blue saddles the upper portion forming a strip at the side and saddles over the hood and rear deck.

The coupe is of standard Fisher construction, metal sheathed on a rigid, hardwood frame. The rear deck is symmetrical, adding to the size of the baggage compartment and also giving a low, graceful appearance to the car. The lower portion of the body is finished in Dagtan blue Duco with black upper body. A beading extends from radiator shell to the rear. An ivory stripe accentuates this panel effect. The upper portion is covered with black, durable fabricoid and has a landau bar at each side.

A de luxe model is also shown. This is fitted at the factory with steel disc or natural wood wheels, nickeled-steel bumpers front and rear, snubbers all around, rear vision mirror, spotlight, lock motometer and bar cap and kick plates, in addition to an automatic windshield wiper and other equipment which is standard on all closed models. The factory list price of the coupe is $925; the de luxe coupe, $990; the de luxe roadster, $975.

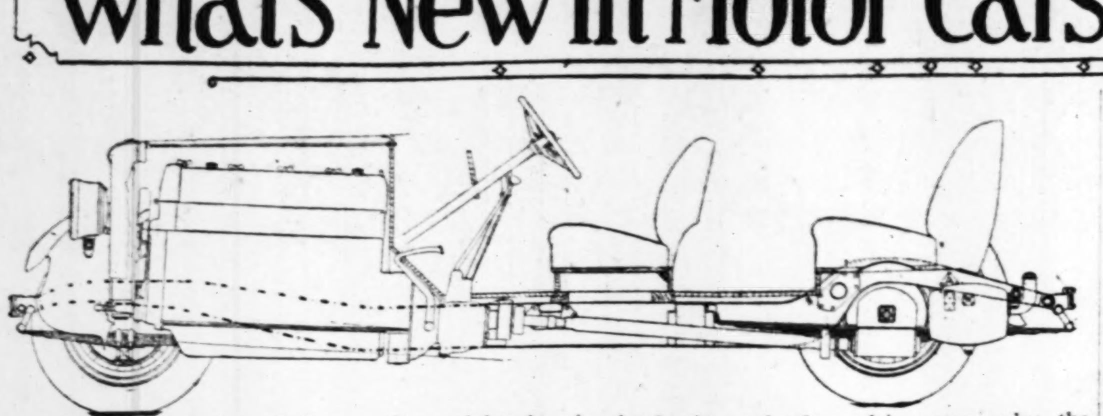
COMPANY BUILDING MARMON CAR IS 75 YEARS OLD

A. E. More and John T. Salisbury, of the More Automobile Co., have returned from Indianapolis, where they attended the annual convention of Marmon dealers and the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Nordyke & Marmon Co. Salisbury was chairman of the Committee of Arrangements and of a Marmon dealers' committee.

The Marmon company revealed at the convention new plans and additions to plans recently announced that will greatly aid dealers in their used car and merchandising problems.

The Nordyke & Marmon Co. first made an automobile in 1902. The Marmon "Wasp" won the first 500-mile race in this country. The Marmon 34 line was introduced in 1915, and the Marmon 74, with dual ignition and advanced engineering and body design, last fall.

What's New in Motor Cars and Equipment



This sectional view of the new Stutz eight chassis shows the underslung drive rear axle; the straight line drive to the worm from the engine, which is set at an angle; the drop in the middle of the frame, and the general long hung effect which brings the floor of the car 5 inches nearer the road than in other automobiles.

New Chrysler 92 H. P. Six Seen in St. Louis

LOW hung, with wholly new body lines emphasizing a fluted effect, with a 92-horsepower engine and road speed of 80 miles an hour and with rubber mountings for springs and motor, the new Chrysler "Imperial" six was shown simultaneously yesterday at the New York automobile show and in the showrooms of G. M. Berry, Inc., in St. Louis. It also will be on exhibition there today. The new Chrysler is a big companion to the present Chrysler and the Chrysler four.

Chassis design of the "Imperial Chrysler" is similar to that of the present six, which was introduced just two years ago. But unusual engine design has given a motor with seven-bearing crankshaft, bore of 3½ inches and stroke of 5 inches, that operates powerfully at low speeds, yet gives exceptional hill climbing ability, as well as high road speed. Experts who have ridden in the new car tell of road and traffic performance most enthusiastically.

Here is a newspaper man's summing up of a ride in this new Imperial Chrysler: "The howling, chattering, groaning sounds, the galloping motion, the sideway and the 'kick' that are associated in the average mind with high automobile speeds are entirely absent. The engine seems not to labor at all, even in the ordinarily inaccessible range around 75 miles an hour, which is presently touched. An exploring finger tip fails to find, along the lower edge of the cowl, at the side of the body, or even the door jamb, any point of excessive vibration.

"This isn't an automobile. It's a projectile....tremendous source of energy that power plant, but perfectly controlled. You are fleeting through space, but somehow geared to the road."

Distinctive Body Lines.

The "Imperial" comes in six body types—roadster, phaeton and sedan on a 120-inch wheelbase, and four-passenger coupe, seven-passenger sedan and a berline on a 127-inch wheelbase. Body finish is pyroxylin base and in two tones. All closed bodies are by Fisher.

The radiator carries the typical Chrysler wings, but is deeply fluted, the two flutes—one on either side—continuing back along hood and cowl to points just below the windshield. A deep belt effect and low roof lines combine with the fluted radiator and hood to make a most distinctive looking car.

There are no spring shackles, the spring ends being carried in shock insulated rubber blocks. At its rear the engine is mounted on rubber blocks on a cross member, insulating the frame from engine noises.

The hydraulic four-wheel brakes are of the same type as those on the present Chrysler six.

Description of Engine.

The seven-bearing crankshaft, weighing 108 pounds and 2⅝ inches in diameter, has a series of 12 counter weights, two opposite each throw. A Lanchester vibration damper is mounted at the front end of the crankshaft and a 50-pound balanced flywheel at the rear end.

Cylinder block and crankcase are cast integral, with detachable cylinder head of the high turbulence type. Cylinders are reamed and honed twice, while the interior of the casting is treated with an impervious oil paint to seal all metal pores.

A new type aluminum piston, with Invar steel alloy struts joining it to the piston pin boss, is used. The Invar strut obviates ordinary aluminum piston disadvantages, and permits fitting pistons to limits as close as .003 inch without danger of seizing or scoring.

The full force lubrication system has an oil filter. Air cleaner and gasoline filter also are standard. The carburetor has a screw enabling eight settings to adjust it to suit driving conditions, as well as a needle valve device to increase fuel supply when choke is raised, and a fumer, or electrical heating device to facilitate starting in cold weather.

Clutch is single dry plate type. Gear ratios are 4.27 to 1 and 4.63 to 1 for domestic use, and 4.09 to 1 for export. Front springs are 41 inches and rear springs 58 inches long. The frame is 7 inches deep. Tires are balloons.

To minimize battery neglect, a small Chrysler emblem on the instrument board flashes when the battery needs water.

Equipment is very complete, and

GENERAL MOTORS SALES IN U. S. AND OVERSEAS TOTAL 833,000 AUTOS

RETAIL sales of 833,000 cars by General Motors during 1925 are reported by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of the corporation. The total includes sales of Chevrolets, Oldsmobiles, Oaklands, Buicks and Cadillacs in this country and overseas assembly operations. Sloan reiterated that it was, and would be, General Motors' policy to regulate production to retail sales.

New Pontiac Six, Made by G. M. C., Fully Described

PRICED enough under $900 to be the lowest priced closed six-cylinder job, and powered with a six-cylinder L-head engine with 3¼-inch bore and 3¾-inch stroke, the new General Motors car is exhibited at the New York Automobile Show as the Pontiac. It will be handled, as has been told, by Oakland distributers and dealers as a companion to the Oakland six, the St. Louis distributer being the Mississippi Valley Motor Co.

The Pontiac is to be made in two models—coach and coupe, both with Fisher bodies. It is likely to be seen in St. Louis for the first time in the week of Jan. 17.

The new car's wheelbase is 110 inches, and its turning radius is 19 feet, which means easy handling in traffic and parking. Ready for the road, the coach weighs 2400 pounds and the coupe, 2320 pounds.

Interiors of coach and coupe are in art weave upholstering cloth to match the cushions, which are of long wearing gray corduroy. Equipment on the coach includes sun visor, plate glass windows with high-speed regulators, VV one-piece windshield, automatic windshield cleaner, rear vision mirror, foot rest, floor carpets, dome light, roller shade for rear window. The coupe is similarly equipped and has landau bows on the rear quarters. Balloon cords 29 by 4.75 inches are standard on both models. Service and parking brakes on the rear wheels.

Engine Described.

Mechanically, the Pontiac embodies tested construction practice, the outstanding feature being the fact that with a relatively large bore—3¼ inches—its 3¾-inch stroke shorter than that of any other automobile made in this country. Other cars in the so-called $1000 class have cylinder bores of 2 11-16 by 4¼, 2¾ by 4¾ or 3 by 4 inches.

The Pontiac's engine is cast en bloc, its cylinders are honed, and it has pump water cooling, cylinders and valves being entirely surrounded by water. Crankshaft and camshaft have three bearings each.

Oil Filter, a Feature.

Engine lubrication is by pressure, and an oil filter is installed. A vacuum gasoline system connects with a 12-gallon tank at the rear end. A specially designed intake manifold uses heat from five of the six cylinders to assist in vaporizing the gasoline. The electrical system is Remy.

The clutch is the single dry disc type. The frame, 4½ inches deep, has four cross members. Steering gear and axles are of conventional types. Springs are semi-eliptic front and rear, the front one measuring 36 and the rear 54 inches long.

The Pontiac will be manufactured at the Oakland Six factory.

New Packard Open Model

CHIEF change made by the Packard factory for the automobile show is a new phaeton model on both the single six and the eight chassis. This car is a combination of the 4-passenger sport and the 5-passenger touring cars. It has khaki top, disc wheels and full equipment. It is a sweet-looking job, one of the lithest, handsomest cars of the kind ever built in this country.

This new phaeton is on a 126-inch wheelbase. It is painted in a two-tone combination of Ditzler's Plymouth gray and Pilgrim gray with moulding in ivory black and striping in flamingo carmine. A feature is three compartments of cabinet work in rear of the front seat.

Worm Drive Straight Eight Car Is Stutz

THE new advanced type car, with underslung worm drive to the rear axle, straight eight engine developing 92 horse-power, and floor level 5 inches lower than that of other automobiles, which was described and pictured two weeks ago in this automobile section, is the Stutz. Other features of the new Stutz are: Nine-bearing crankshaft; overhead camshaft driven by silent chain; dual ignition; 131-inch wheelbase, but 24-foot turning radius; novel pressure feed engine lubrication; chassis lubrication from the engine; 4-wheel brakes of a new hydrostatic design; height from road to top of roof only 70 inches, but ample head room; two exhaust manifolds; Swan dual intake manifold with Zenith duplex carburetor; oil rectifier; stainless steel water pump; frame, 7¾ inches deep, with seven cross members and springs of novel suspension, the rear one being 62 inches long.

Six New Stutz Models.

Models of the new Stutz exhibited at the New York show include: Two-passenger speedster with rumble seat; four-passenger speedster; five-passenger sedan; five-pasenger brougham; four-passenger Victoria coupe, and two-passenger coupe. Bodies are by Brewster. Wire wheels are optional at extra cost. Windshields are of the one-piece type and swing forward for additional ventilation. A price just under $3000 at factory has been set on all models. As soon as the new Stutz models are available for exhibition outside the national shows, they will be shown in St. Louis by the Benjamin Motor Car Co.

Swift Acceleration.

In a test on the Indianapolis speedway, one of the new Stutz eights accelerated from five to 25 miles an hour in 6½ seconds. It jumped from 10 to 25 m. p. h. in 5.2 seconds; from five to 40 m. p. h. in 12.25 seconds; from 25 to 60 in 15.4 seconds. It slid along at 75 miles an hour so quietly and steadily that the experienced magazine man who made the tests expressed astonishment that a car could run so smoothly at such speed. He stated that the acceleration speeds cited above were the average of four tests in each case.

J. Jerome Benjamin, head of the Benjamin Motor Car Co., said that if ever a car "ran like a dream," it was this new Stutz.

The new Stutz has a floor height from the road of 20 inches. The radically lowered center of gravity, which is immediately apparent on first glance, is accounted for in part by the worm final drive.

The vertical eight motor has a 3 3-16-inch bore and 4½-inch stroke; compression ratio of 4.8 to 1, and output of 92 horsepower at 3200 r. p. m. The valves are overhead type.

Novel Chassis Lubrication.

Chassis lubrication is from the engine. All working parts of the chassis are lubricated by a new magazine oiling system which is nonclogging, self-cleaning and positive.

The Delco dual ignition operates two spark plugs in each cylinder from opposite points. The lights are twin-beam reflector headlights, with steering column control and combination park, stop and backing light.

All bodies are fitted with windshield cleaners, electric cigar lighters, instrument boards, auxiliary trouble lamp, double bar nickel bumpers on the front and bumperettes on the rear. Visors are integral with tops. The artillery type wheels are finished in natural wood while all body finishes are in three-tone lacquers, with a double belt to accentuate the low floor lines.

The crankcase pan is of cast aluminum, five inches deep, with 14 cooling fins cast on the lower side.

A flanged shaft drives a six-bladed 16½-inch fan through a friction clutch.

Two exhaust manifolds are used, one for the front four and the other for the rear four cylinders. A rectifier is used to distill impurities from the crankcase lubricant. This device draws the oil from the low-pressure line at the rear end of the camshaft and pours the reclaimed lubricant back into the crankcase. Steam and vapor are sent into the intake manifold and dirt of all kinds is separated from the hot oil by a fine screen.

Worm Rear Drive.

The form of worm drive embedded in the rear axle of this new Stutz is interesting. The worm gear is of special bronze, while the

The picture shows how the end of the spring is locked in the rubber beyond possibility of working loose. Below: The way in which the rubber spring hanging works when the spring is bent. In addition to the Chrysler "Imperial," the new Flint Junior Six and the Locomobile Junior Eight use this type of spring hanging, which has been tested for many thousands of miles by taxicab companies.

New Reos Change To Standard Gear Shift and Brakes

CHANGE to the standard gear shift, choice of the standard brake and clutch pedals system or of the combination braking system that for years has been peculiar to Reo cars, and a newly designed camshaft that makes engine operation quieter, are features of the new line of Reo automobiles as disclosed at the New York show. The new Reos will be displayed in St. Louis today by the Kardell Motor Car Co., Reo distributer, and the Steiner-Fahrenkrog Co., whose showrooms will be open all day.

Hitherto, in Reo cars, clutch and service brake were connected so that pressure on the left foot pedal threw out the clutch and also applied the service brakes, while the emergency brakes were worked by the right foot pedal.

In the new Reos, a handbrake will be standard for the convenience of those partial to hand emergency brake. The lever operating the emergency brakes has a ratchet so the brakes may be left firmly "set." This lever is within and to the front of the left side front entrance door, close to the cowl quarter.

Dual foot control wil be available for drivers who are accustomed to and prefer this system.

For drivers who are familiar with or do not prefer the clutch pedal braking control, the connecting pull rod may be disengaged so that this pedal serves only the clutch release, leaving the brake mechanism controlled in exactly the same way as in other cars.

The fan has been moved forward 2½ inches and lowered so as to cover the core of the radiator. The fan is now driven direct from a newly designated camshaft, which makes for quieter operation of the engine. Adjustment of tappets has been facilitated.

New headlights have an improved dimming system.

Fenders and running-board skirts are of new design and have been changed so that the front spring and the gas tank in rear are covered. The gas tank is now filled at the right side instead of in the center.

There is also a new type of spare tire carrier in rear, and new hood fasteners.

The most important change in body design is lengthening of the hood 2½ inches and slight lowering of the body. This gives a more pleasing and graceful body contour.

A permanent visor is formed by continuation of the top. A newly designed ventilator lies flush with the cowl of the car and is operated by a new control.

The featured Reo model at the show is the sedan, a handsome model with new lines and attractive color scheme.

Chandler Cars Have "One Shot"

ONE-SHOT lubrication of the entire chassis by pressure on a foot plunger is announced as a feature of the 1926 Chandler models. With this system the labor of oiling and greasing numerous places on the chassis is done away with. From a central reservoir, operated by the plunger, oil is sent under pressure to all the points that usually are most neglected by owners or that cause much inconvenience and waste of time.

New Rickenbacker Models All of De Luxe Type

CUSTOM-BUILT finish for all body types, and a new model—the coupe sedan—are features of the 1926 Rickenbacker sixes and eights exhibited at the New York show. The new cars will be displayed here by the Rickenbacker St. Louis Co. within the coming week. The Rickenbacker company say it has found that buyers in its price class regard price as secondary and quality all-important, and that it will specialize on de luxe types.

Rickenbacker bodies are now made in Rickenbacker shops, and the company states that bodies are now being made to as close limits as engines, even to a thousandth of an inch, thus eliminating many causes of rattle and other body troubles. All lights and hardware in closed cars are silver finish. Among refinements in Rickenbackers are: A new aero type instrument board, custom-built fronts for closed models, paneled interiors, silk hand pulls, braided silk robe rails, silk curtains with tassel pulls, rich monotone interior color schemes, liberal sized arm rests and foot rests, walnut moulding for front seats.

Rickenbacker door locks are novel. The same handle serves as a door pull, to unlatch the door, and to lock the two rear and left front doors. A turn up or down does the trick. When one wishes to be safe from intrusion he turns the three handles down. When leaving the car he can lock the right front door, and robes, wraps or other articles left in the car will be safe.

Additional equipment for 1926 includes gasoline filter, motor heat indicator and gasoline gauge on dash and cowl curb lamps. Hartford shock absorbers are fitted front and rear on the Rickenbacker eights and front on all sixes.

Body finish color schemes are two tone.

The new coupe sedan is the lowest priced Rickenbacker model, list price on the six chassis being $1695 and on the eight chassis, $2095. New Rickenbacker prices on a de luxe basis range from $1695 to $2195 for sixes and $2095 to $2595 for eights. A seven-passenger sedan is now available on each chassis.

Star Six Touring Model Is Added

DURANT MOTORS, INC., announces that a touring car has been added to its newly announced six-cylinder line as the lowest priced six-cylinder model in the world, $695, at the factory. The Star six touring is on the same chassis and embodies the same features as other types in the Star six line. It is a standard open type, with collapsible top, seating five passengers. The color is French gray, with black fenders and splash boards and natural wood wheels. Continental L-head motor of 40 horsepower, balloon tires, long-spring base, and rigid frame are features of the new Star six which make it a powerful, easy riding and long-lived car. The Star six line now includes four body types: coach, $880; coupe, $820; coupster, $745; touring, $695.

Large Texas Gas Tax Receipts.

In 1925, the gasoline tax of 1 cent a gallon brought to the State of Texas $4,580,056. Of this $3,435,042.81 was allotted to the Highway Department.

Brand New Willys-Knight 6 Line Added

AMONG the wholly new cars seen at the New York Show is the "70" Willys-Knight Six, with sleeve valve engine of 2 15-16-inch bore and 4⅜-inch stroke, which is to be a companion of the big Willys-Knight Six.

Unusual performance is claimed for this car, which probably will be exhibited in St. Louis by Jan. 15. It should be borne in mind that great proportionate power can be got out of a sleeve valve engine, because inlet and exhaust ports are not subject to certain limitations of size and lift that apply to engines using some other types of valves. So this new engine develops 53-horsepower with a bore of less than three inches.

A seven-bearing crankshaft, removable cast aluminum cylinder head and pistons of die-cast aluminum are other features.

Lubrication is force feed to all heavy duty bearings, and spray to sleeve valves and pistons. The water-cooling system, with pump, is thermostatically controlled. Clutch is of single plate dry disc type. Transmission and axles are elaborately fitted with ball and roller bearings, there being eight Timken bearings in the front wheels and steering pivots. The steering gear, incidentally, is of a new design, easy on the driver but notable for safety features. Four-wheel brakes and six-ply balloon cord tires are standard. Springs are semielliptic, the rear being 52½ inches long, and Gabriel snubbers are fitted. The frame has six cross members.

Equipment includes double filament bulbs, providing ample light for driver, yet eliminating glare; head lights and dimmers controlled from steering wheel; combination stop light and tail lamp mounted on license plate bracket; automatic windshield wiper; rear view mirror; magnetic speedometer, pressure oil gauge and gasoline gauge on instrument board, vanity case, ash tray and heaters on closed cars.

High compression, without motor pinging, an unusually large power development in relation to piston displacement, and the highest torque ever attained in a motor of equivalent size, are features of this new motor's performance.

The small disadvantages of the usual high compression motor, usually felt in the tendency of the motor to "ping" when running under heavy load, have been so overcome in this power plant that the engineers seriously considered elimination of the spark control lever as unnecessary in operation of the car.

Another achievement in control of this new car is the elimination of tendency for the front wheel to shimmy at high speeds. This shimmy tendency has been noticeable in many cars equipped with balloon tires.

In tests made with the Willys-Knight "70," the car has been driven at better than 60 miles an hour, the driver keeping his hands off the steering wheel. There was no indication of shimmying and there was no road thrust through the steering post.

This new Willys-Knight is built for domestic consumption in a five-passenger sedan model only.

A limited number of touring cars will be available out of the production for European countries, where this type of body is still in general use.

A one-piece windshield, large windows and narrow body posts are features.

New Auburn Four To Be Seen This Week in St. Louis

THE first of the new cars — a sedan—has shipped from the factory Auburn, Ind., and should St. Louis tomorrow, probably time to be shown before at the Mound City Automobile Joseph A. Walsh of the City Co. and other dealers drive Auburn fours here probablethat the cars may be erally on view by Wednesday Thursday.

This new Auburn four is ity car, instead of being compete in the low-priced The sedan model lists at factory; the coupe at touring car and roadster at Body styles and dimensions same as on the six and eight-der chassis. Wheelbase is 120 inches, which means easy ing qualities. The four is companion to the Auburn straight eight.

The frame of the four is deep, with seven cross Springs are semielliptic, made many thin leaves to make sions easy. Four-wheel brakes standard, as are balloon tires

The most emphasized feature the Auburn four is the five-bearing Lycoming motor 3¾-inch bore and 5-inch insuring powerful and vibration performance. The carburetor Zenith. Lubrication is pressure

DEVICE TO PREVENT

A distributership of the glare" deflector for headlights been taken by John "Jack" kov, who has quarters at 3904 dell boulevard. The device of a single plane double wing a central barrel to fit over headlight bulb and a narrow flector band with vacuum hold it in place. A blue bulb forms the front of the barrel is said to give brilliant road mination without glare.

REPORTS GOOD GOING ON ROAD TO MEMPHIS

Auto Club Touring Bureau Director Scouts Missouri-Arkansas Route.

Generally good road conditions on the route through Missouri and Arkansas from St. Louis to Memphis are reported by George Drummond, head of the touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri, who has just returned from a trip to the Tennessee city. That the going was good is indicated by the fact that Drummond left St. Louis at 4:30 a. m. and was at the Tennessee end of the Memphis bridge, 422 miles distant, at 3 p. m. the same day.

Drummond followed State Highway No. 9 from St. Louis via Festus, Flat River, Fredericktown and Cape Girardeau to Sikeston, where he turned west on No. 16 to Dexter, then south on No. 25 to a point two miles beyond Abyrd. There he followed the direction indicated by a large sign and after nine miles was in Leachville, Ark. Then he went east on Route B-20 to Blytheville, then south on A-8 to Turrell, then on A-7 to Memphis.

He found the route all-weather. But the stretch from the end of the concrete, beyond Jackson, to the "Cape," has been graded, so the old gravel road is covered to a depth of three or four inches with dirt. Naturally, this is slippery when wet, but a car does not bog down in it. There also is some mean going in Jackson because of street work. South of Dexter there is about seven miles of rough gravel through Malden, and north and south of Turrell, Ark., there is rough tar-bound gravel that has many holes.

One should drive cautiously over the bridges between the Missouri-Arkansas line and Blytheville. Some of the bridges are narrow and set at dangerous angles to the highway. Others have no guard rails, which evidently have been knocked off by automobiles. Most of these bridges, Drummond reported, are dangerous at night.

Dangerous, too, after rain is the two-mile viaduct which is the Tennessee approach to the Memphis bridge. This viaduct is floored with boards, is narrow, and in places is high above the ground.

Drummond reported also that the route in Missouri is perfectly marked, but is not at all well signed in Arkansas.

The only detours he found in Missouri were one of about a mile at Pevely and one of the same length at Flat River.

NEW CHRYSLER SIX WITH 92-H. P. MOTOR SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS

includes Stabilators front and rear and twin rear-view mirrors.

The springs are covered with tailored "boots," which contain lubrication for thousands of miles, and also protect the springs from water and mud and obviate continual oiling and greasing.

The intention of the Chrysler organization in producing this new car is explained in the following statement:

"It is designed to go farther along every direction than the costliest cars of America and Europe. It is intended to assume the leadership in the fine car field. The bodies, built to Chrysler design, are naturally of the most complete and luxuriously appointed type, with special fitments and equipment in most cases made especially to order for the Imperial '80.'

"But it is not alone in the matter of body appointments that the new Chrysler line is hailed as taking its place at the forefront of the world's finest cars. With the idea of building into it true luxury from every point of view, the chassis has been designed so as to provide power, speed, comfort, convenience, quiet and performance to an altogether unusual degree."

WORM DRIVE CAR, WITH STRAIGHT EIGHT ENGINE, IS THE STUTZ

worm is of alloy steel, hardened, ground and polished. The worm drive is fully reversible, with varying reductions for cars of different weight and speed demands. The worm gear is riveted between the two halves of a pressed steel carrier, inclosing a four-pinion bevel differential gear unit.

Five tubular and two channel cross members insure rigidity of the frame.

The front spring horns are joined by a 1½-inch tubular member and the rear horns are joined by 1¾-inch tubes. The rear springs are undermounted on the axle, inside the frame side members. At the rear ends of the rear springs are placed shackles at an angle of about 45 degrees, with lubricant reservoirs cast in the spring horns. The rear springs are 62 inches long by 2¼ inches wide, of chrome vanadium steel. The leaves vary from 10 to 14.

Front springs are shackled at the front and pivoted at the rear to obviate spring interference with the steering. The front springs are of chrome vanadium, 38 inches in length and 2¼ inches in width. The number of leaves varies from 10 to 13 according to the type of body mounted.

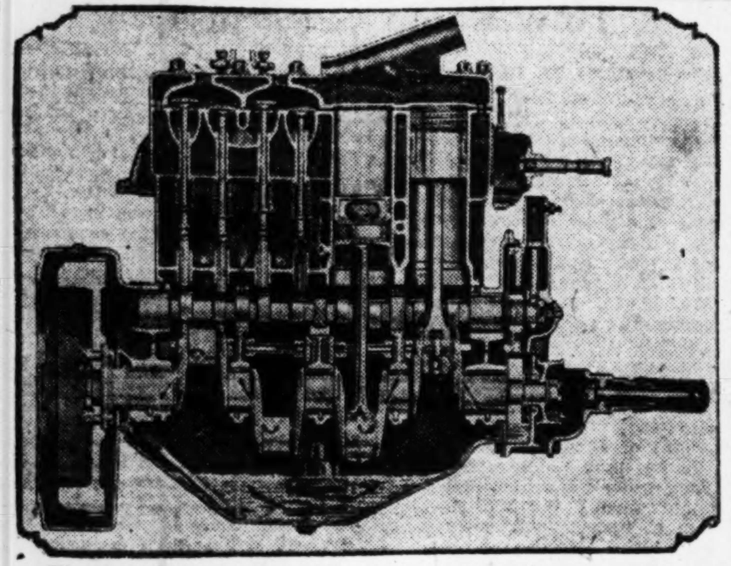
The Lewis Automobile Co., Chandler distributor, reports record business in November and December. J. D. Perry Lewis, head of the firm, said yesterday that in December he quadrupled his sales in the same month in 1924.

New Auburn Four's Engine Has Full Five-Bearing Crankshaft



The ideal of strength, solidity and smooth performance built into the new Auburn 4-cylinder car is illustrated by the full five-bearing crankshaft in its Lycoming engine. These bearings are unusually wide, and the engine runs with smooth power that should insure traffic and hill climbing performance.

NEW STAR DEALERSHIP FOR LOCUST BOULEVARD NAMED

THE Brown-Hatler Motor Co., newly appointed Star four and Star six dealer for the central part of the city, has opened a showroom and service station at 2923 Locust boulevard. In addition to selling Star cars and servicing them, the firm will be master distributer of Durant parts. Members of the firm, which is a partnership, are S. W. Brown and Ben Hatler. Brown in 3 years built up a large automobile business in Cabool, Mo., and has had wide experience in the low priced car field. Hatler has been a well-known business man in South Central Missouri for years, at one time residing in West Plains.

URGES PUBLIC TO CEASE WASTING RUBBER IN TIRES

In an interview, Martin L. Pulcher, president of the Federal Motor Truck Co. of Detroit, says there is the greatest need for exercising care in the use of tires. "During the first quarter of the year our supply of rubber dwindled until now it is 10,000 tons short of what it should be," Pulcher said. "Ordinarily, America has 60,000 tons of rubber on hand. Now there is less than 20,000 tons in the country, and the reserve stock is exhausted.

"The tire shortage is a matter of great concern to tire manufacturers and steps are being taken to correct the situation. However, there are many ways in which the public itself can co-operate. Brakes should be applied easily instead of jamming them on. In parking, one should be careful not to get too close to the curb, which oftentimes squeezes the sides of the tires.

"Broken glass should be avoided, and in driving over a bumpy, rough road one should do so carefully. Burning up the streets with speed causes unnecessary wear and tear on tires that weakens them."

CORDUROY TIRE PLANT, TO EXPAND PRODUCTION

Word has been received by Howard Skinker of the Corduroy Tire Stores, 3870 Washington boulevard, that after the first of the year the Corduroy Tire Co. factory at Grand Rapids, Mich., will start production in its new additoin which now is nearing completion. With this new unit the factory has maintained its record of expanding on a large scale every year since it was organized, four and one-half years ago.

With the new plant in operation, the Corduroy Tire Co. will be in a position to double its output of tires and tubes in 1926. It is said it will be necessary for the plant to operate on the 24-hour-a-day basis, as it has for the last two years.

The Corduroy Tire Co. has a distinctive feature in sidewall protection for tires and inside protection for tubes.

BRITTON AND MORSE ATTEND A. A. A. MEETING IN NEW YORK

What's New in Cars

Flint Junior Shown; Other Flints Improved

A BRAND-NEW Flint Junior six, made only in a coach model, and complete changes in the two standard Flint lines were first seen yesterday at the New York Show. The Spalding Motor Co. is showing the new car. The Flint junior is powered with a Continental six-cylinder engine, with 2¾ inch bore and 4¾ inch stroke, developing 40-horsepower and unusual torque. There are four main bearings on the crankshaft and camshaft, the latter being driven by silent chain. Lubrication is full fore feed. The water jackets of the pump cooling system extend below the bottom of the piston stroke. The clutch is single dry disc type.

The steering gear is especially adapted for balloon tires. The frame, five inches deep, is heavily reinforced. Brakes apply on 12-inch drums.

A feature is the semielliptic springs set in rubber shock insulators, which do away with spring shackles and oiling, eliminate spring noise, and make the car easy riding. The wheel-base of the Flint Junior is 100 inches. The factory list price is $1085. A de luxe coach is $1195.

Description of Flint "60."

The next largest Flint line is the "60," which replaces the "40." The "60" has a Continental six engine with 3¼-inch bore and 4⅝-inch stroke, whereas the "50" engine had 3⅛-inch bore and 4¼-inch stroke. The "60" developes 56½ horsepower at 2600 r. p. m. The crank shaft has seven main bearings, while there are four bearings on the cam shaft. The "60" has the same type of water cooling as the Flint Junior. Oiling is force feed with oil filter. Clutch is single disc. The four-wheel brakes are hydraulic. The wheel base is 115 inches. Balloon tires are standard. This line probably will be shown here by Jan. 12. It includes touring car, sedan, brougham, roadster and coupe roadster. List prices range from $1285 to $1575.

The Flint "80" Line.

The Flint "80" line replaces the "55." It has a Continental six-cylinder engine with 3⅜-inch bore and 5-inch stroke, developing 65 horsepower. The crankshaft has seven bearings while there are four bearings on the camshaft. Oiling is force feed with oil filter. Clutch is of single dry disc type with extra large surface. The frame is heavy, with six cross members and a tubular sub frame that carries the engine. Hydraulic four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard.

The five-passenger models have 120-inch wheelbase, while that of the seven-passenger model is 130-inch. The "80" line includes touring car, coupe, five-passenger sedan, sport roadster, sport touring and seven-passenger sedan. Prices range from $1595 to $2335.

Marmon Adds Attractive Line of Special Models

A NEW line of Marmon cars, to be known as "specials" and designed to take a place midway in luxuriousness between the standard and the de luxe lines, are at the New York show and will be seen in St. Louis, according to A. E. More and John T. Salisbury, of the More Automobile Co., who have just returned from the Marmon factory. The Marmon specials will have the same chassis and bodies as the standard and de luxe models, but will have certain individual features and will be priced $100 higher than the standard models, whereas the de luxe models average $500 higher than the standards.

The Marmon 6-cylinder, 84 h. p. engine, with dual ignition, remains unchanged, as do the custom-built body lines. It is worth noting that this Marmon engine, which was introduced last fall, develops its 84 h. p. at only 2650 r. p. m.

Three new two-tone body color combinations—in maroon, Bar Harbor gray and Saratoga gray—are now available.

A new Marmon 4-passenger speedster, which Salisbury vows is the keenest looking speed job he ever saw, is scheduled for production about April 1.

DODGE BROTHERS TO HAVE TWO DEALERS AS DIRECTORS

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 9.—Two Dodge Brothers dealers will be added to the board of directors of that corporation, Clarence Dillon of Dillon, Read & Co., New York bankers, who control the majority stock, announced to the 3000 dealers in convention here.

The two dealers will be chosen so as to represent separate sections of the country. A plan will be worked out, Dillon said, by which they will serve on the board on alternate years.

CARS BOUGHT TO HUNT BOOTLEGGER

Special to the Post-Dispatch

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 9.—The bootleggers of Southern California will have to "leg it" rapidly if they want to get away from the Deputy Sheriffs of Los Angeles County. The Sheriff's office has a lot of brand-new, fast Hudson and Essex coaches which will be used specifically for chasing gentry dealing in un-Volstead liquors.

This was the announcement recently of County Mechanical Superintendent Davidson, under whose supervision Wallace Hodge, superintendent of Los Angeles County Garage, accepted delivery of a fleet of 27 Hudson and Essex coaches, purchased for the county by Jack Bean.

This fleet of cars sold to Los Angeles County cost $32,385.

GARDNER EIGHT IN RECORD CLIMB

With a stock Gardner eight-in-line touring car, Norman Etges recently made a speed record on the steep Camp Baldy road to Icehouse Canyon, in California, to clip more than a minute from the record set by Ralph Mulford more than a year ago. This performance won for Etges the Pomona Bulletin perpetual challenge trophy.

The beginning of the run was made from an elevation of 2250 feet above sea level, and from there the road winds its way to an elevation of 5280 feet at the finish, making a climb of 3030 feet in eight miles. The Gardner made the climb in 13 minutes, 31 5-10 seconds, an average speed of 35.5 miles per hour.

WILLYS-KNIGHT
GREAT SIX
The only engine that improves with use
Your own experience has proven that all poppet-valve motors wear out. Complicated and intricate valve mechanism ultimately yields to the incessant demands to which it is subjected. Carbon eventually gets in its destructive work on the finest of cylinders.
The experience of 275,000 Willys-Knight owners proves that service actually improves this sleeve-valve motor.
No valves to adjust—two silently-moving sleeves—and that is all—control the intake and exhaust operations. Carbon serves but to seal compression hence to build up its efficiency.
When the finest of poppet-valve engines are worn out, the everlasting engine of your Willys-Knight automobile is just coming into the full manhood of its power.

ENAMELED AERIAL WIRE

High-frequency current, tests show, travel only on the outside of conductors. On this basis it is reasonably argued that a stranded wire is superior to a solid, because the total effective surface area of a number of wires is larger than that of a single strand.

However, in the case of bare copper wire the rapid corrosion of the bare strand increases its resistance so rpaidly that the stranded type soon loses its advantage and gives results very much on a par with solid wire. Illustration shows this to fine advantage.

On the other hand, in the case of enameled wire the surface of each individual strand is thoroughly protected so that regardless of how long the aerial is up, the insulating qualities of the coating on each strang retains its insulating efficiency and as a result the effective surface area of the entire cable remains constant.

Henry Ford's Fiddlers To Play Through KSD

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A rare treat is in store for the radio audience of WEAF and the numerous stations which are frequently linked with the popular New York City broadcasting station. Next Tuesday evening, Jan. 12, from 10 to 11 o'clock a unique program of old-fashioned dance selections played by the famous Henry Ford Old-Fashioned Dance Orchestra, playing on the main floor of the Ford Exhibition at Broadway and Fifty-fourth street, New York City, will be broadcast. Fourteen broadcasting stations will be linked into the chain thus enabling the radio audience of a greater part of the United States to participate in the revival of the old time dances. Following is the list of stations broadcasting the hour's program: WEAF, New York; WEEI, Boston; WCAE, Pittsburg; WEAR, Cleveland; WOC, Davenport; WGN, Chicago; KSD, St. Louis; WDWF, Providence; WFI, Philadelphia; WGR, Buffalo; WWJ, Detroit; WCCO, Minneapolis - St. Paul; WTAG, Worcester, and WSAI, Cincinnati.

Mr. Ford's Master of Dancing will preside at the microphone during the hour presenting a brief introductory talk and giving a short description of the dance that accompanies each selection to be played by the orchestra.

After experimenting with various instruments Henry Ford at last settled on four as the ideal small dance orchestra. The instruments selected were the cymbalum, the sousaphone, the dulcimer and the violin. A quartet of artists picked by Mr. Ford as being in his opinion best able to exemplify the old-fashioned dance music will perform on these instruments during this program and will be heard via radio for the first time in the following program:

Two-step, "Mulligan's Guards" medley.

Sicilian Circle, "Come, Haste to the Wedding," medley.

Old-time Waltz, "Rippling Waves."

Plain quadrille, "Ticknor's Quadrille."

Cymbalum solo, Musetta's Waltz Song from "La Boheme," by Puccini.

Varsovienne, medley.

Scottische, "Old Southern Schottische."

Dulcimer solo, Jigs and Reels.

Virginia reel, "Larry O'Gaff."

Heel-and-Toe Polka, "Jennie Lind" and Richmond Polkas.

While the violin and sousaphone are used in many modern dance orchestra, the cymbalum and dulcimer are considered quite antique. The former is a Hungarian stringed instrument, much like an open piano, and is played with padded sticks. The dulcimer is much like the cymbalum, although much lighter in tonal quality and smaller in musical range.

FORETELLING THE WEATHER

How the weather is foretold was explained in an interesting talk by Maj. Edward H. Bowie, weather man for the Pacific Coast States, over KGO, Monday evening, Jan. 4. Radio is used extensively, according to Maj. Bowie, in reporting weather conditions over the Pacific Ocean. On an average of about 50 ships twice daily report to the San Francisco Weather Bureau, at 7 in the morning and again at 7 in the evening. Barometer readings, temperature, direction and velocity of the wind, the kind of clouds, and the actual weather at the different points are all reported in code.

"Empresscanada hacking muchness rudish nine forgotten randon," is a sample radio message received by Maj. Bowie and his assistants. Translated it means: "Steamship Empress of Canada: Greenwich meantime; position, latitude 51 degrees and 12 minutes; longitude, 170, 48 minutes, west; barometer, 29:38; temperature, 48; westerly wind blowing 28 miles an hour; weather, partly cloudy."

From the information gleaned from hundreds of these reports the weather forecasts for the Pacific Coast States is foretold.

FREQUENCY TUNING PREVENTS CROWDING

Newest Type Condensers Distribute Stations Over the Dials at Regular Intervals.

The congestion of the waveband allotted to broadcasting is becoming more and more of a problem. The number of applications for licenses continues to increase and at the present time it seems an impossibility to crowd more stations on the air that is already overloaded.

The range of frequencies allotted for broadcasting is from 500 to 1500 kilocycles per second, a variation of 1000 kilocycles. The tendency is to have as many broadcasting stations operating at the same time as will not greatly interfere with each other, and it has been found thta this condition can be realized when the stations are placed on waves approximately 10 kilocycles apart and properly located geographically so that stations on adjacent waves are separated by the greatest radio distance.

In this manner we can have a possible total of 100 broadcasting stations on at the same time, located 10 kilocycles apart. Unfortunately, with the usual semi-circular plate type of condenser, a majority of these stations are located on the lower part of the dial with comparatively few stations between 50 and 100 on the dial. Although the station bands are separated on a frequency division basis, the condensers tune by wavelength or capacity, resulting in an apparent crowding of the lower end of the condenser scale.

As long as stations are separated on the basis of frequency, it is logical and reasonable that our receiving sets should tune by even changes of frequency, in equal degrees. In other words, to tune by straight line frequency in place of straight line wavelength or capacity. Tuning by straight line frequency instruments will separate and spread out the stations that now crowd the lower end of the dial.

To design a straight line frequency condenser is not the easiest thing in the world to do, for the rotor plates become very long and out of shape if the conventional design of variable condensers is followed. This makes it difficult to obtain sufficient capacity without making the condenser very large and unwieldy.

In designing a new straight line frequency condenser in the laboratory of the All-American Radio Corporation, several marked changes were made from the conventional rotating plate style that is almost universally employed today. The movable plates move in and out in a straight line instead of rotating on a shaft. The whole condenser is encased in a dust-proof brass housing, to insure against tampering or adjusting the plates, and to keep out dust and foreign particles that would interfere with the operation of the condenser.

The dial, customarily attached to the end of the shaft on the front of the panel, is enclosed inside of the condenser case with only a small part visible through a small round hole. A round hole must be cut through the panel so that the dial reading will be visible from the front of the panel when the condenser is mounted.

The condenser is tuned by means of a vernier knob that is placed at the bottom of the instrument. This knob is geared directly to the dial inside of the case, which in turn is fastened to an eccentric cam that moves the plates in or out of mesh. No back last is possible and the need of a vernier dial is eliminated.

KFUO TO BROADCAST IN SEVEN LANGUAGES

St. Louis Station Hopes to Reach Foreign Countries With Special International Program.

Seven languages will be heard in the special addresses broadcast from Station KFUO of the Concordia Lutheran Seminary on Sunday, Jan. 24, the opening night of the International Radio Week Period, according to announcement from the operators of the station.

With listeners in all parts of the world straining their ears for American stations who will transmit special programs for overseas auditors during this week, it is expected that the addresses of these seven students of theology at Concordia Seminary will be heard in practically every country in Europe, North and South America, as well as in England and Scandinavia.

The topic for the talks is most fitting for such an occasion, the seven speakers addressing the radio audience on "Jesus Christ, the supreme need of the world."

The speakers, who will broadcast at 11 o'clock, central standard time, or at the end of the silent hour, will be:

Prof. F. Pieper, D. D., in German; Prof. W. H T. Dau, D. D., in English; Prof. J. T. Mueller in Spanish; Rev. G. Majoros in Slovak; Mr. W. Wolf in French; Mr. Anthony Messina in Italian; Mr. E. Ylvisaker in Norwegian.

KFUO, the Gospel Voice, broadcasts on the highest wave length allotted to American broadcasters, 545.1 meters.

Rev. Rudolph H. C. Meyer will broadcast a special message to overseas listeners at 9:15 on Sunday, Dec. 27, taking as the subject for the talk, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believed might not perish, but have everlasting life." Station KFUO will also present the usual program of songs and music between the talks on this evening schedule."

CONDENSER AND RADIO CORPORATION

How Radio Grew in 1925

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

The radio industry today stands about twelfth in the big manufacturing businesses of the country; it stood thirty-fourth three years ago. Some extreme optimists originally forecast total annual retail sales this year at over $600,000,000, but the more conservative valued them at $500,000,000. Now the R. C. A. says the total is around $350,000,000, due to recessions, although approaching a half billion dollars.

At any rate, sounder and more prosperous developments are predicted for 1926. Prognosticators estimate the annual sales will reach a total of about $700,000,000.

These figures, all estimates, indicate quite an achievement for a manufacturing industry developed from a "measley" $2,000,000 side line of the electrical business in 1921—four years ago.

Radio, however, isn't acting a bit "Ritzy," even if it has obtained the "high-hat" state which is usually achieved with the coming of wealth. On the other hand, it is showing a conservatism and foresight usually denied so youthful an industry and a tendency toward stabilization.

The future of the retail business is still good: radio fans are not all supplied or equipped yet, any more than are potential auto owners. This summer there were over 15,000,000 passenger cars in operation and about 2,000,000 trucks, with no indication of saturation in sight. There are said to be 52 autos to every 100 houses. We are using about 16,000,000 telephones, and although more are being installed each day, many homes are yet without them. Out of every 100 houses, 38 have talking machines—still the sales are good. It is seen that, with only 4,000,000 or 4,500,000 radio sets in operation, we are still far from having a set in each home. In fact, there are only about 16 in a hundred houses. That happy period, when all can listen in, will not be reached for several years. The most sanguine forecasters believe that by 1930 there will be 10,000,000 receivers in use—leaving still some 14,000,000 homes yet to buy their first sets.

But manufacturers are on the job according to the advertising experts who say radio manufacturers will spend $20,000,000 in advertising this year. So the future of this industry looks very promising, without taking into account replacements and accessories, requests for which will probably go on forever.

Big Output Increase.

Reliable figures showing the exact status of the radio manufacturing industry are hard to find or determine, partly due to the youthfulness of the industry. However, official census figures for 1923, the latest available, indicate that radio's parent, the electrical industry, showed a marked development between 1921 and 1923. Wages and salaries paid in the whole electrical industry increased about $100,000,000. It is fair to assume the increase was due to additional employes put to work making radio apparatus. During this same two-year period the value in radio apparatus, at manufacturers' prices, increased over $34,500,000. Incidentally, these figures come from only 290 radio manufacturers. Radio in 1923, a $44,000,000 business was already in a class with the harness, sewing machine and window shade industries, all well established. The increase—still in manufacturers' prices—in the number of radio tubes made in 1923, according to the census, was about $10,500,000. Another industry which benefitted by the advent of radio, was the battery business. Manufacturers' figures for 1923 indicated that the production of all kinds increased about twice over that of 1921. Future censuses of manufactures will include practically all types of radio apparatus, so we shall soon know just what sort of a business proposition this infant industry really is.

Lack of official figures leads us to use trade figures to show what has happened in the past four years and what is happening now. We know that in 1921 when broadcasting began, only a few receiving sets were sold, although the sale of parts started in briskly. In 1922 about 60,000 sets were sold or built and in 1923 around 250,000. The next year—last year—it is believed that this figure reached 2,300,000, whereas today the number of sets in use averages around 4,500,000. Next spring it is felt certain we shall have fully 5,000,000 sets in operation in the United States.

An idea of the rapid growth is shown by retail trade estimates. Retailers say we spent about $6,600,000 in 1921, the first year of broadcasting. In 1922, however, the demand for big transmitters as well as receivers brought the total business to around $60,000,000 and in 1923 it increased twofold, to $120,000,000. Last year it was estimated at $350,000,000. Now, as I have said, it is approaching $500,000,000 and may reach $700,000,0 in 1926. This last figure is equal to about one-sixth of the French debt to the United States.

The Home Appeal.

Some of the reasons attributed to radio's phenomenal growth reflect directly upon the great general appeal of radio, which even eclipses those of the automobile and the phonograph. The phonograph probably paved the way for good music in the home as well as for the more popular brand. The automobile enabled folks to travel and see some of their country, whereby they became broadened and began to be interested in what others were doing. Came radio; they are now able to hear the very best and latest music at home; they can travel—so to speak—and hear what others throughout the country think and listen to what they are doing, without the expense of an auto, the difficulties of travel, and regardless of the weather. This combination of facilities, together with the comparative cheapness of the radio receiver, literally sold radio as a valuable public service which few have been able to resist. The very fact that almost every citizen of the country spends $25 a year on radio equipment or about half the money he spends for shoes, shows how radio compares with the necessary footwear we all purchase with some regret, whereas, I believe, most of us like to spend money on radio and the accessories.

This radio business is no longer a shoe string affair—but a standardized and financed industry. The products, sets, tubes, batteries, etc., are said to have a better and more universal market than any other similar priced product. The fly-by-night manufacturers and retailers, having seen the futility of poor and cheap apparatus, are disappearing; the total number of retailers has also decreased considerably, which make for more dependable service.

Broadcasting and listening in, and the manufacture of apparatus for those domestic purposes make up only half the story of the radio industry. There is the export side which already has doubled in value in two years. This year the average monthly export value of radio goods was a million dollars, and it is believed that this year's exports will total about $14,000,000.

Then there is the commercial side, of which we hear little, unless we are engaged in foreign commerce or travel extensively. Our commercial stations in the United States and on our vessels are transmitting about 3,500,000 messages by radio each year. Americans pay about $15,000,000 annually for this radio correspondence. It includes all the radio business transmitted by commercial and government interests and it is growing steadily with the opening of new circuits. The naval service alone handled over 16 million words during the past fiscal year.

Naturally the first development in commercial radio was among the ships of all nations; in 1913 there were 229 United States Government and 483 American commercial ships equipped with radio; today there are over four times as many as twelve years ago. Governmental land stations increased from 77 to 305 in the dozen years. Marine, or shore stations for the ships, increased slightly, in comparison with trans-oceanic stations, which today number twenty against a single station in 1913.

Foreign ships and shore stations total 11,550 against only 1600 twelve years ago. There are also over 1000 broadcasting stations in the world. Radio has gone round the world indeed.

The number of commercial radio operators holding licenses from the Department of Commerce gives an interesting angle on the development of this form of communication: In 1913 there were listed 1900 radio operators where as today there are 6590 operators, not counting about 3000 in the naval radio communication service and around 350 in the army and signal corps.

Another field of development has been among the amateurs who numbering but 1899 in 1913 grew to a small group of embryo operators, outnumbering the commercial operators today.

It is estimated that there are now over 250,000 persons—one-quarter million—connected more or less directly with the radio industry. About 100,000 are actually building receiving sets. While not all of these one-quarter million are engaged exclusively in radio, the fact remains that a great army is today employed in the promotion of the radio industry in the United States.

RADIO LEGISLATION PIVOT OF INTEREST

Hearings on Two Bills Under Way and Passage of a Law in April Is Expected.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—All-important radio legislation holds the center of the stage and will continue to do so until final action is taken on it in Congress.

Hearings were begun during the last week in Senate and House committees on bills introduced by Senator C. C. Dill (Washington), and Representative Wallace White Jr. (Maine), which incorporate most of the recommendation of the Fourth National Radio Conference. In substance, both bills have the approval of Secretary Hoover and his radio administrative staff.

There has been considerable speculation on all sides as to the chances of radio bills getting through Congress and as to the form legislation will take. The following can be accepted as an official view of the situation:

There will be some opposition to the kind of legislation favored by the Department of Commerce and the radio industry generally. How great this opposition will be remains to be determined.

The White radio bill is being considered by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries committee. Action on the floor of the House on the White radio bill will depend almost entirely on the Committee report on the bill. If there is a unanimous committee report on the bill, it will go through the House with little or no difficulty and with few changes. If there is considerable dissent in the committee, almost anything is likely to happen to the bill on the floor of the House.

Radio legislation is now new to the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries committee. It has had the subject under consideration for several years, and most of the members of the committee have a fairly good grasp of actual conditions. It is too much to expect that the White bill will be unanimously reported with no changes. But it is not believed there will be radical or unacceptable changes.

Most of the opposition to the bill will be predicated on three points, which are:

1. The belief of some that the bill would give too much authority to the Secretary of Commerce.

2. The disappointment of commercial interests which have been refused the broadcasting privilege because of the congested condition of the ether.

3. Sectional influences, which assert that certain localities should be given a larger representation on the air.

To offset this opposition is the desire to improve conditions in the ether and increase service to the public. It is pretty well recognized that broadcasting will be in a bad way unless legislation is enacted, and that the public may decide to punish those who try to stand in its way.

It is not believed support or opposition to the radio bill will follow political lines. Republicans and Democrats alike in the House are very much inclined to follow the advice of their party members on committees when legislation is brought up in the House. If both Republican and Democratic members of the committee favor some specific bill, individual opposition to it on the floor of the House will be easily swept aside.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

VARIED OFFERINGS ON KSD SCHEDULE

Althouse and Middletown Are Stars on Tonight's Chain Program From New York.

An especially pleasing array of local artists will be presented by Station KSD in its broadcasting programs this week, beginning tonight with the St Louis Post-Dispatch Concert Orchestra, Max Steindel, conductor, and the soloists presented in that program. The latter are Joseph Gustat, solo trumpet of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Joseph Faerber, violinist, assistant conductor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Concert Orchestra. Faerber is one of the leading violinists of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and has been a soloist with that orchestra. In addition to his solo number tonight, he will be one of a trio, the other members of which are Pasquale de Conto, cello, and Esmeralda Berry Mayes, piano, to give the Widor "Serenade." Following that concert will be the "Atwater Kent Radio Hour" broadcast from New York through KSD, in which Paul Althouse, tenor, and Arthur Middletown, baritone, will be joint artists.

Monday night Miss Lavina Gauen, St. Louis contralto, and Mrs. Stella Westen Berger, mezzo contralto, of Springfield, Ill., will divide honors, giving programs, respectively, at 7 and 9 o'clock. At 7:30 the same evening the Algier Sisters of Mount Sterling, Ill., will be heard in a program of vocal trios. These singers are in private life Mrs. Bert Reynolds, Mrs. Lola Herr and Mrs Marion Winters, and have done considerable vaudeville work both in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast.

Tuesday night the program through the WEAF chain direct from New York will occupy the broadcasting hours at KSD, and Wednesday night the Hotel Statler Orchestra and the Ipana Troubadours, direct from New York, will be on the schedule.

On Thursday the New York program will have a local interlude of baritone solo by Clay Bellew. Friday night Mrs. Thelma Hayman Carroll, St. Louis contralto, who has returned to the city after an absence of about a year in the South, will be the principal feature of the local broadcasting period, with Bartlett and Cantillon banjoists, in the "ur Hour." Mrs. Carroll's program will be the "Commerce Hour" entertainment, and at 9 o'clock KSD will broadcast an old-fashioned dance orchestra which will play at WEAF in New York. Saturday night a portion of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra concert will be broadcast.

A TWO-WAY RECORD

New distance records are constantly being established by the U. S. Naval Laboratory at Bellevue in its experimental high frequency work. Recently, two-way direct communication was established between the Bellevue Laboratory and the naval vessel Scorpion in the Mediterranean on 71 meters.

CONDENSER SHIELD ADDS EFFICIENCY

Prevents Accumulation of Dust and Leakage of Energy From Plate to Plate.

There is much about the action of a radio set that cannot be seen and much radio theory at the present time is based on the action of invisible particles of electrical matter that probably never will be isolated and placed in a glass case for exhibition.

In many cases of trouble with radio receiving sets the cause is some trivial thing that escapes the eye, and on account of its minuteness is hard to believe responsible for disrupting the orderly scheme of things. It is a well-known fact among radio engineers, for example, that sets in service will become noisy and lack selectivity and volume from one cause alone—the accumulation of dust and dirt particles on the plates of variable condensers.

Radio currents do not like to make quick turns or go around corners and will always attempt to escape from sharp points on the surface of conductors. Particles of dust on condenser plates provide sharp points for the energy to leak across to the other plate and cause the set to become noisy. The engineers of the Walbert manufacturing company provided a transparent dust-proof shield of celluloid to cover their new condenser and have had reports that much better results are obtained than with the open type, unless, of course, a careful cleaning is given the old style condensers with a pipe cleaner at frequent intervals. This is a precaution that few radio fans will take, however.

A shield of celluloid prevents absorption of energy and therefore does not cut down the working efficiency of the set in the least. The front and back of the shield are composed of metal, thereby shielding the condenser against body capacity effects noted when tuning.

RADIO LINKS UP OUTPOSTS

Isolated army and civilian posts in the Philippine Islands finally have a regular communications link with the United States through the medim of transmitting radio amateur stations in California and the islands.

While ordinary means of communciation, including commercial radio, furnish rapid communication with the thickly populated and thoroughly civilized sections of the islands it remained for amateur radio to furnish a message system that provides a round trip in the space of 48 hours to most remote areas.

Several Californian amateur stations send on regular schedules with the island stations including 6PJZ of Los Angeles, and 6BQ at La Jolla.

NEW RADIO MARKET

The fact that 27 Chinese millionaires are now living in the foreign concession on the Island of Kulangsu suggests to our trade commissioner at Peking that the Amoy district of China should furnish a good market for the sale of American receiving sets. He explains that the Chinese community at Amoy is composed largely of returned overseas Chinese business people or their families, and that it constitutes a unique buying market for various foreign products.

Interest in radio at Amoy was considerably heightened recently when an amateur with a small three-tube receiving set was able to hear with clearness broadcasting from Shanghai, about 400 miles to the north, in both English and Chinese, music from Manila, 550 miles southeast, and Japanese music and singing from Tokio, 1000 miles to the northeast.

To "DX" Fans.

To pick up distant stations, a set must be adjusted to its most sensitive condition and in doing so invariably it is adjusted right on the edge of the oscillating condition, which annoys immediate neighbors by emitting a continual whistle and, if the set is adjusted to pick up other distant stations, the whistle rises and falls, producing a very disagreeable note in the receiving set.

MANY UNIVERSITIES TURN IN LICENSES

Colleges and Schools Find the Cost of Radio Offsets Its Educational Value.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Of all the varied interests that have turned to broadcasting in the past three years, the schools and universities, with a few notable exceptions, have found radio endeavor unsuccessful.

In the past year, more than 50 of the broadcasting high schools and universities have turned in their licenses to the Department of Commerce. Twelve of them were among the 29 stations deleted from the list during December.

The great expense of maintaining stations and the failure to carry out effective broadcasting on the low wave lengths and low power, were reported for the gradual surrendering of licenses by these educational institutions.

On the other hand, some universities and schools have discovered that educational broadcasting can be conducted successfully in co-operation with long established, high-powered stations.

The 12 educational stations which surrendered their licenses last month were:

WCUW, Clark University, Worcester, Mass.; WJD, Dennison University, Granville, O.; KFJX, Iowa State Teachers' College, Cedar Falls, Ia.; WTG, Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kan.; KFGC, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; KFRY, New Mexico College of A. & M. Arts, State College, New Mexico; WHBY, St. Norbert's College, West Depere, Wis.; WGBQ, Stout Institute, Menominee, Wis.; WHAG, University of Cincinnati; WLB, University of Minnesota; KWUC, Western Union College, Lemars, Ia., and WEBT, the Dayton Co-operative Industrial High School, Dayton, O.

The other stations deleted in December were:

KFRM, James P. Boland, First Field Artillery, Fort Sill, Ok.; KFUM, W. D. Corley, Colorado Springs, Colo.; WTAT, the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., Boston; KFXE, Electrical Research and Manufacturing Co., Waterloo, Ia.; WCAH, Entrekin Electric Co., Columbus, O.; KFBG, First Presbyterian Church, Tacoma, Wash.; WLAX, Green Castle Community Broadcasting Association, Greencastle, Ind; KFUJ, Huppert Plumbing and Heating Co., Breckenridge, Minn.; WOAC, Page Organ Co., Lima, O.; KFWP, Rio Grand Radio Supply House, Brownsville, Tex.; WHBR, Scientific Electric Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati; KFVU, Standard Publishing Co., Eureka, Cal.; KGB, Tacoma Daily Ledger, Tacoma, Wash.; WOCG, Triple Alliance Radio Station, Sycamore, Ill.; WPDQ, Hiram L. Turner, Buffalo, New York.; KDPM, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., Cleveland, and WCBG, Howard S. Williams, Pascagoula, Miss.

RADIO SAVES MILLIONS

The navy's expanding radio service saved the Government $2,700,000 during the last fiscal year by handling messages that otherwise would have gone by commercial companies. Figures today showed 6,000,000 words transmitted for other departments.

One Less Source of Interference

By 9CUL.

Now that the Department of Commerce has allotted a 83-85 meter band for amateur phone stations we can expect to hear fewer and fewer complaints from the broadcast listener about interference from amateur stations. The opening of this new phone band will probably see the gradual and voluntary desertion of the entire 150-200 meter band by the amateur fraternity. The biggest part of them deserted the 150-200 meter band for the shorter wavelengths long ago, but a few still hang on. The largest number of the hams on the 150-200 meter band have phone sets and use their key only to help out on their experimenting with telephonic communication. Some of these phone sets tune dangerously near to the 200-meter mark and create enormously more interference, for the same power, than telegraphic stations.

It was not so long ago that every kind of noise from a scraping sound to a roar was blamed on the amateur, but now that the public has gotten "radio-educated," it is only occasionally that we get this type of complaint. Nine times out of ten the kick comes from some newcomer in the BCL ranks who can not tell a vibrating charger noise from a ship spark station, yet invariably he will be positive the interference is from some amateur in the next block. I have never been able to figure out how they get that way, but they do. As it is now, however, there is no excuse for amateur interference with broadcast reception.

LOW POWER STATIONS STILL

Most people are of the opinion that a broadcasting station is always a large radio plant which cost thousands of dollars to install, which requires several men to keep it in operation and which may be heard for hundreds of miles around with a good receiving set. However, this is not always the case. In the latest list of broadcasting stations, issued by the United States Department of Commerce on Oct. 28, 1925, there are listed 272 stations which use 100 watts of power or less. Of these stations, 129 use 100 watts, 85 use 50 watts, two use 30 watts, one uses 25 watts, 10 use 15 watts, 26 use 10 watts and there are nine which use but five watts.

The average electric light bulb used for reading purposes uses 60 watts of electricity, so it can be seen that there are 143 broadcasting stations operating in the United States which do not place as much power on the air as would be required to light an ordinary electric light. The total power placed on the air by the 272 stations mentioned above is 32,135 watts, or enough current to operate 64 electric irons. It is also interesting to note that when WGY broadcasts with 50 kilowatts they place on the air 17,865 more watts than all of these 272 low-power stations combined.

Efficient Aerials.

An antenna of from 39 to 40 feet long should be used for general reception in crowded areas. Where space permits, two aerials can be used very effectively. One of them should be 30 feet long and the other 75 or 100. These lengths include the lead-in. With a simple two-point switch, one can readily switch from one antenna to the other.

TRIES FOR BETTER SYSTEM

Experiments which have for their purpose the improvement of radiophone transmitters to give an emitted signal that is a nearer replica of the original tone are being conducted at the electrical engineering laboratory of the University of Illinois. Considerable progress has been made and additional efforts are being extended to further this work.

'Experimental work brings out the fact that nearly all transmitting schemes are fundamentally inefficient, causing distortion, and are expensive to operate and maintain," said H. A. Brown of the laboratory, who developed a non-carrier wave system of transmission. "Results obtained show the type of broadcasting transmitter now used is the only one of a large number of transmitting devices formerly developed and used in broadcasting which gives passably good results. Even this type has several serious limitations, and it is hoped that future investigation will bring out further improved equipment.

"An improved system of radio telephone transmission which does not radiate power during intervals of silence at the microphone can be made to operate even more satisfactorily than the system in use at present, and it has the great advantage that no power is radiated from the antenna during silent intervals. The use of a radio telephone transmitting system in which the continuously radiated wave with its static and interfering squeals is absent will eliminate much interference and unpleasantness in radio reception, especially for receiving stations located in the large cities and near several powerful transmitting stations."

NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Station KYW established a precedent Nov. 16, last, when a man appeared on the woman's hour program in the morning. John C. Cutting, known as KYW's "kitchen aid," was the lucky fellow, and he now is giving a 10-minute talk each Monday and Friday morning at 11:15 o'clock, central time. Mr. Cutting tells the ladies what to do with a stew, how to hemstitch, hamburger, crochet steaks, etc.

Increase in the annual fee charged a Los Angeles hotel by the American Society of authors, composers and publishers for the privilege of broadcasting music copyrighted by members of that organization from $180 to $3000 a year has caused the hotel to cease broadcasting says an announcement made by KHJ, the station over which the hotel orchestra went on the air.

Hockey fans from all over Canada and the United States, who have written to station CKAC, requesting that the hockey games be broadcast from the rink, whenever American and Canadian teams cross sticks, will regret to learn that, although Director Cartier of the big Canadian station atop "La Presse" left no stone unturned in order to secure permit to install "mikes" in both the Forum and Montreal Arena, has not been able to give radio fans what they ask for. Both Leo Dandurand, manager of the French team, and H. Northey, managing director of the Forum, have refused point blank to allow any broadcasting of hockey. There were no reasons given for the refusal. It is thought that the fear of hurting gate receipts is the cause of the objection.

Frank Ryan, the popular hockey announcer of Westinghouse station WBZ, will again be heard on the wave of this powerful broadcasting station describing the Boston Bruins vs. Canadians professional hockey game direct from the Boston Arena at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Ryan's colorful broadcasts are heard by an ever increasing audience scattered in all parts of the United States and Canada and are proving one of the most popular transmissions introduced as a radio broadcasting feature.

BIG GENERATOR FOR WBBM

An especially built motor generator, one of the largest ever constructed for broadcasting use, has just been installed in station WBBM, located in Chicago.

The machine is a direct current, high voltage apparatus, with four units—an exciter, two generators and a motor—and will produce 48 kilowatts of energy which will enable WBBM to broadcast on as much power at 20,000 watts.

ARTHUR MIDDLETON-BARITONE

PAUL ALTHOUSE-TENOR

PAUL ALTHOUSE, tenor, and Arthur Middleton, baritone, two of the most popular Americans who ever sang leading roles in the Metropolitan Opera House, are the artists who will give the A. Atwater Kent radio concert tonight. Their joint recital will be broadcast from station WEAF, New York, through KSD and 14 connected stations, beginning at 8:15, central time.

Althouse and Middleton, often called the "Damon and Pythias" of the concert world because of frequent recitals together, will render a varied program, opening and closing with duets, and singing six groups of solos.

Althouse, born in Reading, Pa., was the first American without European training to make his operatic debut in a leading role with the Mertopolitan Opera Co. He did this in 1913, and since that has given hundreds of concerts on both sides of the world. Middleton, a native of Logan, Ia., sang in a Chicago church choir, studied music in this country and made a memorable debut with the Metropolitan.

The program for their radio recital follows:

Forza del Destino............Verdi
(Paul Althouse and Arthur Middleton).
The Horn ....Flegier
(Arthur Middleton).
(a) Thou Art Risen—
Coleridge Taylor
(b) Hawaiian Love Song...Bennett
(c) Great Awakening.......Kramer

Aria: Largo al factotum, from Barber of Seville.........Rossini
(Arthur Middleton).
Aria: "O Paradiso," from L'Africaine .... Meyerbeer
(Paul Althouse).
(a) King Went Forth...Koeneman
(b) Tally Ho..................Leoni
(c) Danny Deever ....Damrosch
(Arthur Middleton).
Aria: "Cielo e Mar," from Gioconda .... Ponchielli
(Paul Althouse).
Pearl Fishers ....Bizet
(Paul Althouse and Arthur Middleton).

NEW ARRIVALS

A large number of fans will be surprised to know that at the present time there are more crystals used as rectifiers than ever before. While most fans are familiar with the galena crystal with its catswhisker feeler, the carborundum detector is one that is more or less unfamiliar to the average fan though it has been in use since 1906 when General Dunwoody first perfected it as a detector of radio signals.

Carborundum detectors have a compartively high resistance so they exert a smaller damping effect on the tuning circuit and thus afford greater selectivity than low resistance crystals, as galena. However this higher resistance militates against sensitivity because it prevents full current flow with the small voltages available in the reception of distant stations.

To get around this disadvantage the Carborundum Company of Niagara Falls, New York, have developed a stabilizing detector unit which provides electrical control of the detector so that the valuo of the resistance may be selected which best suits the circuit impedance and operating conditions.

The unit which is completely self-contained with detector and dry cell and requires only two leads for connection in any detector circuit consists of a high resistance center tapped poteniometer, a carborundum detector and a by-pass condenser to nullify the inductive reactance of that portion of the potentiomete rincluded in the detector circuit.

Enamel Bad on Radio Coils.

When winding radio coils, always use some form of insulated wire that is not enameled. Enameled wire has its place in radio. For antenna wire it cannot be excelled. For coils, though, the insulation is not thick enough to give the necessary spacing between turns, and the distributed capacity of an enamel wound coil (unless the turns are also air-spaced) is entirely too high.

SYMPHONY IN TEST

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—One of the most interesting programs scheduled for the International Radio week period will be the Atwater Kent hour to be heard from WEAF, KSD and other stations from 9:15 to 10:15, Eastern Standard time, when the New York Symphony Orchestra, with Walter Damrosch conducting, will broadcast on Jan. 24, the first day of the tests. While all overseas broadcasting stations are expected to be silent only in the hour from 10 to 11, Eastern time, it is felt that, in view of this being Sunday night and between 2:15 and 3:15 a. m. Monday morning in London, the air there will be fairly clear and thousands of British continental listeners will be able to hear the greater portion of this program from this famous organization.

TWO STATIONS LESS THAN LAST YEAR

Despite Many Deletions Since October the Ether Lanes Are Still Crowded.

The new year opens with a total of 536 broadcasting stations on the air, only two less than on Jan. 1 last year, but 4[illegible] less than on Oct. 1, when the peak of the year was reached.

Indications are that a number of other stations will soon drop out, most of them small or low-power broadcasters, but as there are over 250 applications on file before the department, there will be plenty to replace those which cease transmitting.

There are still too many stations; most students of the situation agree that about 300 would be sufficient to supply every community in the country. Congestion in many municipal districts is as bad as ever. However, no new stations have been licensed since the radio conference, although nine or 10 which had virtually been promised permits, have been authorized to broadcast, pending final action. The department is waiting the enactment by Congress of specific authority relative to broadcasting stations' forms of licenses, channels, etc., before permitting further complications or additional interference in the already saturated ether.

The present policy is not to license more stations, unless expressly desired in communities where the public is now not well served, or in some of the states where few broadcasters exist and wave lengths could be duplicated without additional interference.

Furthermore, existing stations are required to actually broadcast transmitting matter of public interest; idle stations will not long be permitted to hold their assigned channels. Licensed stations, when they seek to renew their license, may find that regulations will include the broadcasting of matter of general public interest. For, while censorship is still taboo, the radio conference recommended that public service was the main reason for the existence of broadcasting stations, and if nothing of public interest is broadcast, the department may refuse to renew licenses.

One new station in Alaska has been authorized. It is KFQD, at Anchorage, which goes on the air with 100 watts, transmitting on the 227.1 meter or 1320 kc channel. This gives Alaska two stations, the other being KFIU at Juneau.

Returning to the situation in the ether, it is noted that there are today 408 stations formerly designated as Class A, and [illegible] of the higher-powered transmitters, known as Class B's. During the month of December [illegible] stations were deleted, a few were authorized to transmit, and other changes took place, bringing the total to 536 today.

Since Dec. 22, 12 broadcasters signed off for the last time and have been deleted from the official lists. With the exception of WLB at Minneapolis and KDPM at Cleveland, both of 500 watts, the other stations were small, being of 100 or less watts in power.

The December deletions were: KFJX, Cedar Falls, Ia.; KFRM, Fort Sill, Ok.; KDPM, Cleveland, O.; KFUJ, Breckenridge, Minn.; KFUM, Colorado Springs, Colo.; KWUC, Lemars, Ia.; KFWP, Brownsville, Tex.; WHB, West De Pere, Wis.; WLB, Minneapolis, Minn.; WOCG, Sycamore, Ill.; WTAT, Boston, Mass.; WPDQ, Buffalo, N. RADIO FANS MAY HEAR PERU

Radio Broadcasting Station OAX of Lima, Peru, is one of the latest foreign broadcasting stations to announce their co-operation with the International Radio Week movement, according to announcement by Arthur Lynch, editor of Radio Broadcast, and chairman of the committee arranging the international tests to be held the week of Jan. 24.

OAX broadcasts on a wave length of 380 meters and will attempt to use extra power on the five nights of the international tests, broadcasting special programs between the hours of 10 to 11 Central Standard Time, according to radiograms received by Mr. Lynch.

HOW RADIO GUARDS THE NATION'S SHIPS

One Big Development of the Year Was Extension of Use of the Radio Compass.

The value of radio to the marine service is testified to in the annual report of the U. S. Shipping Board, which relates that although a large number of the Fleet Corporation's vessels were in distress during the year, assistance was secured by radio and for the sixth consecutive year not a single ship was lost. Every known method of utilizing radio as an aid to navigation and as a safety protection to lives and property has been investigated by the radio section of the board.

Radio compasses, for example, have been installed on every passenger carrying ship of the fleet and all gave satisfactory service. The report also states that the radio section carefully observed the functioning of the "fathometer," a new continuously indicating, depth-finding, or sounding, device aboard a coastwise merchant vessel and, also, aboard a vessel of the Coast of Geodetic Survey Service, and assembled comprehensive data concerning it for determining its practicability aboard Field Corporation vessels.

Considerable experimentation was carried on by this section with a view to extending the use of the radio-compass and the synchronizing of radio and submarine signals used to determine the position of ships and their distance from certain points. The results obtained indicate that considerable advance in the art of navigating ships by such means may be expected.

Close co-operation with the Weather Bureau of the Department of Agriculture in obtaining meteorological observations from ships at sea was maintained and the results of such co-operation were very beneficial to shipping.

PROGRAMS IN EUROPE

Radio entertainment in lands beyond the sea is not near so varied as in most any large American city. As an illustration, here is an announcement of radio programs for Paris:

"EIFFEL TOWER (wave length 2650 m). 6:15 p. m., concert. Weather reports and signals at the usual hour.

"RADIO PARIS (wave length 1780 meters). 12:30 p. m., concert; 1:45 and 1:50 p. m., news bulletin and exchange rates; 4:30 p. m., exchange rates; 4:45 p. m., concert; 5:45 p. m., news bulletins and exchange rates; 8:15 p. m., medical bulletin; 8:30 p. m., news bulletins and exchange rates; 8:45 p. m., Italian music festival.

"ECOLE SUPERIEURE (wave length 458 m). 3 p. m., concert; p. m., scientific bulletin; 8:30 p. m., Italian gala opera, Rigoletto, from the Grand Theater, Geneva, performed in honor of the League of Nations.

"PETIT PARISIEN (wave length 345 m). 9:15 p. m., popular scientific lecture, "What Is Life," by Prof. R. Dubois.

"RADIO-GENEVA (wave length 1100 m). 8:15 p. m., concert."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q.—1. I have a five-tube tuned radio frequency set with .0005 condensers and use a short aerial (70 feet). It tunes very sharp, in fact, so sharp that I cannot consistently get distant stations. On the other hand it brings in local stations with tremendous volume and broad tuning. Do you think that the extremely sharp tuning on distant stations is the cause of my trouble? In other words, just a hair will cut out a distant station but it takes several degrees to cut out a local station. 2. Does a rheostat control voltage or current?. 3. What can cause an irregular grating noise in a set? The noise still continues with the aerial disconnected. Does this positively mean a loose connection in the set?. 4. Why dont' the tube manufacturers make a 6-volt tube for use with a storage battery instead of 5-volt tubes?—E. W. P.

A.—1. If the tuning on your dials from 200 to 545 meters is spread out over the entire dial, say 200 meters at 5 and 545 at 95 on the dials, you have an ideal condition. If the tuning band however is confined to about 60 per cent of the dial much better results will be had by using smaller condensers. Increasing the length of your aerial would also broaden out the tuning of your set. It is natural that the local stations take several degrees to tune out. 2. A rheostat is inserted in a circuit to cut down the amount of curent supplied to a device. When cutting down the current the voltage is also cut in the same proportion, due to Ohm's law which states that the voltage is equal to the current times the resistance. 3. An iregular grating noise in the set can be caused by a loose connection in the set, or in the battery or phone leads or poor batteries. If the noise is considerably lessened when the aerial is disconnected it would tend to show that the noise is from some outside source though not conclusively. 5. If tubes were designed to operate on 6 volts there would be no leeway when the voltage of the battery dropped slightly due to discharge. As it is now the tube can be operated from a 6-volt source and operated with a little more or a little less than 5 volts. The voltage supplied to the tube can be varied from 5 to 6 volts.

Q. What is the function of the potentiometer in a radio receiver when the resistance is connected across the A battery and grid return lead goes to the potentiometer arm? O. B.

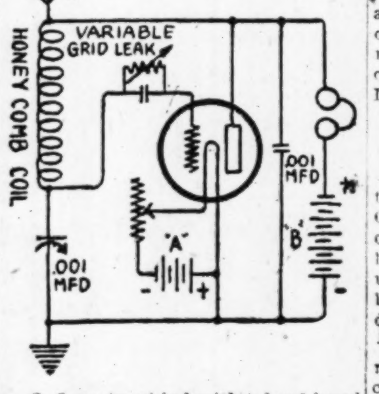
A. When connected as described a negative or positive grid bias may be supplied to the tube.

Q. What is meant by radio modulation? A. B.

A. The change of amplitude that takes place in the carrier wave of a broadcasting station is called "modulation." When the microphone at the studio is spoken into the carbon granules that form part of the microphone are packed and vibrated to various degrees depending on the voice frequency. This vibration of the carbon granules in turn causes a varying resistance of the microphone circuit that is further amplified by vacuum tubes. The varying current then varies the carrier wave.

Q. Give hookup of set using a 250 turn honeycomb coil that will tune in the long wave stations.—F. W.

A. Below is given the hookup of a honeycomb coil set that will cover a waveband of from 600 to 26,000 meters. The variable condenser used has 1000 micromicrofarads maximum capacity. When used with the following sized coils the set will cover the following wavebands—1500 turns (5000 to 15,000 meters), 750 turn coil (2600 to 5000 meters), 300 to 400 turn coil (1200 to 2600 meters), and for the commercial ship and shore stations a 100 or 150 turn coil may be used.



Q. I am troubled with a loud howl in my five tube radio frequency set. What can I do to remedy this?—W. H. S.

A. There are howls and howls, but from the amount of changes you have made I would say that the only thing left that could cause this howl could be coupling between the radio frequency coils. Vary their position so that there is no coupling between the stages.

Q. Early in the evening of Dec. 25, I heard Christmas greetings sent by Germany to the American people. A friend of mine says I did not pick up this program direct. Do you know where the program originated?—E. C.

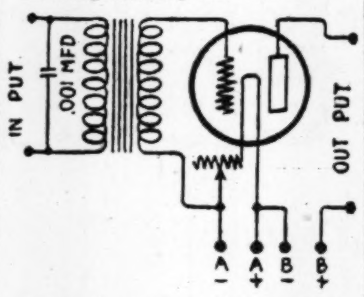
A. The broadcast was made from electrical recording on special disks made of a German radio program and they were made in Germany. These disks were sent of the United States on the Leviathan and broadcast from WRNY.

Q. How can I increase volume of my three tube regenerative receiver?—C. S.

A. You can add one more tube to work in parallel with your last audio stage and increase the amplifier plate voltage.

Q. Give hookup of one stage audio frequency amplifier that can be added to my set.—E. B. S.

A. Diagram is given below.



Q. In what city is KWKH located?—F. B.

A. KWKH broadcasts at Shreveport, La., on a wave length of 261 meters.

HAM RADIO TO REACH MAYORS

Mayors of prominent cities will be invited to issue proclamations proclaiming the last week in January as radio week for their cities, as this week will be observed as International Radio Week in more than 15 countries.

In an effort to reach the various Mayors, the International Radio Week Committee, with headquarters in New York, will utilize the services of the American Radio Relay League official stations, using "radio's own messenger service for radio service."

More than 500 Mayors will receive ARRL telegrams during the early part of January.

Most of the messages will be started from New York stations of the ARRL, but to give variety to the affair, a few of the messages will originate on the West Coast and a few at some central point.

It is expected that more than 2000 repeats of these messages will be given, the average handling of a similar message requiring the use of four relay points, according to recent estimates from those in close touch with the Radio Relay League system.

STATION HAS TWO CALLS

An additional group of call letters has been assigned WDWF, at Cranston, R. I., by the Department of Commerce. The additional call letters are WLSI, which will be used when the station is operated by the Lincoln Studios at Providence.

CHICAGO RECEPTION IS IN A SLUMP

Unusual Winter Conditions Make It Difficult to Tune in Distant Stations.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Radio distnace hunters in Chicago have encountered unusual reception difficulties in their search for the faraway stations, during the present cold season. At times reception this winter has been no better than in summer, when atmospheric conditions are such that the listener is largely confined to local transmitters due to heavy static and weak signals.

Even below zero weather has not boosted the signal strength of some distant stations, it was demonstrated during a recent cold wave. The first night of below zero weather saw many stations snapping in, but the next night a blanket seems to have spread itself in the air and many of them were smothered. Then the following night, with all local stations silent, transmitters on the higher wave lengths were practically inaudible while those on the lower side could be heard with fair volume at times.

At other times during the season unusual conditions have prevailed, knocking out many stations which normally are received in Chicago with satisfactory loudspeaker volume. Static also has been unusually heavy for winter.

Numerous theories have been advanced, with practically all of them based on the fact that atmospheric conditions not generally encountered with the sun in the nadir are to blame.

The increased number of sun spots reported by scientists is believed by some radio experts to be largely responsible for the poor reception, as it is known that sun spots affect the atmosphere about the earth, causing electrical disturbances.

ELIMINATING SPEAKER NOISE

When there is a scratchy noise coming from the loud speaker of the sets, it is quite easy to determine just what is causing the trouble. The average service man does this by a process of elimination, determining first if the noise is due to an outside cause. This is the way he tests to find out if it is due to electrical interference in the immediate locality.

He first disconnects the antenna and if the noise stops or diminishes in volume he immediately knows that this interference is from the outside and not in the receiver. Another good test for this is to throw the three dials out of resonance, setting one at 0, the next one at 50, and the third one at 100. If the noise still persists, then he looks for trouble in the installation.

He very readily determines if the batteries are noisy by taking a pair of phones, placing one tip on the minus, the other on the plus getting a sharp click, then no noise at all. If there is a rushing and crackling sound this battery is faulty and should be repaired, declares the service department of the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation.

Very often the trouble in noisy sets can be traced to dirty prongs on the tubes, as well as poor contact with the springs in the sockets. In quite a few cases it has been found that the wire in the loud speaker cord is frayed, causing scratchy sound in the horn. Try reversing the tips in the plug. Very often reversing these will improve the volume 100 per cent.

CALL MISINTERPRETED

Radio broadcasting was halted in New Yorw last week when ships at sea relayed what they believed a distress call from the Coast Guard cutter Yamacraw, off the Florida coast. The Independent Wireless Corporation reported that it believed the Yamacraw's message had been merely a request for temporary radio silence to permit its communication with nearby ships and had been mistaken for an S O S call by the ships which relayed the signal. Broadcasting was soon resumed when nothing further was heard from the Yamacraw.

New! Standard Control and Standard Gear Shift Plus- Split-Second Braking

Reo pioneered the change from right hand steering—making for quicker progress through traffic and greater safety

The New and Improved Reo provides standard gear shift, and the simple braking control system that is standard on other fine cars PLUS Split-Second brake application that means real driving comfort, rapid progress, and safetv in today's traffic.

Three-fifths of a second gained in setting your brakes when driving 25 miles per hour means a saving of 21 feet 6 inches in stopping. That is why automotive engineers for years have sought better methods of setting brakes.

Only the New Reo has this

Never before has anyone produced a car providing standard gear shift and a brake control that provides the familiar handling of standard control (service brake on foot pedal, hand lever on emergency) plus greatly increased speed and ease in setting brakes.

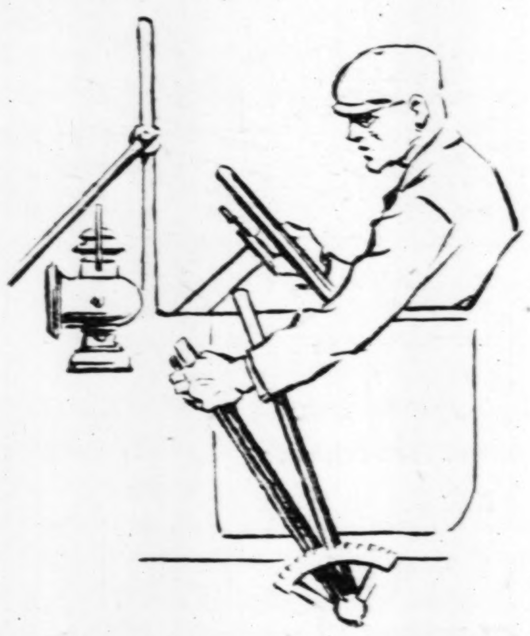
In short, the New Reo provides braking control no other car has and the type of standard controls that all other cars have.

The fourth great advance

This is the fourth great advance in making driving easier and safer that Reo has pioneered for the motor car industry.

Reo first led the way to greater safety and quicker progress through traffic by pioneering the left-hand drive.

Next it pioneered the direct center-control—taking the control levers off the side of the car and putting them into the front compartment.



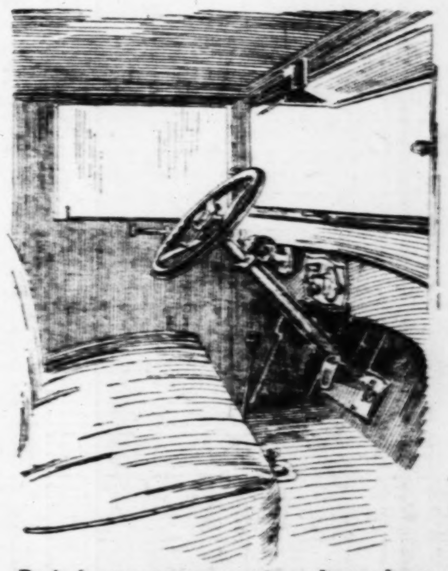
Reo pioneered the change from outside levers to direct center control to make driving in traffic easier

A few years ago Reo pioneered the nationwide use of balloon tires—again providing better braking and easier control in traffic.

A glance at the stream of passing cars will show you how universally the basic things which Reo pioneers are adopted eventually by the motor car industry.

For some time to come, however, only the New Reo will have Split-Second Braking together with Standard Control, now offered to the public for the first time.

Come in and see this fourth great advance—in the New Reo Sedan described at the right.



Reo's front compartment is uncluttered, yet THIS new and improved REO offers Split-Second Braking with Standard Control and Standard gear shift.

The Sporting Mr. Brandeis—Omaha Millionaire's Two Wives Have Cost Him $650,000 And Two Lady Friends May Cost Him $400,000 More, Their Husbands Having Sued for Alienation of Affections

THE SECOND MRS. BRANDEIS

E. JOHN BRANDEIS

THE FIRST MRS. BRANDEIS.

But E. John Brandeis, Not Dismayed, Does Very Well in His Luxurious Bungalow on the Roof of Omaha's Largest Department Store—Here, on Occasion, Like a Hunter Home From the Hill, He Reflects on the Glories of the Chase—Has Had Narrow Escapes From Lions, Tigers, Rhinos and Women—Twice a Mrs. Brandeis Has Gone Into Court With Tales of His Missteps.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 9.

E. JOHN BRANDEIS, the richest person in Omaha, is above all else a sporting man. He has hunted. He has adventured. Dangerous and expensive quests have called him to Africa, to India, to Alaska. Big game has not dismayed him. Before his rifle have fallen rhinos, lions, tigers and bears. With beaters "in the blue" he has taken trophies, under the flare of the aurora borealis he stalked the walrus, from an elephant's back he has shot leopards. Pagodas, Eskimo huts, kopjes, cannibal villages he has passed by on far strange paths most of us will never walk.

Nor has his hunting been confined to the mere physical perils and incidental expenses of animal slaughter. Boldly he has invaded the Dark Continent of Femininity, which no man has fully explored. Game trails lined with potted palms. Spoors of dainty heels on plush carpet. Orchestras sighing a jungle cacophony. Little pools of champagne where lovely creatures come to sip a drink in midnight hours. In this exotic wilderness E. John Brandeis has sought periodically for the higher thrill. Light laughter more hazardous than a lion's roar has lured him. Still pressing on, heedless or regardless of danger, he has muddled through. But not without scars, not without wounds deeper than he has ever suffered in the material combat with wild beasts.

The Passionate Quest

With him on these quests for love, for understanding, for feminine companionship he has, unfortunately, taken his pocketbook. And there have been occasions when ladies, feeling themselves on the defensive, lashed out long, cruel strokes at E. John Brandeis. Each time they cut gashes in his bankroll. His first wife obtained $400,000 as a divorce settlement. His second wife took $250,000 more. The latest expeditions, no matter how innocent they may have been, are likely to prove almost as expensive. For chance led this hunter into contact with women who had mates. In December these two husbands, Clarence E. Hall and John G. Battelle, filed suits against Brandeis for alienation of affections. Hall wants $200,000 and Battelle $200,000. Both being Omaha men, public attention has focused on Brandeis' home town, where he is a young lord.

The position E. John Brandeis holds in Omaha is perhaps unparalleled by any other millionaire in any other city. Here he has built his house upon a rock—ten stories of brownstone, it stands at the corner of Douglas and Sixteenth streets. It is the Brandeis Store ("largest department store between Chicago and the Coast") and on the roof its owner has erected a bungalow. People who have been entertained at the bungalow say it is sumptuously furnished. Within its walls, safe from curious ones on the street below or inopportune callers, lives Brandeis when he is not in New York, London, Singapore or Bombay or some other distant place. Here he entertains to suit his whim persons whom it suits his whim to entertain. He happened to be in Europe when I visited Omaha, but newspapermen of the town assured me that had he been at home he would have been pleased to greet a visitor.

A Charming Fellow

He is a charming fellow, by all testimony, a man of parts and young. Of medium height, rather slight in build and swarthily handsome, he fits the picture. Adventurous mustache, bold eyes, genial handclasp and a lavish generosity—these are the points which men who know him call to mind at once. The bungalow on the store roof is somehow symbolic of him. "Come and see my shining palace built upon the sand," sings the lady poet, but E. John Brandeis with a practical dreamer's insight has built his house upon a rock. Yet it is a shining palace, the more lustrous and capricious because of its foundation. The Brandeis Store is staid, massive, awesome. The bungalow on the roof is the building's one frivolous mood.

The bungalow represents more than caprice. One might see in it a reaction from previous generations of Brandeises. E. John did not build the store on which his playhouse rests. That was made by his grandfather, Jonas Brandeis, more than half a century ago. Made with grubby toil in a little dry goods emporium, with upright dealings, stern and wise. Old Jonas had no time for frivolity. Building J. L. Brandeis & Sons took all his life's endeavor. The second generation relaxed a bit from this rigorous code. There were three sons, Emil, Hugo, and Arthur, who was E. John's father. It is gossipped in Omaha that the three sons made their largest contributions to the Brandeis business when they died; that each was insured for a million dollars in favor of the store. A few scandals haunted the Brandeis sons and tragedy claimed them. One died in an auto accident, another went down on the Titanic and Arthur Brandeis died of disease before his time. But in their way the second generation carried on, the store prospered and the Brandeis family became the most prominent in Omaha.

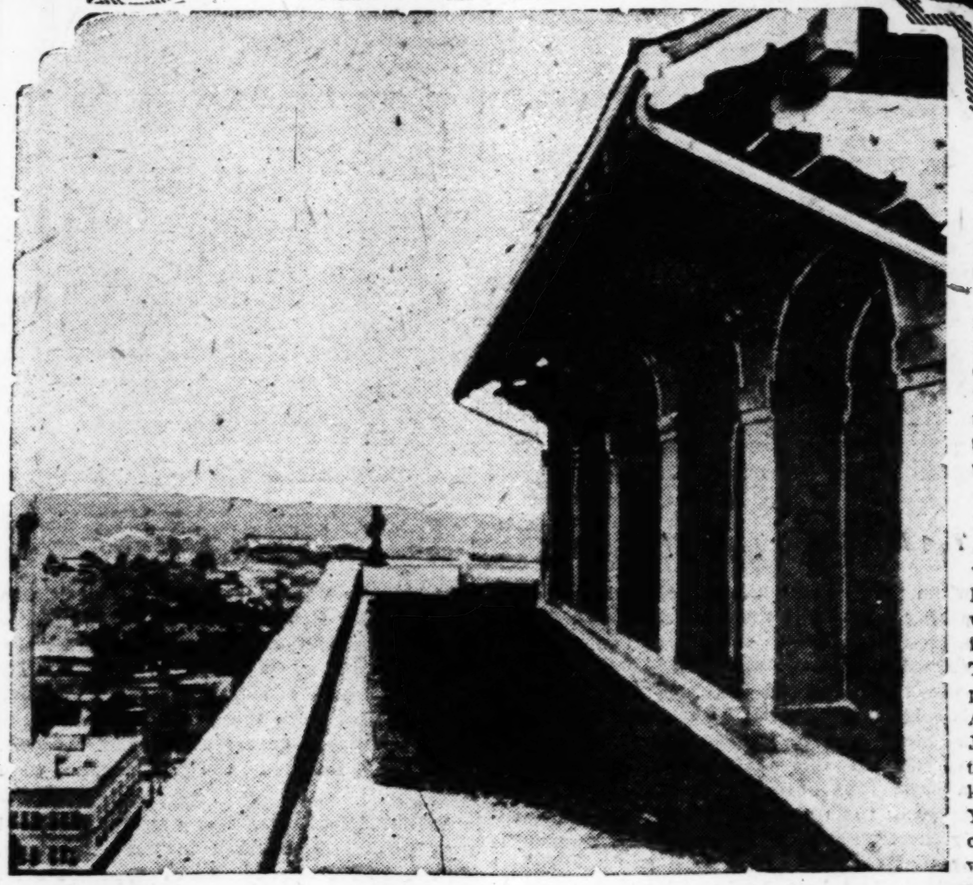
His Story

E. John is of the third generation. He has given his own frank explanation about his life to an Omaha reporter:

"My family sent me away to boarding school when I was very young. I grew up without moral training. I was never denied a thing I wanted. If I asked for 50 cents I got a dollar. I'm spoiled. I admit it."

Young and eager and unrestrained he sought life. As a youth his favorite occupation was riding bronchos on a Wyoming ranch. He loved guns and dogs and tales of hunting. When the war came on he wanted to join the aviation corps, but instead they put him in the Quartermaster's department. There are pictures of him touselhaired and nervous, with the grace of millions somehow about his shoulders, grinning at the world—very much like a puppy straining to burst a tether. It was foreordained that as soon as the war was past, E. John Brandeis would go a-hunting. He sallied forth from the citadel of Brandeis greatness. Since then, he has brought home some lovely tiger skins and a few scandals which Omaha does not think are so lovely.

His first affair was to woo and marry Miss Madeline Frank of San Francisco, pretty daughter of a rich leather manufacturer. They were married there in 1917 and it lasted four years. But E. John took a hunting trip to New York City and his wife, without his knowledge, followed. Presently she was back in Omaha filing suit for divorce on grounds of extreme cruelty, which under the lenient Nebraska law, can mean most anything. The proceedings were hushed up and in March of that year, after five minutes' hearing a Judge granted her full divorce with $400,000 settlement — to be paid in $50,000 installments. Brandeis, court records show, finished paying last August. She has custody of their 5-year-old girl, Marie.



The facade of the Brandeis bungalow which stands on top the 10-story Brandeis Store building in the business district of Omaha.

Next he sought Mrs. Emily Marie Coleman, divorced wife of John C. Coleman, one of the mustard kings of London. They were married at Seward, Alaska, in June, 1922, and then proceeded to the big game fields. Mrs. Brandeis, second, proved an apt hunter, bringing down one bear, two walrus, several sea lions and smaller game. She returned to Omaha with her husband that September. Omaha friends were surprised. They knew E. John had gone to Alaska after bear, but they did not expect him to come back with a wife, also.

The following February, Mr. and Mrs. Brandeis departed for Africa on another big game hunt. They remained until September, 1923. During the hunt Mrs. Brandeis shot three lions, one zebra, three antelope, one waterbuck and one wildebeeste. Brandeis got two lions, two zebra, one leopard, two wildebeestes and a rhinoceros. But he brought back more than this. Shortly after he returned his wife filed suit for divorce, and on Nov. 30, 1923, was granted separation with about $250,000 settlement. Her testimony cast considerable light on E. John Brandeis as a hunter.

Mrs. Brandeis, second, testified in support of her petition for divorce on grounds of indignities and cruelty to a dramatic episode in the depths of the African jungle. She said that one night she was stationed in a blind beside a water pool, awaiting some lions, when her husband sent a Zulu, nude and horribly painted, to spring out at her. She became hysterical from the fright of the experience, she testified, and suffered great anguish at memory of it.

On another occasion, she said, Brandeis had given her a diamond necklace of great value. They were on a steamer returning from Europe and got to arguing about some trivial point. Suddenly, he snatched the jewel from her and hurled it into the ocean, she testified.

After E. John had settled for this hunting venture with a check for approximately $250,000 he went on a tour of the world. Meanwhile, it had developed, he had gone on a hunting trip for a private secretary. His name was involved in the suit of Clarence E. Hall of Omaha for divorce from Mrs. Helen Grady Hall.

Mrs. Hall, it appears from her testimony in the divorce suit, which was tried in May, 1922, was unaware that E. John Brandeis had other than right motives in his association with her. But her husband told a rather pathetic story of what that association had done to his home. His testimony, in substance, was:

"She was always talking about E. John to me. She was his private secretary and he gave her presents. She came home with a fur coat I had not bought for her. He bought her a pistol and a wrist watch and other things. We were married in 1917 and lived happily for two years. Then she got dissatisfied with what I could provide on my small salary and went to work. After that I never heard anything but E. John this and E. John that. She would go to the office evenings to work. She had a key to his bungalow. She made trips to New York that I never heard about and was not consulted about. At first I thought her a wonderful woman, but she drifted away from me."

She Explained

The defendant explained about the presents and the key to the bungalow. She said that she had bought the fur coat on credit at the Brandeis store and paid for it with her own money. She acknowledged that Brandeis had given her the pistol, "because he knew I was crazy about guns." In her capacity as private secretary to Brandeis she had a key to his bungalow as a matter of office routine—it was a master key and unlocked everything in the store, she said. She positively denied other than friendly relations with Brandeis. It was true, she said, that she had helped Brandeis select the furnishings of the bungalow, that he had given her $10 in gold for a Christmas present, and that she made trips to New York for the firm—but all these things were connected with her duties as private secretary.

The Judge granted Hall his divorce, but said in passing that he did so on the ground that Mrs. Hall had deserted her husband and not because wrong relationship had been proved between her and Brandeis. "There has been a gradual drifting apart, the wife has taken up other interests, but her innocence in the case is in no way impugned," he declared.

After the divorce was granted Mrs. Hall was transferred to the New York office of the Brandeis store, and she is still connected with Eastern branches of the firm. She has been described as a pretty woman in the late twenties, and a very efficient stenographer. A sidelight on E. John's methods is contained in the statement of a former executive of the Brandeis store, to the correspondent.

"Mrs. Hall was my stenographer," he said, "and a wonderfully capable girl. E. John came back from the army and saw her in my office. Pretty soon he asked me if he could have her for his private secretary. I agreed and she made the transfer to his office."

Nothing more was done about the Hall matter until E. John returned from his trip around the world and settled down once more in Omaha, while the Brandeis store held exhibits of rarities its young owner had picked up in foreign bazaars. Then, Hall, who is employed by the Union Pacific railroad as a clerk decided to seek redress for his alleged injuries. On Dec. 4 last he filed suit through his counsel, Arthur Mullen, for $200,000 damages. Mullen, an attorney of high repute, told the writer that he is confident of establishing a case.

"We will stress the element of enticement," he said. "The testimony in the divorce suit is enough to indicate, I think, that Brandeis did cause Mrs. Hall to lose interest in her husband and home."

The case of John G. Battelle and his effort to make hunting costly for the Omaha sportsman has not been given much publicity here. Battelle is a salesman for the Quaker Oats Co. on a small salary. His wife has left her home, husband and young son to work in the credit department of the Brandeis store. Battelle will seek to show, Edward O'Sullivan, his attorney, says, that Brandeis paid Mrs. Battelle marked attention, that she went to places of amusement with him and frequently joined parties given by Brandeis at a tent camp he maintains on the Missouri River not far from Omaha.

Mrs. Battelle declined to talk to the correspondent when he called on her at the Brandeis store. She is a very comely little girl about 22 years old, just the sort who may innocently have attracted the rich young adventurer.

Summing it up, E. John's wanderings on the Dark Continent of Femininity already are known to have cost him $650,000. The ladies he found and married were not defenseless. They bided their time and struck deep. E. John has discovered also, that even where ladies do not wish to strike, their mates are not so lenient. His acquaintanceships with Mrs. Battelle and Mrs. Hall may cost him $400,000 more. That would make for the four ladies involved a cost of $1,050,000. Extravagant hunting, indeed.

THE RIPPBERGERS OF ELGIN, ILLINOIS, AND THE DISASTER THAT HAS OVERTAKEN THEM

Failure of Old Established Business Followed by Charges of Fraud and Forgery

Old Charley Rippberger Builded Solidly in Real Estate and Insurance and Left a Prosperous Going Concern to His Wife and Twelve Children, but Young Walter Rippberger Adventured in Loans and Investments and Came to Grief.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ELGIN, Ill., Jan. 9.

THEY called him Old Charley Rippberger. Not that he was so old. It was just the town's friendly, affectionate way of expressing its appraisal of him. When the people of Elgin and the dairy farmers round about spoke of Old Charley Rippberger they meant it to convey something of his sturdy honesty and solidity. For Old Charley was a stalwart.

Old Charley, when he was young Charley, had gone into real estate and insurance. He had grown in importance and wealth as the town had grown. In his real estate dealings he was cautious and conservative and gave good care to his clients' interests. Insurance matters were attended to with promptness and thoroughness.

He was a pillar of the Evangelical church, strong in a German community. Father of 12 children. A substantial, upstanding citizen. Upon his business practices had never rested the taint of suspicion.

When he was really getting old there was another reason for calling him Old Charley. He had his son, Walter, with him in the business. So they spoke of Old Charley Rippberger and Young Walter Rippberger, expressing in those terms their confidence in the old man and, perhaps, their reservations concerning the young man, for he had yet to prove himself.

There, never, however, were any misgivings about the firm, while Old Charley lived or after he died. The old man had put his life into the firm. His character gave it character after he had passed on. Nothing could destroy that. Nothing, that is, unless the son should be found unworthy. Now, however, Young Walter Rippberger has been found unworthy, or so it is alleged, and the heritage which Old Charley Rippberger left to his wife and 12 children has been destroyed.

His Start

When Charley Rippberger was building up his business and raising his family of 12, he stuck rigidly to real estate and insurance. In these he took no risk. A man with a wife and 12 children couldn't afford to take chances. On real estate sales and the placing of insurance he collected his commissions and that was all there was to it. He was prosperous, as prosperity was rated then, and was satisfied.

It was not until after he had taken into partnership with him his son, Walter, and Sam Peterson, who had married his oldest daughter, Clara, that the business was expanded to include loans and investments. Walter was just out of school and was eager and ambitious. Sam had been a clerk in a clothing store. He was conservative, more the type of his father-in-law than his brother-in-law, and when Charley Rippberger's health became impaired it was Peterson who took his place in general charge of the business. Walter gave most of his attention to the loan and investment branch. It was more adventurous and its appeal to him was greater

While Old Charley Rippberger lived his cautious hand held in check the adventuring Walter. He viewed with a certain uneasiness the investment branch of the business. It was not rock-ribbed like the real estate and insurance business. He seems to have had a vague fear that it might jeopardize what he had accumulated for the children's future. He did, however, sanction loans on farm lands which he thought were of sufficient value to protect him against every possible mischance.

Then, in 1916, only a year after the partnership was formed, Old Charley Rippberger died. A methodical man always, he had put his house in order and made his will. It was his wish that the business, firmly established and prospering, should continue. He willed to his wife a life estate in the partnership, desiring that she use the income to complete the rearing of the family, and at her death everything would go to the children.

The First Trouble

After Old Charley's death business went on as usual at the Rippberger Building, partly occupied by the firm and partly let to tenants. The confidence which the old man had created was unimpaired. It was as if his spirit hovered over the place. The reservations which had been held concerning young Walter had been resolved in his favor. He seemed to be a worthy son of a worthy sire. He apparently lived within the modest salary that he drew from the business. He had taken his father's place in the Evangelical church and was a deacon there. His observable habits were good. He was not suspected of any covert dissipations. His social diversions were temperate. He applied himself to business, expanding the loan and investment branch while Peterson looked after the real estate and insurance branch.

If there was any adverse comment it was made by ambitious mothers of marriageable daughters, who thought it was high time for a young man of his eligibility to get married and settle down.

In manner and method Young Walter was different from Old Charley. Well, why not. The times had changed. Bigger things were being done than were done when Charley Rippberger was building up his real estate and insurance business. Young Walter was more enterprising and adventuring than his father had been. Well, he had to be, or be left behind. In doing the bigger things, though, Walter Rippberger took bigger chances than his father would have taken. Chances which might destroy all that Old Charley Rippberger had toiled a lifetime to create. If it was permitted to the spirit of Old Charley to hover over the business which he had created, it must, as the years passed, been a troubled and anxious spirit.

In 1918 and 1919, when farm values were at their peak, extensive loans had been made by Walter Rippberger. Afterward land values declined and losses were incurred. There came times when money was badly needed. Rippberger raised it by various expedients. The slight irregularities resorted to at first, utilizing clients' assets, could be corrected and no harm would be done. But the difficulties continued and grew worse. Instead of correcting the irregularities, it is now alleged, he had recourse to greater irregularities, to cover up the lesser. Things went from bad to worse.

WALTER RIPPBERGER.

The Rippberger place of business.

The great confidence which Old Charley Rippberger had created served well in the crisis which had come. It was a confidence that had bred carelessness on the part of customers. They entrusted everything to the Rippbergers. They paid loans and did not bother about the notes.

"Tear up the note or mail it to me," one of them would say, and Walter would say all right, but the note would not be torn up or mailed. When he needed money these notes were good collateral. It would be time enough later on to redeem them and destroy them.

Various payments were made, large in the aggregate, to be applied, and they were not applied. The money might be needed. It was needed and was used, so it seems. When difficulties were past it could be applied to the purposes intended by those who had paid it in. But the difficulties did not pass.

It was not until about two months ago that something like uneasiness and distrust began to be felt in Elgin and through the surrounding country. There were whispers that the Rippberger business was in trouble. Interest notes and other claims had not been promptly met. Checks were said to have come back from the banks because the Rippberger account was overdrawn.

It was not so easy to destroy the confidence which Old Charley Rippberger had established. Patrons were reluctant to believe the stories that were afloat. It might be that business competitors were circulating them. The Rippberger tradition was strong.

The rumors persisted, though, and after a while patrons of the Rippbergers began comparing notes and the conviction was forced upon them that something was wrong. There ensued a mild run on the Rippbergers. The demands were more than they could meet. It is said, and may well be believed, that Rippberger and Peterson themselves did not know what the trouble was. They thought they had a prosperous business but the difficulty of meeting their obligations had been constantly increasing. Their book-keeping, particularly that relating to the loan and investment branch, had been haphazard. They realized at last that they would have to find out how they stood. The books were in such shape that they could not find out for themselves. They had an audit made. It showed that the firm was bankrupt. A voluntary bankruptcy petition was filed in Chicago. It listed assets at $290,250 and liabilities of $473,683.

Frozen Assets

"Frozen assets" were blamed for the firm's condition. "Evaporated assets" might have been a more accurate designation. The usual hope was expressed on behalf of the firm that it would be able to pay in full. A statement was issued, to the effect that borrowers in Nebraska, South Dakota and other states, where the Rippberger company had loaned heavily, had been unable, on account of a severe financial depression, to pay interest and taxes and other charges, which the company had advanced for them, so straining the company's resources that it was unable to continue. It was hoped that under the direction of the receiver appointed by the court the "frozen assets" might be thawed out and enough realized to pay clients in full.

The usual sedative, which had the usual effect of mitigating somewhat the shock of the failure. It might work out just as was optimistically promised, but holders of Rippberger paper wanted to be sure that it was good, so they flocked to the lawyers and the banks. One of these was Mrs. Mary E. McDonald, a widow, 62 years old. She held six notes on which she had loaned Rippberger $3000. They bore the purported signatures of L. E. Cropp, a garage owner, and his wife. The Cropps declared the signatures were forgeries.

Walter Rippberger was arrested, charged with forgery, and taken to jail at Geneva. He could have been released on $10,000 bond but he preferred to stay in jail. There, at least, he would not have to face the men and women, most of them in moderate circumstances, who had trusted him. Trusted him, very many of them, because they had trusted his father before him and found him a worthy trust.

A contributing reason may have been the realization that if he gave bond on that charge he would be arrested on others, for other instances of alleged fraudulent transactions were coming to light as the investigation proceeded.

Realization quickly came that the situation was much worse than the previous day's optimistic statement had indicated. The liabilities were definite enough but the assets were only a guess and probably not a very good one. Only a complete audit could show the actual condition but there was reason to believe that the losses would run between $700,000 and $1,000,000 and the prospect of the firm's clients recovering more than 15 cents on the dollar seemed doubtful.

A tornado, sweeping across Elgin and Kane county, could not have been more devastating. The clients of the firm numbered between 3000 and 4000. Nearly all of them were comparatively poor persons whose transactions with the firm involved their savings and their homes. Many who had been scraping along for years, making payments on homes, as they supposed, found that the payments had not in fact been made. The money had been kept by Rippberger, it is alleged, and he had kept up the interest instead. The drain of constantly increasing interest payments had been one of the things that had brought him to disaster.

The victims of the crash were so many that it was a community affair. The situation involved prospectively such extensive legal inquiry and probable litigation that a meeting of the Elgin Bar Association was called and held at the Y. M. C. A., and after a discussion the lawyers adopted a resolution, recognizing that "in an emergency of this kind it is the duty of the bar to extend every possible aid to the community," and pledging that "we unite and co-operate in our efforts to settle the affairs of our respective clients in their relations with the Rippberger company, to the end that the expense of administration of said estate, and the expenses of possible litigation and costs to our various clients, be held to the minimum compatible with efficient service."

One of the important questions that the lawyers and the courts will have to wrestle with is whether the lender or the borrower must bear the burden of loss occurring through misappropriation of funds by the Rippberger firm as the agent for both.

As in the case of Steve Orban, ditch digger. Over two years ago he borrowed $7000 from the Rippberger company to build a home. He says he has paid back $2000. But the note-holder says he has not received the $2000. Rippberger, it seems, paid the interest to the note-holder but did not turn over Orban's payments on the interest. And many cases like that.

Rippberger, in jail at Geneva, washing dishes as part of his contribution to the jail routine, refuses to talk about it, but through his lawyer Charles G. Seidel, he says he is solely responsible for any bad investments or unprofitable vetures that may have been made. The investment and loan department was entirely under his supervision. The money was lost in the course of business.

See What the Spoon-Fed Age Is Doing for Us

By the Very Rev. W. R. Inge.
Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London

AT the season when the British paterfamilias is sending his children on their Christmas visit to the dentist it must occur to him to wonder why the noble savage never has any trouble with his teeth. It is said that they are kept healthy by the hard work they have to do in tearing tough meat without the help of knife and fork. These implements, and the art of cookery, are reducing man to a toothless animal, and are, perhaps, responsible for such evils as appendicitis and cancer, from which savages hardly suffer at all.

This is only a sample of what civilization is doing to us; and civilization, for the majority in every nation, is not yet a hundred years old. Until quite lately the housewife used to bake her own bread, make her own jam, and offer her friends home-brewed wine. Now she can do none of these things. The laborer, before the industrial revolution, was a handy man, almost self-sufficing. Now he understands only one thing—perhaps how to punch out biscuits from a slab of pulp without making the circles intersect. Mr. Austin Freeman, whose observations of savage peoples have made him keenly alive to the evils of machinery, describes how his caravan was overtaken by a storm in Central Africa. The natives set to work in the forest, and in a few hours a row of serviceable waterproof huts had been constructed. The despised savage would no more ask the Government to build a house for him than he would ask it to comb his hair.

Every year we invent machines to do something new for us. Handwriting used to be an art, and a pretty one. Now an increasing number of people rely entirely on the typewriter, and American advertisers assure us that "you cannot afford to do your writing in the old way." When the typewriter has been introduced into schools we may have a generation who cannot write at all.

Walking and riding, two delightful and health-giving exercises, are becoming extinct. Two hundred years ago the roads were full of riders, and of pedestrians who thought nothing of 20 miles a day. The joys of a long country walk, either solitary or with a friend, are unknown to the younger generation, although there is no more delightful way of spending a spring or summer day.

Education, except where the pupils are encouraged to make things with their hands, is mainly spoon-feeding. Fifty years ago the editions of the classics were so bad that the student had to puzzle out difficulties for himself. Now he sits luxuriously before a crib, two commentaries, and a book of lecture notes which have been slowly dictated in class. He need not use his brains at all. The battle between Greeks and Trojans in education has raged for many years; but the truth is that the conscientious tutor and the conscientious editor between them have killed the valuable part of a classical training.

The same process of making things easy is discernible even in games. Half a century ago the cricket coaches at Eton and Harrow used to bowl to the elevens down a slope, to teach them how to stop the famous Lord's shooters. Now if a ball shoots at Lord's, which it hardly ever does, it always gets a wicket, and the aggrieved batsman complains of the groundman. The modern mountaineer leaves it to others to "climb the steep ascent of heaven in peril, toil and pain;" he prefers a more comfortable way of getting to the top—he "follows by the train."

Everywhere we find the same demand to make life easy, safe, and foolproof. The fine trees in our public parks are periodically mangled and reduced to the condition of clothes-props by our urban and county councils, because boughs have been known to be blown down in a high wind, or even, in the case of elm trees, to fall suddenly, and once in two hundred years some fool might be standing under the tree at the moment. Every workman must be insured against every variety of accident, even when it is caused by his own negligence. If a traveler slips on a piece of orange-peel, which he ought to have seen, in a railway station, or allows his coat to be stolen under his eyes in a carriage, he brings an action against the railway company and wins it. We now demand to be personally conducted through life, all risks to be taken by someone else. After a century or two of this regime we shall all be as helpless as Lord Avebury's ants, who starved almost to death in sight of food because they were used to having it put into their mouths by their slaves.

All this might be right, or it may only be inevitable. But do not let us deceive ourselves. Nature will make us pay for it. Nature takes away any faculty that is not used. She is taking away our natural defenses, and has probably added nothing, since the beginning of the historical period, to our mental powers.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 9.

I FIRST ran across Hi Yackey in the Lewis Hotel at Cherokee, Ia. One might expect to meet a man named Hi Yackey in a hotel in Cherokee, Ia. The name conjures cornshuckings, cattle drives, and silo-fillings. It is distinctly a rural name. A man possessing such a cognomen, you feel, must be a big, hearty fellow with horny hands and a voice roughened by calling pigs in winter time.

My first impression of him was entirely consistent with expectations. Hi Yackey is big and he is hearty. He was dressed in sloppy clothes and looked very much like Clarence Darrow, the Chicago lawyer. He has the same pleasing uncouthness, the same rough diamond sharpness, the same trick of peering from eyebrows carelessly askew, the same sprawly indefiniteness of features. But there is a joviality and liking of mankind about him which Darrow does not suggest. Hi Yackey was in all respects, except one, the perfect picture of a bluff, whole-souled countryman, the sort who calls elderly women "mother" on sight and wiggles his fingers at children whom he meets on trains. There was only one thing wrong with the description. Hi Yackey is a detective.

He is not alone a detective, but the cleverest bank detective in the State of Iowa and one of the best in the United States. Yet, a detective is the last thing you would guess him to be. I had met a great many detectives, but Hi Yackey didn't fit in.

"Mr. Yackey?" I said, to be sure there was no mistake.

"Yep. That's me."

"I wanted to ask you about this murder case—."

"Hold on a minute, now. How's your character? If you ain't on the level I'll find out pretty quick. (Staring for a moment) well h'mph—now what did you want me to tell you?"

What I wanted him to tell me does not matter now. Hi had been working on a murder case in Cherokee, in which a farmer boy had killed his rival for the love of a school teacher. What does matter is the amazingly frank way in which Yackey at once began to discuss the case. We were in his room at the start of the interview but later moved down to the dining room for dinner.

"He's confessed and there ain't a chance of his wiggling on the confession," said Hi, getting my closest attention by poking me in the stomach with a gnarled forefinger. "That boy knows I'm his friend. I'm friends with all the boys I send up. Look here"—he pulled a packet of letters from a pocket of his voluminous coat— "these were written to me by my boys in the pen at Fort Madison. Look at this (opening a letter) you notice he doesn't say Dear Mr. Yackey, he says, 'Dear Hi.' That's what they all call me, Dear Hi. If I were to be tried tomorrow for murder I wouldn't ask a better jury than 12 of the boys I've put in the big house.

The Cherokee Case

"Now take this case here in Cherokee. Do you think I'll let them give this boy the rope? No, sir. The fellow he killed was a louse. I don't want to see this boy hang for removing such an insect from the world. But, come to think of it, I oughtn't to call that dead fellow a louse. He wasn't all bad. I happen to know that he took the rap for a friend in an auto-stealing job and did 20 months at Fort Madison in his friend's place. You see, the friend had a wife and baby and this fellow didn't have anyone. So he took the rap. A man in my business is always running across inside stuff like that which proves that even the worst crooks—

"Say—"

We were walking into the dining room now and on every hand men were calling out, "Hello there, Hi, you ol' son-of-gun" and passing jokes. Hi slapped them on the back and poked them in the stomach as he passed. One man he stopped to make a particular joke with, and called out to him after both had laughed:

"It's a good thing you didn't take this case. I'd sure have rolled you right."

When we were seated at our table Hi explained:

"That man I spoke last to is a lawyer here. He came to me and said: 'Hi, I've been hired to defend this boy and I want the real lowdown. Is he guilty or not?' Well, sir, I told him, 'He's as guilty as hell. You'd better not take the case.' So he didn't. He told the boy's relatives he wanted $5000 cash in hand and they got some other lawyer.

"This detective business is a funny thing for a fellow like me to be in, isn't it?"

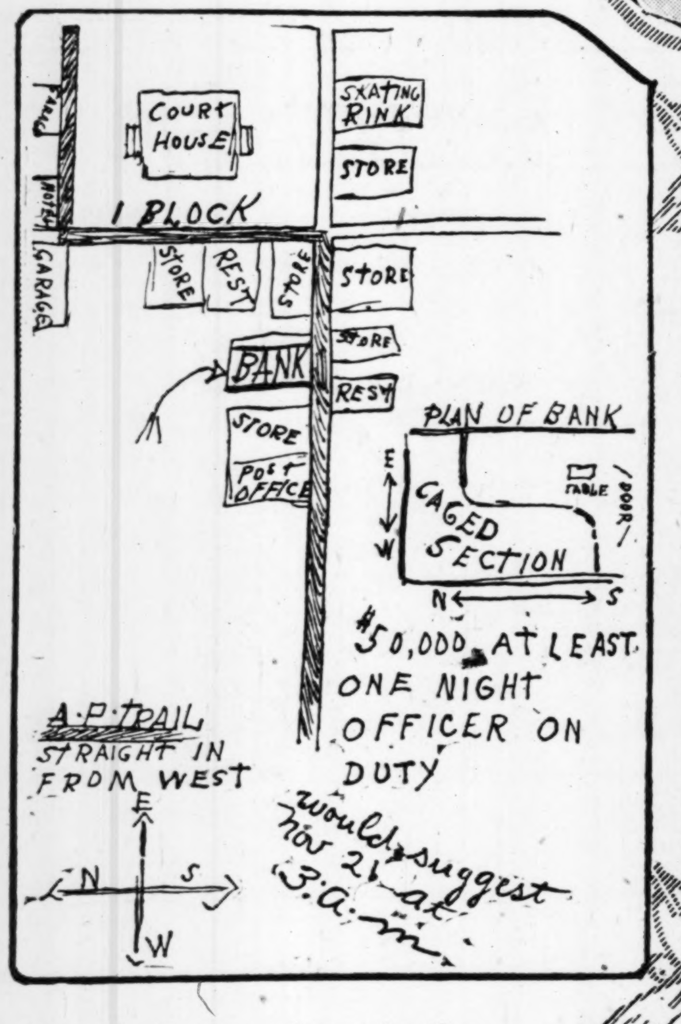
I agreed.

Over the soup he grew more blandly confidential. Murder cases weren't his main line. He was bank dick, attached to the Bureau of Investigation of the State Attorney-General's office at Des Moines. He worked on bank cases mostly, but whenever the authorities in small towns had a murder they usually appealed to the Attorney-General for help. Usually the Attorney-General sent Hi out to get the dope.

"I don't know why I do this job for $250 a month and expenses. I don't need the money. I've got a farm at Harlan, Ia., and I'm well-fixed besides. I've been lots of things. Look here (he showed his broken fingers). I caught professional baseball for Omaha at one time. I've been Circuit Clerk. I've studied law. I've taught school. I've been darn near everything. But I like my present job best. Maybe it's because I'm better at it than I was at the others. A man does like to do what he's good at."

He grinned in that sprawly way of his and hunched over the table.

"Once I sent 27 men to the penitentiary in three months. If you don't believe it look up the records at Des Moines. I've sent seven men to the gallows, and every one of them deserved it. I've been in tight jams, been shot at, did a little shooting myself. And the things I know about crooks in Iowa, say, it would make a book. Look here—."



Facsimile of a map drawn by the spotter employed by bank robbers to plan a robbery in advance. The map gives all information they will need to know, and was found on an apprehended crook.

He indicated a man at the next table.

"See that fellow? He lives here. He's got a good job. Well, he's done time. I know he has because I sent him up. But that's over now. I don't bear him any hard feelings and I don't think he's mad at me about it. Detectives are always running into little stories like that, but I believe in living and let live. I've never hounded a man who is trying to forget his past. Funny thing—"

As to Jimmy Andrews

He was off on another anecdote, which he related between prodigious bites of celery. It had to do with one Jimmy Andrews, now serving 10 years for bank robbery at Fort Madison. It seemed that Jimmy Andrews is not his right name. He is the son of a St. Louis man, according to Yackey.

"But I wouldn't tell you the father's name," said Yackey. "Jimmy is a white guy. I'm fond of Jimmy. He's one of my boys. I've got a letter from him in my pocket right now. His secret is safe with me."

HI YACKEY.

This seemed to remind him of something else. He drew from that capacious pocket where perhaps the loose ends of a dozen men's lives were gathered in scribbly notations on backs of envelopes, a letter containing a bond.

"See this bond? It's for $200 and was stolen from a bank not far from here. When I got into Cherokee the boys who pulled that job knew old Hi Yackey was in town. One of them came in with the bond and said he'd bring in the other $50 that was stolen this evening. I'm waiting for him to show up now. Will he show up? You bet he will. It'll go hard with him if he doesn't. He knows Hi Yackey doesn't fool around for fun."

It was easy to see how those crooks (amateurs they must have been—farmer boys frightened by their first misdeed) knew when Hi Yackey came to town. Everybody knows when Hi Yackey comes to an Iowa town. He walks all over the place. He seems to know everybody. There is nothing secretive about Hi.

After dinner that evening Hi foregathered with some Cherokee friends in the lobby and told them all about the returned bond, the progress of the murder case, and anything else about his business they wished to know.

Now this was very strange behavior for a detective. Usually detectives are enigmatic fellows, who trust no man, and regard the curiosity of casual citizens as an affront to their dark, mysterious trade. But here was Hi Yackey at home on Main street, regaling his friends with "inside stuff" and funny stories. I recall that in the lobby group that evening there were several marveling town boys, a hotel clerk, a Circuit Judge, a Negro porter and two business men. In the midst of them roared Hi, large, expansive, jolly. I remember his face quite clearly as I left him there to catch a train—an old face flushed with laughter, keen eyes atwinkle; rough, blunt and grizzled, and human. Such a character!

His Methods

How did he work? What mysteries had he solved? What dangers had involved him?

. . . .

Weeks later I came to Des Moines to learn more about Hi Yackey. He had arranged to meet me at his home in Harlan, but was called away to Saginaw, Mich., on a bank robbery investigation. Perhaps the story is better coming as it does from friends and the records.

I asked Frank Warner, secretary of the Iowa Bankers' Association, what he regarded as the secret of Yackey's amazing record for clearing up bank robberies.

"He does it by getting confessions," Warner said. "He has an uncanny knack of sitting down with an accused robber and talking him into admission of the truth. Since 1920, if I recall correctly, he has obtained 42 confessions from bank robbers. He has saved the State of Iowa thousands of dollars by forcing suspects to plead guilty, without putting the State to the expense of a trial."

An example:

On Oct. 2, 1920 the bank at Lanesboro, Ia., was held up by two men and robbed of $1000. Hi was sent for and reached town the following evening. Everybody in Lanesboro had heard of him and he went up and down Main street visiting.

"Who was in town that day," he would ask, standing in front of a drug store, or sitting with a group on the curb.

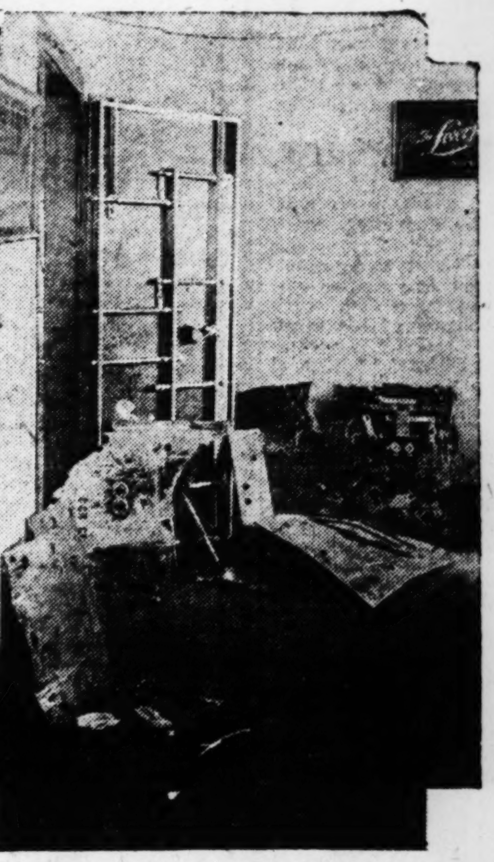
"Well—so-and-so," they'd say.

In one place he learned that a certain farmer boy had been in town that day. In another conversation he was informed that a drifter, young and tough, had also been in town. In another place someone told him he had seen the pair together.

The next morning Hi went out to where the farmer boy was shucking corn.

"I'm Hi Yackey," said the detective. "Go and get that money."

In rural Iowa Hi Yackey is regarded as invincible, a Nemesis from whom none can escape. The farmer boy paled, acknowledged that he had helped the drifter pull the job, told where the money was hid and in two days Hi was able to leave town with both men under arrest and the money restored to the bank.



How the vault in the bank at Maurice, Ia., looked after a gang of safeblowers hit town.

Simple? Well, here is one that was not so simple:

On Aug. 2, 1920, five men robbed the Bank of Granger at Granger, Ia., 15 miles from Des Moines, of $50,000 cash and $225,000 in securities. Yackey reasoned that the gang would lie up in Des Moines until the thing blew over. So he plunged into the city's underworld and learned, it is said, from a jealous woman rival that Dutch Don Carlos, a notorious light o' love, was entertaining one "Nervy" Allen, whose racket was known to be safe jobs. Hi and his co-workers raided the Don Carlos woman's room one night and found Nervy there. In a bureau drawer Hi discovered some registered war savings stamps which had been part of the Granger bank loot. Nervy refused to confess his part in the robbery, so Hi went after the men known to have been Nervy's pals. Soon Hi rounded up Jimmy Andrews, Bud Joyce, Arthur Sandy and Dale Truitt.

With these suspects in jail, Hi started in to see which of them he could "crack" and from him wring a confession. He selected Jimmy Andrews, to whom he talked like a father to a son, pretending that he had a lot more evidence against the gang than he did have.

A Tight Place

Jimmy finally kicked in and implicated the others. He told how the gang had thrown the securities into the Des Moines River, from which they were never recovered, how the money had been split and all other details. Joyce, Truitt and Sandy decided to plead guilty, but Nervy Allen insisted on his innocence and stood trial.

The night before the five desperadoes were to be taken to Adele, Ia., for trial Hi caught them exchanging plain slips of paper in jail. He knew that these slips of paper contained writing, but it was invisible. He knew also that thieves have a method of invisible writing which is easily exposed. The method is to wet one sheet of paper and place a dry sheet on top of it. The writing is done on the dry top sheet and is impressed after the manner of carbon copies on the wet undersheet. When the wet sheet dries the writing disappears, but if it is moistened again it will show up sufficiently to be read. So Hi managed to appropriate one of these notes, unknown to the prisoners, and read it. The note said:

"Everything is fixed to bump Hi off tomorrow."

Or something like that. Even Hi has forgotten the exact words. But he remembers their portent. By some exceedingly quick work among his tipsters in the underworld he learned that Dutch Don Carlos, who was Nervy Allen's woman, had hired gunmen from Kansas City to kill Hi the next day when he took the prisoners to Adele by automobile.

A less courageous man might have exposed the plot, asked for extra guards, and frightened the would-be assassins away. But Hi wanted the gunmen to try to kill him. He said nothing about the plot, but carried through the original plans. His only precaution was to arm himself with two big pistols and a riot gun. With these he sat facing his prisoners as the car left Des Moines. The prisoners thought it over and evidently decided to call off the assassination. It is understood, now, that they signaled in some way to a car which was following Hi's machine and that the gunmen riding in it, fell back. Hi is an expert with a pistol and has been known to hit three telephone poles in succession from a speeding auto.

The above story was related to me by Ross C. Saunders, now chief of organization for the Illinois Bankers' Association who formerly worked with Hi in the Iowa Bureau of Investigation. Saunders still lives in Des Moines and was here on a visit when I arrived.

Hi's Record

"Hi did probably more than any other man in the State to reduce bank robberies and the losses from bank robberies," Saunders said, "during the period from 1920 to 1923. In 1920 Iowa had 56 bank robberies with a total loss of $258,000. Then the Bureau of Investigation was organized by the Governor because an emergency existed. During the next three years the number of robberies declined until in 1923 there were only eight bank jobs, of which but three were successful. The loss amounted to but $2625. That is an amazing reduction."

To further illustrate Hi Yackey's ingenuity and nerve in solving bank robberies, the Pisgah bank case might be cited. The Pisgah Savings Bank at Pisgah, Ia., was robbed by four men Dec. 23, 1921, and about $20,000 worth of bonds were taken. Some time later a young man entered a bank at Council Bluffs and tried to sell a $50 bond. The cashier stalled him off, took the number of the bond and wired the Iowa Bankers' Association. The association, by consulting its list of the bonds stolen from Pisgah, learned that the bond had been stolen from this bank. They told Hi about it and he advised the Council Bluffs bank to buy the bond and not alarm the gang's agent. But let Hi tell it as he related the details to me in Cherokee:

"I got in touch with this fellow and pretended I was in the market for cheap bonds. I told him I didn't care where they came from, just so they were cheap. I pretended I was on the shady side, did some loafing around pool halls and a little drinking with the mob. Pretty soon I convinced the agent that I was 'good people' and he fixed it up with me. The mob was hiding out in Omaha and had the stuff there.

"When we got to Omaha the agent wanted me to ride with him, blindfolded, to the gang's hangout. He didn't exactly trust me. I didn't exactly trust him, either. I figured maybe he had rapped to the fact that I was a dick and was laying to bump me off. But I wanted those bonds and there was nothing to do but be nice and let him blindfold me. He tied a handkerchief around my eyes and we set off. I had a gun in my overcoat pocket, but I figured that if he was going to croak me he'd wait until we got to the dive so as not to mess up the taxicab. I tried to count the blocks as we rattled over crossings and as the car swayed to right or left I'd know we turned.

"But he soon mixed me up and when, finally we stopped, I hadn't an idea where we were. Then I did some rapid thinking. I didn't want the shooting to start with me blindfolded. It was late at night and dark enough anyway, without a handkerchief over your eyes. So I took a chance. I risked angering him and blowing up the whole lay. 'Hell,' I said, 'this handkerchief is too hot.' I pulled it off. It was a natural action and after he squinted at me a moment he concluded that I was 'good people' and we could talk business with the gang.

"So we had a nice confab. I learned where the bonds were and I got good mental pictures of the guys who pulled off the Pisgah job. I arranged with them to buy the bonds later, framed them, and in the first pinch caught Al Flori, D. D. Goodwin and R. G. Beatty. Giles Puryear, the fourth man, got away but we landed him, finally. They are all in Fort Madison now, and I recovered every damn one of those bonds."

The Bankers' Association has sent Yackey to various counties in the State to organize Vigilante Committees of citizens. These are supplied with arms and ammunition and are given instructions on foiling bank robbers should they visit town. In this work the same friendliness which he inspires when trailing robbers has helped him. Citizens tell him things. "His boys" at Fort Madison, to whom he is always sending eatables and cigarettes are his other source of information. It has paid Hi Yackey to be just what he is. His name, by the way, is H. V. Yackey, but if you ever meet him you'll be calling him Hi before very long.

FACTS ON WHO COMPOSED PARTS OF 'MIRACLE' SCORE

Humperdinck Started and Did Most of the Music, Schirmer Finished Work.

Music-lovers who have admired the score provided for "The Miracle" may have wondered what parts were written by Engelbert Humperdinck, composer of "Haensel und Gretel," and what by Friedrich Schirmer, who completed the work after Humperdinck's death.

According to Schirmer, he composed the responses and organ part of the first act up to the entrance of the orchestra. The remainder of the act was written by Humperdinck. Schirmer composed the entire second act, of six scenes, with the exception of the waltz at the banquet of the Robber Count and the music for the fatal struggle between the Prince and the Emperor. These were written by Humperdinck. Einar Nilson, one of the musical directors, wrote the "De Profundis" for chorus which comes before the coronation scene. Humperdinck composed all the music for the third act.

Schirmer did much of the orchestration of Humperdinck's score. He was a pupil of Humperdinck and Saint-Saens, and studied at the conservatories of Leipzig and Cologne, and the Royal Academy of Arts in Berlin. He became a professor of composition and piano at the Koenigsberg Conservatory, and was violoncellist in the Koenigsberg String Quartet. At the Berlin Academy, between 1909 and 1911, he carried off the Schumann and Mendelssohn prizes, and the Rome prize of the Meyerbeer celebration in 1910.

He is the composer of a symphony, two symphonic poems, two suites for orchestra, an overture, a string quartet, a sextet for wind instruments, sonatas for violin and piano, clarinet and piano and violoncello and piano; many choral works and songs, two operas and two melodramas. New York has heard performances of his music for "The Sunken Bell," "Loves of Lulu," "William Tell," "Bridge of Distances" and "Freizeit."

Society Making Preparations For Its Annual Flight to Winter Resorts and Europe

Debutantes Especially Anxious to Escape Ennui of Post-Holiday Season in City — Miss Eugenia Edmunds to Sail Feb. 13 for Bermuda and Others Will Make Mediterranean Cruise.

THE spirit of ennui, most prevalent during the immediate post-holiday season, pervades the ranks of the socially prominent, with the result that plans and reservations are being made for their annual flight to winter resorts in an attempt to find diversion.

The debutantes especially, whose days and nights since October have been crowded with a continuous round of parties, are becoming anxious for the time for departure. Most of this group will leave in February. Miss Josephine Bates to New York and Washington to visit friends; Miss Marion Stoner to visit Miss Rosamond Reed, in the latter city, and later in Palm Beach and Miss Henrietta Hadley to resume her studies at Smith College, where she will be graduated in June. Miss Aileen Lonsdale will go to Atlanta, Ga., for a second visit this season to her grandmother, Mrs. George L. Block will sail Jan. 23 for Genoa to join their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Scott, who have been abroad some time. Mr. and Mrs. Max Kotany plan a Mediterranean cruise in February, as do Mr. and Mrs. Porter Tirrill, who leave this month, and Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Hill, who sailed yesterday. Lady Diana and Mother Guests at Social Functions

Elaborate Luncheon at Woman's Club in Honor of "Miracle" Cast Is Followed by Informal Reception.

THE Duchess of Rutland and her daughter, Lady Diana Manners, who plays alternately the roles of the Madonna and the Nun in "The Miracle," have been much entertained by St. Louis society during the last two weeks. One of the delightful parties in their honor was a luncheon at the St. Louis Woman's Club, Thursday afternoon.

The dining room of the clubhouse presented an attractive appearance as the honor guests, headed by the Duchess on the arm of Mrs. Alexander N. De Menil, followed by Lady Diana, with Mrs. Thomas Crane Young, entered, while more than 200 members, with their guests arose from their chairs in greeting, and remained standing until the Duchess was seated. Tall green tapers in silver holders lighted each of the many small tables, and at a special long table, where sat her grace and her ladyship with other members of "The Miracle" cast and officers of the club, the candelabrum were interspersed with huge bowls of roses and gift corsages of orchids and lilies of the valley.

The Duchess of Rutland, gowned simply in black, sat at Mrs. De Menil's right and next to Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe, chairman of the Entertainment Committee. Lady Diana was placed between Mrs. De Menil and Mrs. Young. Others at the table were Mrs. Elizabeth Schirmer of "The Miracle" cast and Mrs. Mary B. Pollard.

Lady Diana was charming in an afternoon gown of tan satin-backed crepe in a modified redingote style with satin slippers and stock-

Fifty of the buds and their escorts were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin P. Hilts last night at the St. Louis Country Club, where they gave a dinner dance in honor of Miss Marion Stoner.

Mrs. William Julius Polk will be hostess at a farewell luncheon at the same club Jan. 13, honoring Miss Juliet Carptenter of Fortress Monroe, Va., who made her formal bow to St. Louis society this season. On Jan. 15, just prior to sailing for Europe with her daughter, Miss Roccena, Mrs. Lewis Warrington Baldwin will be hostess at luncheon at her home, 23 Westmoreland place, complimenting Miss Aileen Lonsdale and Miss Josephine Bates. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright will have a table at the Country Club dinner dance for Miss Agnes Benoist, and Mrs. Robert Kaiser will entertain another group honoring Miss Josephine Bates.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Isabel Aloe, one of the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Aloe of 36 Kingsbury place, to Howard F. Baer of Charleston, W. Va., was made at a reception given at the Aloe residence Monday evening Jan. 4, in celebration of the sixth wedding anniversary of Miss Aloe's sister, Mrs. Edmund Marx, Jr. Two hundred guests were present.

Brightly colored balloons to which were attached the announcement cards were wafted about the rooms.

Miss Aloe was graduated from Smith College with the class of last June. Mr. Baer was graduated from Princeton in 1924. The wedding will be solemnized in June.

Announcement was made Friday of the engagement of Miss Lucille Stocke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Stocke of 6400 Cecil avenue, and Harry W. Kroeger, son of Mrs. Henry J. Kroeger of the Worthington apartments.

The news was told at an informal tea given by Mrs. Stocke for about 20 of her daughter's friends. During a vocal solo by Miss Hilda Hageman, Jane Elizabeth Stocke, a sister of the prospective bride presented each guest with a bunch of violets, to which the announcements were fastened.

Miss Stocke is a graduate of Mary Institute and attended Vassar College. She is now a senior in the law school of Washington University, and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Beta Pi, a legal sorority, and a number of honorary societies.

Mr. Kroeger took his A. B. degree at Washington University, later attending Harvard University and the law school at Washington University. He was graduated at the latter university in 1922 and received his L. L. M. at Columbia University in New York.

Misses Marjorie Lang and Miss Anite Mueller, a cousin of Miss Stocke, served at the party Friday. The wedding plans have not been announced.

Miss Marie Hagnauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson W. Hagnauer of 6633 Kingsbury place, and Edmund A. Grayson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edmund Grayson of 4374 McPherson avenue, were married, Jan. 4, at the Second Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor officiated.

The bride was married in her traveling suit of dark blue charmeen, and a hat of black satin. Her corsage was of orchids and lillies of the valley. Miss Dorothy Aline Dick was maid of honor and wore a gown of blue and ecru romaine crepe with a hat of the same shades. She carried butterfly roses. Miss Elinor Luedinghaus was bridesmaid and wore a cocoa colored romaine crepe costume, trimmed in the same material in darker brown. Her hat was of the same shade as her gown. Mr. Grayson had as his best man Wayman Whittemore, and Hamilton Handlan as groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Grayson are spending their honeymoon in Chicago.

St. Louis friends will be interested in the marriage of Miss Noel Rottman and Mr. Warren Fromme, which took place during the holidays, in Los Angeles, Cal. The bride, who is a niece of Mrs. Alfred Buschman of Bompart avenue, Webster Groves, was a resident of St. Louis until her removal to California two years ago. She attended the University of California. Mr. Fromme formerly resided in New York and is a graduate of Columbia University. Mr. and Mrs. Fromme will make their home in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Guynn of 5966 De Giverville avenue announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marie Guynn, and Joseph D. Murnane at a bridge luncheon, Jan. 2. The following were present: Misses Melba MacPheesel, Pearl Stone, Helen D. Mul-

Shakspeare Group Has Novel Dinner

Guests Appear in Shakspearean Costumes and Hold Grand March of Characters.

A novel entertainment was given by the Tercentenary Shakspeare Society at Hotel Chase Wednesday. The roof garden was transformed into an Elizabethan banquet hall, with one long table extending almost its entire length, lighted by dozens of candles and seating 120 guests, most of them in Shakspearean costume. Following the banquet there was a grand march of Shakspeare characters, led by Lord and Lady Capulet, impersonated by John H. Gundlach and Mrs. Harry E. Wagoner, president of the society. Appropriate invitations, as follows, had been sent by the organization:

"Tonight I hold an old accustomed feast,
Whereto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you among the store.
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.
At my poor house look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparell'd April on the heel
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female buds shall you this night
Inherit at my house. Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona; find those persons out
Whose names are written there, and to them say,
My house and welcome on their pleasure stay."
Lord and Lady Capulet.

The march ended in an old-fashioned dance, after which Sir Rosenthal, member of the Shakspeare Round Table, read his original "Twelfth Night Fantasy," which was followed by general dancing, interspersed with various entertainment features. Charles Dillon, a young Shakspearean actor, read the "Seven Ages of Man" and "Hamlet's Soliloquy." Two scenes from "Twelfth Night," directed by Harry McClain of the Morse School of Expression, were given by Hazel Baare as Viola and Ruth Downing Wyant as Olivia.

Much laughter was brought forth by the "Twelfth Night" scene in which Sir Toby Belch was portrayed by Elizabeth Nipp, Sir Andrew Aguecheek by Katherine Cravens, the Fool by Dorothy Fry, Malvolio by Frances Dewey and Maria by Margaret Sherman. There was a trumpeter, Van Cleave Loewe, and a herald, John Sanford McCauley, to call for order and announce each event. The last number of the entertainment was fancy dancing of today and yesterday by Mrs. Boehmer and her son, Junior Boehmer. Mrs. Laurent M. Tully and Mrs. A. H. Mattingly composed the program committee. A noticeable impersonation was that of Miss Wilmine Pauline Trenchery, who as Lady Macbeth carried the little lantern once borne by the incomparable Modjeska. The table decorations were the gift of an absent member, Mrs. C. K. Reifsnider.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France, Jan. 2.—The year-end holidays have witnessed the arrival of a great wave of transatlantic visitors on the Continent, the last week-end alone seeing more than 3000 Americans file thorugh the gates of the Gare Saint-Lazare in Paris, a record number for any one week-end during a winter season.

With the Court of Saint James in mourning, the holiday gaiety in London was reduced, but the New Year's balls at the Claridge and Savoy hotels were well attended and notable for the number of American hostesses.

American festivities in Berlin centered at the Hotel Adlon.

In Paris, with its scores of American organizations and with no cause for restraint, the holidays were a fitting climax to an unusually brilliant season.

The official closing of the Holy Year jubilee was, of course, the central feature of the yuletide in Rome. Hundreds of Americans celebrated a "green" Christmas on the Riviera and in Sicily and as usual many flocked to Cairo for the celebrations there.

The last of the second series of Wednesday Morning musicales at the American Women's Club of Paris took place last week with a large attendance. Mrs. Berry Wall, vice president and chairman of music for the club, who organized the concerts and to whom much credit is due for their success, entertained at luncheon for 12 after the concert, her guests including Signorina Romano Avezzana, daughter of the Italian Ambassador to France, whose mother was Miss Jacqueline Louise Taylor of St. Louis, and Mrs. Nelson Dean Jay, formerly Anne Augustine of St. Louis.

Mrs. Walter S. Humphrey of St. Louis, who has been traveling in Central and Southern Europe, was a recent visitor to Vienna, where she was a guest of the Hotel Bristol.

All the arts and several branches of criticism were represented at a Latin Quarter gathering last week at the home of Kathleen Cannell. Among the sculptors and painters present was Roy Sheldon, the St. Louis sculptor, who has a studio in Paris.

Miss Emily Welch told Christmas stories and Miss Lucy Kavanaugh Peery of St. Joseph, Mo., sang Christmas carols at the last meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Association, held in the salons of the American Women's Club of Paris. Miss Peery is residing temporarily in Paris while studying voice. She attended the American Conservatory of Music at Fontainebleau last summer.

Mrs. Cora Baker Chouteau of St. Louis, who passes much of her time on the Continent, has left her apartment in Neuilly-sur-Seine, near Paris, for the Riviera, where she will spend the late winter season. At present Mrs. Chouteau is in Nice, where she is a guest of the Hotel Westminster.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLure Clark and daughter, Miss Veany Denmar Clark, were among the Missourians who celebrated Christmas at Shepheard's Hotel, in Cairo. The Clarks recently completed an extended tour of the continent and will pass several weeks in Northern Africa and Egypt.

Lady Peek, formerly Miss Edwine Thornburgh of St. Louis, was among the Americans who assisted at the St. Andrew's day ball in London.

Arthur D. Bond of Perryville, Mo., a student at Christ Church, Oxford, England, passed the Christmas holidays in Paris, staying at the Hotel Orleans. He graduated from the University of Missouri in 1925, with the degree of bachelor of arts. He was a recent caller at the Paris branch of the American University Union.

MISS KATHERINE SIPPLE.
She will depart in February for Poland Springs, Me., for the winter sports, and later will visit in Palm Beach.

GALSWORTHY'S OPINION OF FAMOUS WRITERS

Calls Dickens "Artless," in Address Before Ango-Sweden Society in London.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Before sailing for America, John Galsworthy, whose new play, "Old English," is being acted in that country by George Arliss, gave his opinion of several famous writers in an address before the Anglo-Sweden Society. The Morning Post summarized these briefly:

Charles Dickens—Dickens was an artless writer, but he was a born teller of a tale, with the imaginative zest of a schoolboy at a feast. He lashed officialdom and hypocrisy and the abuse of power. Thackeray had some knowledge of art, but Dickens identified it with foreigners, and showed it the backdoor. "Beyond dispute, Dickens is to me the greatest of English novelists, a triumph of exuberant genius. Many of the creatures of his fancy are our bosom and undying friends."

Turgenieff—As supreme in the art of the novel as Dickens was artless. He was the finest natural poet who ever wrote novels. Russia did not like him—perhaps because he told the truth...... He was less of a poet in his poetry than in his novels. The English novel has always been inclined to self-indulgence; it often goes to bed drunk. Turgenieff is too balanced, too essentially poetic, for a shingled age in Oxford bags.

Guy de Maupassant—The glory of de Maupassant was crowded into the space of about 12 years....His full nature, to my thinking, can only be appraised by a reading of his novels. In the essentials of style, economy of words, and clarity of expression he is the prince of teachers. In England he was once looked upon as a ferocious realist. He is now regarded as a rosy-fingered and pinafored romanticist, who made many and many a capture of that shy bird, beauty.

Tolstoy—A fascinating puzzle. So singular a combination of the artist and the reformer is not elsewhere to be found. Yet his methods persisted. You can find traces in "Anna Karinina" of that great work "War and Peace." His method was formless and accumulative. "War and Peace" is six times the length of the modern novel, yet its interest never flags.

Joseph Conrad—The bewildering color and imagery of his earlier days toned down afterward to a more sober texture. He was essentially a colorist and essentially a raconteur...... No novelist has so touched the wonder of the sea, save, perhaps, Pierre Loti in "Pecheur d'Islande."

Anatole France—His whip was a scourge—perhaps the most delicate and effective whip that ever was lashed. His victims do not know that he has killed them. Their ghosts still read his books and call him "Maitre." His chaste mind was really against cranks and superstitions. Born too late or too early to be burnt or beheaded, he had to be satisfied with excommunication.

From his six subjects, three of them artists and three of them satirists, Galsworthy drew a common virtue. All were humanists: none had anything of the literary popinjay about him; nor were they theorists.

PARIS BRAZIERS OUT OF DATE

Cafe Terraces Now Heated by Series of Lamps.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Braziers, which for years have been part of the winter equipment of every cafe terrace on Paris boulevards, are threatened with extinction. A new device which makes it possible to sip one's coffee or chocolate in comfort while the throngs passing to and fro are huddled in wraps and furs, has made its appearance.

It is a small petrol lamp whose vaporized essence burns with a red glow about the size of an ordinary incandescent mantle. Half a dozen of these are hung on the edge of the blind which roofs the terrace and half a dozen more are hung in front of the cafe itself. The space between them is comfortably warmed, and one reflects that even if the lamps lack the romantic association of the old braziers they cast a cheery glow.

TRAGEDY FOR ELLEN KEY

Swedish Author's Companion Missing: May Have Killed Self.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 15.—Ellen Key, Swedish pioneer in the modern field of sex literature, is having her closing years darkened by a domestic tragedy. When she was at her prime she was visited by an enthusiastic Swedish woman named Malin Blomsterberg. Hearing that Ellen Key wanted a cook, the woman begged to be allowed to serve in that or any other capacity. It was enough for her to be near her great leader. So she became Ellen Key's housekeeper, companion and secretary. The two grew old together at Strand, a country place in Southern Sweden.

Recently Malin Blomsterberg developed a marked melancholy and declared that life had become insupportable. One day recently she disappeared and despite constant searches she has not been found. It is generally assumed that she has committed suicide.

FILIPINOS ARE LOSING LAND OF FOREFATHERS

Economic Laws Force Natives to Relniquish Farms to Become Wage Earners.

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 5.—Economic laws are seriously interfering with Philippine politics opposed to letting agricultural corporations have more than 2500 acres each for either pineapples or rubber, or for sugar, cocoanuts or hemp, which prevents the incoming of farm capital and the opening and developing of the vast stretches of jungle, now the habitat of nomadic savages.

A study of the situation by the American Chamber of Commerce, through its own investigations and those of Government bureaus, shows that the peasantry is leaving the rural districts and migrating to the cities. Men whose ancestors have been small but independent freeholders, move to town and become dependent wage earners in the few industries that have been successfully established.

Under natural circumstances these men would prefer farming to any other occupation, and they all desire to own land, which the Philippine policy toward the United States prevents.

In essence the problem is a very simple one. Better sanitation throughout the Philippines has resulted in rapidly increased population in all the rural districts. In the old neighborhoods, labor has become too abundant; and in the case of freeholdings, families have become too large to warrant further division of the fields, already small.

When peasants inherit they inherit so little that they leave it in the communal family property. They themselves go off to the nearest port, there to take jobs as longshoremen or at whatever offers. Thousands go to Hawaii, where they can save enough from wages to return to the Philippines in four or five years and buy a piece of land of their own, but this is the only genuine opportunity open to them to remain farmers, as virtually no new plantations are being opened in the islands.

Without money and left wholly dependent on themselves, they cannot of course tackle the jungle, where if they were not killed they would hover on the verge of starvation until discouragement drove they away from their homesteads. One very great discouragement is that the jungle is largely unsurveyed, and titles of homesteaders have to be proved in court. By honest or dishonest methods the peasant may lose his holding after clearing it and planting it during several years. This he knows only too well.

There are no roads in the jungle, only paths made by wild animals and equally wild men. Going there penniless, the peasant cannot build roads; and when he has luck enough even to produce a small crop he cannot sell it because he cannot get it out to market. On the other hand, he is successful in homesteading near plantations. The plantation builds roads or has a launch service on the rivers. It has a store, where supplies may be bought with or without money, and products may be sold. It has guards if these are necessary:! at any rate it has a settled community which the nomad fears and respects.

But there are not enough of such communities to protect more than a small fraction of the number of young peasants who must find the means of livelihood, so population flows away from the land and into the towns. Each year independence for a larger and larger number of families ends. Once the peasants are away from the land their inclination is to sell it."

The development of a middle class engaging in industries, financed by stock and bond investments, is measured of course by the prior development of agriculture. As this is practically static, so is industry. The surplus of wealth in the occasional family here and there does not therefore find investment in stocks and bonds as it would in a country where normal conditions prevailed, so it is turned into land—the land the peasants have abandoned because the sons went off to town. In this way large estates accumulate, and presently agrarian troubles arise.

Meantime there is a great demand all over the world for Philippine products and other products that might be grown here. Manila hemp, cocoanuts (perhaps the best farm crop in the world), tobacco, sugar, coffee, spices, gums and resins (from the forests), rubber, pineapples and bananas and citrus fruits. Even silk can be grown—more advantageously than in China or Japan.

Japanese and Chinese take full advantage of the situation, a study of immigration and migration shows. Feudal administration is not unfamiliar to the Japanese. Though one of their companies can get no more land than an American or native company, they hold much larger estates by trust agreements among themselves. They are learning how profitable in one rich region, Davao Province. The yare learning how profitable Philippine agriculture is, and they employ on their plantations their own people, not Filipinos to any considerable extent. By these devious ways in which economic laws are working in spite of political opposition, the Filipino is losing his country. A chapter like one in the history of ancient Egypt is being written.

WOMEN'S HATS HIGH IN BACK

Paris Milliners Introduce New Line.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Paris milliners have introduced a new and rakish line for the 1926 modes that threaten the "cloche" hat, which reigned in 1925, obsolete. The new line places the highest point of the hat always aft, and hats that cannot get their backs up are fading from the fashion plates.

The new model seems to be a hybrid between a round sugar-loaf and a square bucket, made of silk, felt or velour. The wearer imparts her personality to the front by inserting wrinkles or creases after the manner of a man's hat, but the back must present a sheer drop from the peak, which may be anywhere from five to 12 inches high, to the neatly barbered nape of the neck.

The St. Louis University Conclave, made up of representatives from all departments of the school, announced this week that the annual prom will be held Feb. 9. A feature of this year's formal affair will be the election of a queen and the court of honor. Quite a bit of mystery is thrown about the identity of the queen, as no information is available. A cautious investigation of the minutes of a recent conclave meeting showed that one girl will be nominated by each of the affiliated schools of the university and one girl will be nominated as well from each department of the university.

So far Fontbonne, Webster College and Visitation are the only girl colleges to begin nomination and election. Two girls will be nominated from each of the law and commerce and Finance schools to represent the night and day classes respectively. The medical, dental and arts and science departments will each be permitted to name one fair candidate. Out of this group the senior classes of each department or school will elect a queen.

News of Interest In the Capital

Vice-President and Mrs. Dawes Entertain at Home and President Gives State Reception.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The Vice President and Mrs. Dawes gave their first official entertainment tonight when they were "at home" in honor of the members of the diplomatic corps and their families and many other social celebrities in addition.

The Dawes home in fashionable Northwest Washington has been beautifully furnished and it is one of the most attractive mansions in the capital. Assisting Mrs. Dawes at the tea tables were a number of Senators' wives, including Mrs. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey; Mrs. George H. Williams of Missouri and Mrs. William M. Butler of Massachusetts. Mrs. Dawes was a picturesque figure in gray satin and silver lace. Speaker and Mrs. Longworth were among the first to be received by the Vice President and Mrs. Dawes and on the tea tables were lovely White House roses sent by Mrs. Coolidge.

Washington is now recovering from a round of gayeties incident to the holiday season which culminated in the New Year's receptions, the principal ones, of course, being those at the White House and the homes of the Cabinet officers.

On Thursday night, President and Mrs. Coolidge gave the second of the series of brilliant receptions in honor of the Judiciary of the United States. Leading the long line of legal luminarier was the Chief Justice of the United States, former President William H. Taft, with Mrs. Taft on his arm. Not only the members of the Supreme Court were present, but many eminent jurists from other cities.

The Presiden and Mrs. Coolidge received alone, although Attorney-General Sargent made many of the introductions in person.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis gave a dinner tonight for Major-General and Mrs. John L. Hines and Major-General and Mrs. Dennis E. Nolan. In the afternoon they occupied a box at the Fort Meyer Exhibition Ride for the Army Relief Fund. Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant also was among the guests. After the ride, the Secretary and Mrs. Davis received the guests at the tea which followed it.

Miss Dorothy Shea of Portland, Ore., who has been the guest of Miss Barbara Stanfield, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Robert Nelson

NEW WATER COMPANY FOR ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Merger of West St. Louis Water and Light and Pipe Line Concerns Authorized.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 9.—Merger of the West St. Louis Water and Light Co., a subsidiary of the West St. Louis Pipe Line Co., in a new company to be known as the St. Louis County Water Co., was authorized yesterday by the State Public Service Commission. The new company was authorized to take over the property of the water company at $1,050,000 and to issue 14,000 shares of its preferred stock to stockholders of the West St. Louis Water and Light Co. The new concern was authorized to acquire the property of the pipe line company for $310,000.

The order also authorized the new company to issue $2,800,000 in bonds, due Dec. 1, 1945, and bearing five and one-half per cent interest. Proceeds of the bond issue are to be used to retire $1,126,125 of outstanding bonds of the West St. Louis Water and Light Co. and to pay the purchase price of the water company property and the pipe line company property.

Franchises Are Transferred.

Franchises of the old companies are transferred to the new company, and the latter was granted a certificate of convenience and necessity by the commission to operate the properties.

Commissioner Dudley M. Calfee wrote a dissenting report, stating that while the reorganization was intended to give the water company a new financial structure that would enable it to obtain funds for improvements and extensions, it also provided for getting rid of $400,000 in outstanding preferred stock, which because of unusual preferences and priorities was considered an obstacle to adequate financing. The present water company has outstanding $1,000,000 in common stock and the $400,000 in preferred.

The scheme of reorganization, Calfee said, provided that each stockholder, common and preferred, was to receive $75 in cash for each share of the old stock and in addition one share of preferred stock in the new corporation and the right to purchase new common stock at a fixed price.

Nature of Cash Dividend.

"The aggregate amount of this cash to be distributed to the stockholders of the water and light company is $1,050,000," Calfee wrote. "As I view it this is simply in the nature of a cash dividend. According to the evidence the company has a surplus of this amount, or possibly a little more, not in cash but represented by property of the corporation. The new company is authorized to make a bond issue of $2,800,000, and out of the proceeds the above mentioned cash dividend of $1,050,000 is to be paid.

"The transaction is justified on the ground that these stockholders who are to receive this cash dividend have allowed the earnings of the company to accumulate and are now entitled to withdraw such earnings," Calfee continued. "If the company had a cash surplus on hand out of which to make this distribution, it would present a different question. But the surplus is in property and I seriously doubt the right of the company to mortgage its property for this purpose.

Doubts Soundness of Scheme.

"Neither can I se that the public good will be promoted or served by the dividend or distribution of money to the stockholders, all, or the greater part thereof, out of the proceeds of the new bond issue to be authorized. I do not believe that the withdrawal of $1,000,000 from the company with a corresponding increase of its bonded indebtedness, will either strengthen its credit or enable it to more easily procure additional funds for needed extensions and improvements. Rather, it seems to me, it will tend to produce an opposite result.

"This case, in form, is a buy-and-sell proposition, and it may posibly be that, technically, this obviates the objections I have raised, but I am inclined to adhere to the view that it is both the right and duty of this commission to look behind the form and shadow and consider the reality and substance of the matter."

INSIDE STORY OF AMAZING CAREER OF GEORGE REMUS, MILLIONAIRE BOOTLEGGER

Disaster Came to Operators of Death Valley Farm When "Tip" Failed to Arrive, but Prohibition Officers Did

RUM RUNNERS "SQUEAL" WHEN CAUGHT BY AGENTS WHO COULD NOT BE BRIBED

Remus Himself Had Information of Strange Investigators in Town, but Thought Farm Had Been Cleared of Contraband for Sunday—Mrs. Remus Kept Husband From Heading Relief Attack.

PRECEDING installments have told how George Remus bought up distilleries, warehouses and whisky certificates in an ambition to corner the bonded whisky supply of the country, and how, under permits obtained through fraud, bribery and forgery, he withdrew and sold one-seventh of the bonded whisky in the United States. The establishment of Death Valley Farm, greatest of the great distribution centers, Remus' partnership with the clear-headed George Conners, the lurid exploits of the rum-runners, Remus' story of his attempt to buy protection from a Cabinet official through Jesse Smith, the licensed fleet of whisky trucks, the corruption of Federal, State and city officers, have all been described.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1926, Pulitzer Publishing Co.—Post-Dispatch).

CINCINNATI, Jan. 9.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

REMUS, conceiving himself protected all the way from the policemen on the beat to the President's Cabinet, now carried on his vast business with all the bustling indifference of any large industrial concern. There were the large offices, with the customary complement of clerks, stenographers, traffic men and bookkeepers. There were the numerous daily bank deposits. There was that darling of the American business world—the "conference." There were trips to New York and Washington, deals to be closed, attorneys to be consulted, contracts to be signed.

Under all this administrative finery and opulence lay the real "works" of the organization; namely, the great distributing depots with their hard-boiled crews and rum-running gangs, and the force of expert distillery milkers. From Remus down to the meanest bottle-wrapper, it seemed impossible that this grand edifice could come toppling in ruins, to bury them all beneath it.

"We never found but two men hat we couldn't buy," said Remus. "One of them was a Federal en orcement agent. At first we tried o put him on our payroll, and inally we offered him $100,000 nerely to quit his job. It would ave been worth that much to us, ecause we knew we could get a nan appointed in his place who vould listen to reason. But he urned us down—this poor devil, naking about $200 a month, urned down a fortune! The nited States ought to erect a onument to him, if only as an ample to the big grafters in ashington.

"The other man was Burt Mor an, Federal prohibition director Indiana, who sent us all to rison. He could have had any hing he wanted, up to a quarter a million. He wouldn't listen the proposition. Aside from hose two, I never failed to line up y man that I wanted. I went the theory that every man has price, and I could afford to y it.'" nner "Squeals" to Get Out of Jail.

Nevertheless, the day of reckon g was close at hand.

About the middle of October, 21, Nathan J. Goldman, who had en engaged in running whisky m Death Valley into Indianapo called for a load. It came to 400. He lacked $250 of having e full amount in cash, so Con took his check for the bal e. Going into Indianapolis the lowing day, Goldman was ar ed by prohibition agents under rge W. Winkler, chief of the anapolis group. Car and li r were confiscated and Gold was held for possessing and porting.

n his dire distress, however, he not forget to stop payment on check. It was a matter of ging a little from the wreck.

oldman pleaded guilty, was $500 and sentenced to 90 in jail. When they had suf d him to meditate in solitude a few days, Winkler and Burt organ, the Federal Prohibition ctor for Indiana, called upon They suggested something t be done toward shortening ail sentence if Goldman would real frank about where he got liquor. Feeling that no fate d be so bad as 90 days in the County Jail, Goldman

He made a thorough job of it. He not only gave the location of Death Valley, but told that it was operated by Conners and Gehrum, and that they obtained their supplies from Remus. Goldman had made many trips there and was thoroughly familiar with the stocking and operation of the depot. He had often seen Remus there. All this he told, with visions of escape from the hamburger and cold potatoes of the Marion County Jail.

Morgan and Winkler were as dry as the State in which they operated. They had the Indiana idea about enforcing the Volstead act. They had heard rumors about Death Valley and Remus, and although it wasn't in their territory, it interested them. In fact, it interested them so much that they quietly brought Goldman down to Cincinnati and had him show them out Queen City avenue, and point out Death Valley. Then they as quietly returned to Indianapolis.

Another Thorough Job of "Squealing."

But another sleuth had been on the trail of Remus for many months. This was Gustav J. Simons, an enforcement agent from Illinois. As early as June, 1921, he had traced some of the withdrawals from Remus' distilleries, and had been trying to find some of the wholesale drug companies to which the whisky supposedly had gone. They had been exceedingly hard to find—although, from the amount of whisky they were credited with receiving, it should have been the easiest matter in the world to locate them, if only by the aroma. He looked all over New York without success.

Two days after Goldman made his peace with Morgan and Winkler, two runners employed by a Chicago saloon to run liquor from Death Valley turned their Winton roadster over near Indianapolis, and it burned up. They returned to Chicago, got another car, and came to Cincinnati for their load. On the return trip, between Hammond and Chicago, they were arrested by Simons, who was watching the Cincinnati-Chicago road for just such tourists. Prohibition agents told them they might be allowed to go free and recover their new car, if they would tell where they got the whisky.

Once again the pressure of circumstances was too much for loyal-code and told. They told about Conners, Gehrum and Remus. They even drew a map of Death Valley, described the system of guards, and told of the danger and the traps laid for attackers. It was a good, robust job of "squealing." A few days later Simons arrested another automobilist passing through Hammond. This was Howard H. Hughes of Chicago, and he had a case of Old Dearborn in his car, which he said he had purchased at "Johnny's place," on the outskirts of Cincinnati.

About this time Morgan of Indiana and Simons of Illinois became aware of a common purpose, namely, to raid this place called Death Valley, at Cincinnati, and to get the goods on the men named Remus, Conners and Gehrum. So they got together and laid their plans. They did not take the prohibition officials of Ohio into their confidence.

Outside Agents Visit Death Valley.

Hughes was arrested on Oct. 18 and made his sworn statement to Simons on the following day. Simons communicated his information to Morgan, at Indianapolis, and proceeded immediately to Cincinnati. He spent a day scouting around the neighborhood of Death Valley farm, and then wired Morgan to come on with his men. They arrived early on the morning of Oct. 23, Sunday. In the party were W. O. Holman, an enforcement agent from Indianapolis; Dan Moore, group chief at Bedford, Ind.; Morgan and Winkler.

After a conference at the Sinton Hotel, they telephoned Robert E. Flora, chief enforcement agent at Cincinnati, and asked him to meet them at the hotel at 11 o'clock, but made no explanation of their presence. Then they drove out to Death Valley and had a look around, but did not make themselves conspicuous. They made no move to enter the place.

They met Flora at the hotel at 11 o'clock, told him they intended to raid Death Valley and asked him to get hold of United States Commissioner Gregory, to issue a search warrant. It was necessary to have Flora, because the men from Indiana and Illinois had no authority to serve the warrant. Being Sunday, Gregory was at home, and he was called downtown by telephone. The warrant was issued to Flora. None of them knew how to spell Gehrum's name. In the warrant it was spelled "Gerum." The party then proceeded in autobiles immediately to Death Valley, arriving there shortly after noon. Let Simons tell the story:

morning, I noticed quite a little activity. There was a little portable cottage on wheels near the entrance, and one man was walking back and forth between this cottage and the buildings. He seemed to be a lookout. I saw six or seven automobiles drawn up between the house and barns and several men moving about.

"When we got out there in the afternoon we drove right up to the house without interference. Flora and I went to the door and knocked. There were several men sitting around a table, which contained a quart bottle of Old Dearborn whisky, with the Squibbs label on it, and several glasses. They were playing cards. Flora introduced us as Government men, and said he had a warrant to search the place. He asked who was in charge, and one of them said the man in charge was not there. When Flora told who we were, a big fat man (Dater) jumped out of the window and ran up the hill toward the road, one of our men following him. Halfway up the hill the fat man threw away an automatic pistol and surrendered.

"Just then a man whom I afterwards learned was George Gillenbeck (one of Conners' men) came in from a back room and said he was in charge. Flora read the warrant to him, and we started to search the premises. Moore and I took the barn. In the east end of it we found a bottling plant, and three tubs they used to soak the labels off bottles. There were a lot of labels and corks in one of the tubs. There we found 12 barrels of liquor.

'In another stall we found a barrel containing about three gallons of alcohol and about 3000 newspapers tied in bundles. (Conners has told how the bottles were wrapped in newspapers before being packed in the runners' cars). We looked through the hayloft, but didn't find anything there. But we found a cellar under the floor, and in it two 400-gallon casks of wine and several bottles of vermuth. (Conners has described this secret storage cellar).

"Then we went to the chicken house and there found 20 or 30 bags containing whisky, gin and champagne. During this time, Morgan, Holman and Winkler were searching the house. They found several jugs of wine, some beading and coloring liquid, and several bottles of Concord wine."

Spelling Corrected in Search Warrant.

While the search was going on, Flora remained with the men found in the front room. They men who had just stepped in to play cards.

From one of them Flora ascertained the correct spelling of Gehrum's name. He corrected it in the search warrant, and this was one of the causes on which the search warrant was later declared illegal by the trial Judge.

"While I was outside guarding the stuff we had seized," said Simons, "two men drove up in an automobile."

At this juncture let Conners take up the recital of what happened:

"I had made it a practice never to keep any stuff on hand at Death Valley on Sunday, because most of the boys were off that day, and the place was never well guarded. There were several commission men, friends of Dater, who used to come out on Sunday afternoon and play cards and drink wine with him.

"This week-end, however, Gehrum insisted on keeping several barrels and some other stuff on hand. He was expecting some Toledo runners in Sunday night or early Monday morning, and he wanted to have the liquor ready for them. He also had several cases there that he had 'cut,' and intended to sell to druggists. I could have sold all the stuff Friday and been cleaned up, but he wouldn't listen to it. He said he had promised to hold it for those fellows.

"Gehrum and I went to the races at Louisville Saturday afternoon. We got home late Saturday night, and he stayed at my house in Cincinnati. I went to church Sunday morning, and after dinner Gehrum and I got in my car and drove out to Death Valley. There was a strange automobile in the yard, and two men were standing by it. Gehrum and I got out, and one of the men came up to me and asked if we 'wanted anything.'

"'Any what?' I said.

"'Why, any liquor,' he said.

"I told him we weren't looking for any liquor. He acted like he was drunk. He took hold of my coat lapel, and said:

Remus Could Not Believe News of Raid.

"'Well, have you got any to sell?'

"'Listen,' I said. 'We're not in the liquor business, and we're not interested in it, and if you don't take your hands off me I'll give you a crack in the jaw.' He looked like a stew, and I didn't like the way he was pawing around over me.

"With that, he threw back his coat and showed his badge. 'We're prohibition officers, and we are

"'Then we haven't got any business around here; we're just looking for a friend,' I said, and got back in the machine. 'Come on, Johnny,' I said, 'let's get out of here.'

"Right there was where I pulled the biggest boner of my life. The fellows were letting us leave until I said that. Then the officer looked around and said:

"'Oh! So this is Johnny, is it? Johnny, we've been waiting for you. This search warrant calls for a search of your premises.'

"When I heard that, I sure stepped on the gas. The old Marmon jumped like a race horse at the barrier, and I hit Queen City avenue doing 45 miles an hour in second gear. But they didn't try to follow me. In fact, I wasn't arrested until three weeks later.

"I drove straight out to Remus' place and told him what had happened. He couldn't believe it. He said he had tried to get some liquor for some friends of his, and had called Gehrum up on Friday to see if we had any. Gehrum told him there wasn't a drop on the place, and none coming in before Monday. Gehrum was lying to him, because he wanted to hold the stuff for his own customers.

Chauffeur Forgot to Deliver Message.

"Remus was told Saturday night that a strange prohibition agent (evidently Simons) was in town, but feeling certain that there was nothing on hand at Death Valley, because of what Gehrum had told him, didn't bother to send us warning. But on Sunday morning he sent Harry Boyd over to Death Valley to collect some money, and told him to tell the men to be sure and have everything cleaned up, as an outside agent was in town. Boyd, like a sap, forgot to deliver the message.

"I was madder than a hyena with a split lip, and told Remus he was partly to blame for not delivering the message himself. Whenever I had anything that important to be done, I did it myself. You can't afford to depend on a lot of chauffeurs when matters of that sort are involved.

"Well, all that didn't help now. The question was what to do. Remus told me to get on the telephone, round up the boys, and we'd go over and take the place with our automatics, overpower the officers and lock them up in the basement until we could haul the stuff away. That would make it a lot harder for them to make a case. But it was Sunday, and the and "Buck" Brady. They had plenty of nerve, and knew how to use a gun. But I couldn't find anybody. Remus said:

"'All right, Conners, you and I will take it by ourselves.' He got a shotgun, and we each had our automatics. It may sound to you like a pretty big order, but we knew prohibition agents. No man likes to get killed for $200 a month, and Remus and I figured we could handle the six of them.

"Just as we were starting off Mrs. Remus came running out of the house. She jumped in the machine, threw her arms around George, and started bawling and yelping: 'Don't go, daddy! Don't go! You'll be killed! Oh, I know you'll be killed, and then what will I do?' She blubbered and pawed around, and finally Remus decided not to go. That's what happens when you let a skirt get mixed up in your business."

Arranged to Release Their Men on Bonds.

"All that was left for us to do was to arrange to get the boys out on bonds, and we did that. It certainly makes me sore, though, every time I think of all the planning I did to prevent just what happened, and to have the works gummed up by a lot of boneheads. You never can be sure anything is done right in this world unless you do it yourself. Believe me, it was a lesson. Hereafter I'm depending on nobody but George Conners."

The grand jury investigation, the rounding up of Remus' men in the following weeks, the story of the indictments, has all been told. But Burt Morgan throws an interesting sidelight on one phase of it.

Early in 1922, he said, when Remus and his men were awaiting trial in the Federal Court at Cincinnati, Gehrum and Clem Herbes appeared at Morgan's office in Indianapolis. Herbes was an old whisky man whom Remus had acquired with the purchase of a distillery and had kept on his staff as an expert adviser in subsequent purchases of other distilleries

"They came to my office in the morning and sat around talking for two or three hours," Morgan said. "Moore was in the room. They talked about the raid down at Death Valley, and when noon came they wanted us to go to lunch with them. I said I had to go home, and Moore said he did, too. That afternoon Gehrum called me on the telephone. He said they had wanted to talk to me in the morning, but didn't want to talk in the presence of Moore. I said he was one of my confidential men, and they needn't be afraid of him. They wanted to know where I'd be that afternoon, and I said I would be at Moore's room, at the Edward Hotel, about 2 o'clock. They came over about that time.

"They began by saying that what they wanted to talk about was a very delicate matter, but I told them it was our intention to hold them on a conspiracy charge in the Death Valley matter, and that they could speak as freely as they liked.

Tells of Bribery Proposal Being Made.

"So they did talk freely—very freely. They said that everybody else was getting theirs, and there was no reason why I shouldn't get mine. They told me how much money there was in the liquor business, and what a wonderful organization they had built up They spoke of Remus being the head of it. And this was the proposition they put up to me:

"They said they had a distillery in Indiana, and wanted legal permits to withdraw whisky from it. As director, it would be my duty to pass on these permits. If I would O K the permits I would get so much a case, and there would be a large amount of money in it for me.

"Well," said Morgan laconically, "I gave them my answer; I just gave them my answer, and I made it short and straight. They said they were not surprised, that they had checked up on me at both Indianapolis and Washington and knew they could not reach me, but their organization had ordered them to put the proposition up to me and get my answer.

"I asked them if they were trying to square the Death Valley matter, and they said no, that that was water over the dam, and would have to take care of itself. They were just looking out for future business. They didn't press the offer; just said they respected an honest man's convictions, and shook hands and left."

The Indiana distillery referred to evidently was the Squibbs; following the raid on Death Valley it had been seized and sealed up, under both State and Federal proceedings.

quently indicted on charges of attempted bribery, as a result of this approach, but the cases have since been dismissed.

"Old Mother Hubbard" Proves Star Witness.

Remus has described the elaborate system of protection which he had erected, at the cost of a large fortune. He has described an arrangement with Jesse Smith through which he believed he had "fixed" the Department of Justice of the United States. But before the purpose of two determined and incorruptible men—Simons and Morgan—it collapsed. Remus and his men were placed on trial in the Federal Court at Cincinnati in May, 1922.

In addition to Remus himself there were Conners, Dater, Gehrum, Herbes, Gillenbeck, Harry Boyd, Harry Brown, "Buck" Brady, "Cap" Bell, Charles Wissman, George Klug, Harry Gardewing and Elmer Roth.

The evidence, both oral and physical, was overwhelming. For three days while the lawyers argued the barrels, cases, bottles, jugs and casks occupied a considerable area in front of the courtroom, in the presence of the jury. Then the court held that the search warrant was illegal, and that the liquor could not be admitted as evidence. Even so, there was plenty left. The agents told of the raid, Goldman and several other persons testified to having bought liquor at Death Valley and seeing the defendants there.

But the star witness was "Old Mother Hubbard." Mary L. Hubbard was the widow of a man who had been employed at the farm breaking up and burning cases. She had seen the depot in full swing, with the trucks and runners coming and going. She had seen the defendants at work there. Cross-examination confused her slightly; under shrewd questioning she was made to tell that she had seen many brands of liquor which, in fact, had not been manufactured for 25 years. She also spoke of seeing "Omaha license tags," "Dayton license tags," and other impossibilities, but in the main her story was true, and the jury believed it.

Men Found Guilty and Their Terms.

The defendants were found guilty and given the following sentences:

Remus—Two years and $10,000 fine.
Conners—18 months and $5000.
Gehrum—18 months and $5000.
Dater—18 months and $5000.
Wissman—18 months and $5000.
Harry Brown—18 months and $5000.
Herbes—18 months and $5000.
Bell—15 months and $1000.
Brady—15 months and $1000.
Roth—15 months and $5000.
Gillenbeck—15 months and $1000.
Gardewing—One year and a day and $1000.
Boyd—One year and a day and $1000.
Klug—15 months and $1000.

Remus Also Given Year's Jail Sentence.

Remus, in addition, was found guilty of maintaining a nuisance at Death Valley, and upon that count was sentenced to a year in the Dayton jail. However, the Court failed to specify whether or not the terms ran concurrently or consecutively, and after Remus had served his time at Atlanta he had to make another fight in the courts against the jail sentence. He won a court ruling that the two sentences had run concurrently. Within the last few days District Attorney Havey Mau has indicated that he may reopen this issue, and make another effort to send Remus to jail.

At this stage of the story, however, Remus has not yet gone to prison. Unlike the later action of his colleague, Judge Baltzell in the Jack Daniel case, Federal Judge Peck admitted Remus and his co-defendants to bail pending the outcome of their appeal to the higher courts. It was not until 1923 that they went to prison.

Even after he was convicted and sentenced, Remus was still confident that he would never go to prison. For had not Jesse Smith, he says, assured him that although the verdict was upheld in the higher courts, he could have the sentences commuted through his influence with Attorney-General Daugherty? Consequently Remus did not even cease his operations.

In fact, it was while the appeals were pending that Remus pulled off his last and most celebrated coup—the milking of the Jack Daniel warehouse in St. Louis. Tomorrow's installment will contain his personal narrative of that dis-

CIRCUIT CLERK TOOK IN $161,484.44 IN 1925

Paid Out $135,220.30 for Salaries; Reports Litigation Has Doubled Since 1916.

Circuit Clerk John Schmoll yesterday made a financial report of his office for 1925. He also included a review of civil proceedings transacted in the Circuit Court during the same period and submitted figures of the increase in litigation during the last 10 years.

On the financial side of the report shows the Circuit Clerk received in fees from all sources a total of $161,484.44. Of this amount he paid out $135,220.30, all but $3740.55 of which went for the salaries of the Clerk and his 63 deputies, leaving a balance of $26,264.14 to be turned over to the City Treasurer. This is $4000 more than the balance for the preceding year turned in by Schmoll, which up to that time was the largest ever received by the city from a Circuit Clerk.

Pay of Deputies Increased.

The report alludes to the fact that Schmoll was able to make this large payment notwithstanding that the pay of the deputies had been increased by him and the fees charged are on a scale fixed 50 years ago. The $3740.55 excess over salary expenses was paid out for extra work and the cost of the premium on the Clerk's official bond. Among fees collected was $1836.05 for issuing passports, which formerly were issued by the United States District Clerk.

Regarding the number of suits, the report shows that 12,420 were filed last year, an increase of 682 over the preceding year. Classified they were as follows: Equity, 442; divorce, 3388, and jury cases, principally damage suits, 8590. Schmoll's statistics show that beginning in 1916, when 6225 suits were filed, litigation has steadily grown until at present it has virtually doubled.

Explains Overcrowded Dockets.

"Notwithstanding this fact," Schmoll says, "the number of Judges has been increased by only two in this period. This in a large measure, explains the overcrowded condition of the Circuit Court docket and also calls attention to the need of more Judges. The largest percentage of increase is in damage suits and is probably due to the more general use of automobiles and motor trucks."

His report includes the following reference to divorce cases:

"It is interesting to note that divorce cases have almost doubled in 10 years. There has been a great deal of speculation as to what really caused this increase and various reasons have been suggested. It seems to me that hasty marriages, foolish infatuation of young people and unwillingness to make sacrifices, as well as a lack of appreciation of the marriage vows are largely responsible for this condition, which is, to say the least, very distressing.

An analysis of tht figures submitted reveals that there was a slight divorce increase from 1916 to 1918, which was perhaps in keeping with the increase in population. But in 1919, after the war, divorces jumped up approximately 1200 cases, and in 1920, after a great number of service men had been discharged, the divorce litigation increased 700 more, the grand total then being 3729.

"The reason for the difference in these two years is that during the war, in order to obtain a divorce, it was necessary for the wife to make affidavit that her husband was not serving in any branch of the army or navy, so that, in 1920, when the service men were back home, a great many girls and young men who had married foolishly just before the husband went into service, sought to be released in the divorce courts. In 1921 divorce litigation dropped to 3080, which was approximately the same as in 1919, but it has again increased, until, in the year just closed, 3388 couples sought to have the bonds of matrimony severed. No matter what the cause of this apparent eagerness for divorce, certainly it is one of the great evils of the day, and some remedy ought to be found to change the condition. Otherwise, society eventually will be undermined."

Traffic Cases 68 Per Cent of Total In Police Courts Since 1925.

Sixty-eight per cent of the cases tried in the two Police Courts of St. Louis during 1925 were traffic cases, according to the annual report of City Court Clerk Thomas Hauk, released yesterday. Seven years ago traffic cases were 32 per cent of the total.

In Judge Rosecran's court, Division No. 1, 22,480 traffic cases were tried during the year, and in Judge Beck's court, No. 2, 12,088 cases. In Division No. 1, 56 per cent of the traffic defendants were fined, and in No. 2 53 per cent. The fines imposed aggregated $245,482, in traffic cases, of which $154,890 was collected.

A general increase in the number of cases tried on various charges and the amount of fines imposed, is shown by the report. The record shows a considerable increase in traffic cases appealed to the Court of Criminal Correction. In 1924 the appeals totaled 605, while in 1925 they mounted to 1519. Defendants sent to the Workhouse for failure to pay fines totaled 1173, of which number 183 were defendants guilty of traffic violations.

A Fire Department company will be sent to the place today to pump the mash into a sewer.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Money of No Value

"Life had no pleasures for me. Although I had plenty of money it was of no value, as my stomach almost constantly distressed me. I lost faith in all doctors and medicine. Talking with my druggist about my case, he advised me to try MAYR'S. One dose will convince. I am now enjoying life again." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Walgreen Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

MORE MOTOR CYCLE POLICE ARE ORDERED

Forty-two Men to Be Recruited at Once to Aid in Handling Traffic.

The motor cycle force of the St. Louis Police Department is to be doubled in numerical strength, Chief of Police Gerk announced yesterday, as a part of an aggressive campaign to be undertaken at the direction of the Police Board for further suppression of automobile traffic violations.

Forty-two motor cycle police are to be recruited at once, he said, and added to the present force of the traffic division, which consists of a Lieutenant, two Sergeants and 40 men. Additional motor cycles and other needed equipment will be purchased.

The redoubled force will be employed, as at present, in traffic regulation in all its phases, and particularly the suppression of speeders, the arrest of motorists ignoring intersection stops and other infractions for which the motor cycle policeman has the special advantage over the foot policeman.

Traffic Violators Pay $134,481 Court Fines.

Traffic violators paid $134,481 in fines in the two Police Courts during 1925, a survey by Thomas S. Hauk, clerk of the courts, shows.

There were 34,568 traffic cases tried, fines assessed in 18,835 of them and $245,482 in fines imposed. Those defendants who did not pay either appealed, were put on probation, served terms in the workhouse or had their fines stayed on payment of costs. In 1924 traffic fines amounted to $83,523.50.

Judges Rosecan and Beck preside over Police Courts. Collections in the two courts amounted to $154,895.50, as against $94,364.50 in 1924.

While there were only 605 appeals to the Court of Criminal Correction in 1924, there were 1517 in 1925.

In 1924 there were 38,007 cases tried, while in 1925 there were 50,531. Fines were imposed in 24,533 instances in 1925 and 18,906 in 1924.

NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATION CHILDREN GIVE PROGRAM

Twenty-four, From 6 to 12, Present Songs and Dances at the City Club.

A half-hour program of songs and dances by children of the Neighborhood Association was given yesterday afternoon in the main dining room of the City Club.

Twenty-four boys and girls between 6 and 12 years old, representing five nationalities, assisted by workers at the Neighborhood House, Nineteenth and Wash streets, joined in choruses and gave recitations and dances, individually and in groups.

Luther Ely Smith, a charter member of the City Club, introduced Louis C. Harnish, managing director of the Association, who spoke of the new Neighborhood House as the first non-sectarian settlement house in St. Louis, comparing its work to that of the Hull House of Chicago. He requested suport for a campaign to raise $150,000 to finish paying for the new building and equipping it.

DEPEW, AT 91, PLEASED BY 'ADOPTION' GIVING HIM YOUTH

Yale, '89 Becomes Foster Parent of Grand Old Survivor of Yale '56.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Chauncey M. Depew, 91 years old, and one of the two survivors of the class of '56, at Yale, thanked the class of '89 in a letter tonight for "renewing his youth and taking 33 years off his age," by adopting him.

The letter was read at the annual dinner here of the class of '89. He was made an honorary member of that class two years ago. This is the year for the decennial celebration of his own class of '56, but his letter said he was forced to write the New Haven authorities no reunion could be held, as there are only two survivors, and one of the two, Mr. Depew alone was strong enough to attend.

NATHAN FRANK CONSIDERS SEEKING SHORT SENATE TERM

Nathan Frank, former Congressman, is considering the suggestion that he should seek the Republican nomination for the short term in the United States Senate, which is to be filled, with the succeeding six-year term, at next fall's election.

Frank said yesterday he had decided to run if he had no opposition for the short-term nomination. He has not consulted Senator Williams, who has been expected to file for both short and long terms. Frank is 73 years old. The short term extends from the time of the election, in November, until March, 1927, when the term for which the late Senator Spencer was elected will end. Senator Williams' appointment holds only until the election.

JURY CONDEMNS FEE PLAN IN AUTO CASES

County Panel Recommends Establishment of Special Courts at Clayton.

Abolition of the fee system in handling automobile traffic violations in county Justice of the Peace courts was recommended in the final report yesterday of the December grand jury of St. Louis County, which during its term returned indictments charging oppression in office against eight Justices of the Peace.

The grand jury was in session 32 days, examined 231 witnesses and returned 30 true bills, one of the lowest totals of record in recent years. The true bills included indictments against a deputy constable and two assistants, charging bribery growing out of complaints of motorists.

"The jury feels the present system of handling automobile traffic violations," the report stated, "should not be handled as they are now, and instead of such cases being brought before Justices of the Peace located in various parts of the county, there should be two courts established with offices in Clayton. These should be supplied by men having knowledge of the law, preferably those admitted to the bar, being paid a fixed salary, eliminating the present fee system."

Similarly, the jurors recommended that the Sheriff be provided with additional deputies to patrol the highways for regulating traffic, displacing the present deputy constables, and that these added Deputy Sheriffs be paid a fixed salary, thus again eliminating the fee system.

The report condemned the practice of the County Court in issuing warrants in anticipation of future tax collections, citing that many of these warrants go to protest, and that the practice is "expensive and unbusinesslike."

The report recommended three bond issues—one of $500,000 to reconstruct and enlarge the courthouse, one of $300,000 to purchase a site and construct a hospital, and on of $5,000,000 for the construction of highways and bridges on the north-and-south connecting roads.

Two additional divisions of the Circuit Court to be added to the present two, is recommended to relieve the present crowded condition of the dockets, one of the courts to devote itself to civil and equity and the other to criminal causes. Two additional assistants for the Prosecuting Attorney and another investigator for his office are suggested.

LINCOLN HOUSING INQUIRY BY COUNTY GRAND JURY ENDS

Announcement Made No Indictment Had Been Returned As Result of Investigation.

The St. Louis County grand jury, which began an investigation last month into the organization and business of the Lincoln Savings & Loan Association, organized to take over the business of the Lincoln Housing Trust, thrown into receivership by the State Finance Department in 1923, adjourned yesterday, with the announcement no true bills had been returned, and the inquiry was ended.

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller, who disqualified himself in the inquiry, on the ground he believed no criminal cause of action rested against the officers, said yesterday his position had been sustained by Assistant Attorney-General Frank, who was called in to conduct the investigation.

Only two witnesses appeared before the jury—the auditor of the Lincoln loan company, and Ephrim Caplan, St. Louis attorney, representing certain stockhgolders of the defunct housing trust and certain certificate holders of the loan company, who has actively prosecuted their claims in the St. Louis Circuit Court.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI TO WED MISS EVANGELINE JOHNSON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Miss Evangeline Brewster Johnson, reported from Philadelphia as engaged to marry Leopold Stokowski, orchestra director, on Monday, is a daughter of the late Robert Wood Johnson of New York and New Brunswick, N. J., one of the founders of Johnson & Johnson, manufacturers of medical supplies. Mrs. Johnson married John W. Dennis of London, a member of Parliament, after her husband's death. She died in 1919.

In 1920, Miss Johnson's engagement to Douglas Elliott Craik of London was announced, but the engagement was broken off shortly after the announcement.

The musician is 44, and Miss Johnson, whom he met in Philadelphia three months ago, is 27. She is an intimate friend of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

In 1911, Stokowski was married to Olga Samaroff, the pianist. They were divorced in 1923 on grounds of temperamental incompatibility.

T. R. A.—It is said that the flag of Denmark is the oldest unaltered flag, its cross dating back to 1219. The Italian flag dates back to 1310. The flag of the United States was established in 1777.

CONSTANT READER—Write to the Department of Soldiers Civil Re-establishmen, Ottawa, Canada, regarding any amnesty which may have been granted to wartime deserters from the army in Canada.

X. Y. Z.—If the moths have gotten into the stuffed furniture, the stuffing as well as the covering should be coated with a 10 per cent solution of sulphur in carbon sulphide. The carbon sulphide dissolves the sulphur so as to cause a very fine division and to penetrate the fibers completely.

J. M. D.—A bridge is a structure erected across a waterway, ravine, road or the like, serving for the passage of persons, animals or vehicles, or as a means of support and transit. A viaduct is a bridge-like structure, especially a large one of arched masonry, to carry a roadway or the like over a valley or ravine or across another roadway.

R. B. T.—The distress signal consists of three dots, three dashes and three dots, and it happens that those code signals mean S. O. S., which is sometimes said to mean "Save Our Souls," or "Save, oh Save," but in reality this combination of dots and dashes makes the plainest code signal possible and for that reason has been adopted by international agreement.

MEYER—Full information regarding the method of preserving the front covers of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine was printed in the Home Edition of the Post-Dispatch on Oct. 16, and on Page 10 of the Sunday Magazine on Oct. 25. MRS. W. G.—To candy fresh citron, first boil it in light-degree sugar-syrup and set it to cool in a large crock. Repeat the process a number of times, having the syrup of heavier degree on each occasion. Next boil it in the glazing-syrup, which should include 20 per cent of corn syrup, then dry. The corn syrup of the last immersion prevents crystallization and gives the desired tender and satiny exterior.

WM. M.—In order to ascertain the American time from the time given, take six hours off of the European time as stated. The Armistice was signed Nov. 11, 1918, at 5 o'clock in the morning, French time, and went into effect at 11 o'clock in the morning, French time. The terms of the armistice with Germany were read to Congress by President Wilson at 1 o'clock on Nov. 11, 1918. The last French town to fall into American hands before the armistice went into effect was Stenay. Patrols reported that they had found it empty not more than a quarter of an hour before 11 o'clock of that morning. On the entire American front from the Moselle to the region of Sedan there was artillery activity in the morning, all of the batteries preparing for the final salvos.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

S. J. K.—A certain amount of dandruff in the hair is normal; it is the natural exfoliation of the upper layer of the skin of the scalp. When it becomes excessive it generally indicates some disturbances in the scalp and is very often found to precede falling of the hair. Excessive dandruff, therefore, merits attention of those who wish to preserve the hair. There are three forms of baldness from a practical viewpoint, senile baldness, premature baldness and symptomatic baldness. The first two are not amenable to treatment from the standpoint of a cure, although in premature baldness the eventual loss of hair may be delayed somewhat. It is symptomatic baldness that treatment is effective, and it is to this that the following applies. Disorders of the general health is often reflected in the loss of the hair and this should be considered in such cases, any departure from the normal health being sought for and corrected. Locally the treatment may be summed up in the one word, "stimulation." Weekly, semi-weekly or even daily cleansing of the scalp should be practiced. This is best done with the following wash: Saponis viridis, 4 ounces; alcohol, 2 ounces. Dissolve with heat and filter. After shampooing with this the hair is thoroughly rinsed in clear water and dried as thoroughly as possible and the following applied: Carbolic acid, 15 grains; glycerine, 2 drams; cologne water, enough to make 1 ounce. Mix thoroughly and apply as follows: Make a part in the hair and drop the mixture on the scalp at intervals of an inch and rub in with a soft brush, a tooth brush serves well. Cover the scalp by this method, making one part after another. After a time the shampooing may be done less often but the mixture should be applied faithfully and persistently until the hair ceases to fall or the case must be abandoned as hopeless.

$100,000 PAID FOR SITE FOR OIL FILLING STATION

Lubrite Refining Co. Acquires Northeast Corner of Nineteenth Street and Washington Avenue.

DEAL HANDLED BY J. H. FARISH & CO.

Large Outside Industrial Concern Seeking Block for Plant in North Central Part of City.

By Berry Moore.

A noteworthy purchase of the week was by the Lubrite Refining Co. of the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Nineteenth street, held by the Title Guarantee Trust Co.

The site comprises 100 feet on Washington and 135 feet on Nineteenth street, with a second frontage on Lucas avenue. It is vacant with the exception of a filling station of the Lubrite company, which occupied the premises under a lease.

J. H. Farish & Co. handled the transaction, which involved close to $100,000, or $1000 a foot for the Washington avenue frontage, according to Walter H. Ware, vice president and general manager of the Lubrite company. These figures, however, are not of record, the property having been transferred nominally. The property prior to its acquisition by the Title Guarantee Co., belonged to Mrs. Grace A. Leathe, widow of Samuel H. Leathe.

New Oil Station Planned.

The Lubrite company will replace the present filling station with a new type filling station with complete facilities for greasing, oiling and hoisting automobiles it is announced.

"We plan," said Waltfer H. Ware, vice president and general sales manager of the Lubrite company, "to give St. Louis something new in the way of lubrication service. We are going to erect not only a gasoline filling station, but a complete lubricating service station.

Formerly Owned by Mrs. Leathe.

This was one of several valuable Washington avenue and Locust street holdings formerly owned by Mrs. Leathe. These included the southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue.

The New Year has opened in realty circles with optimism at a high stage. Prevailing opinion is that transactions in investment and speculative properties will predominate in the future, rather than in residential, with a much large volume of operation. From all indications the most buoyant sections will be the apartment house and business centers, including the industrial sections, which promise to be characterized by notable expansion.

Factor in Industrial Section.

The chief factor in the industrial section of the market is the General Electric Co.'s plans for a major plant here, in that they have awakened general attention to industrial possibilities of St. Louis. Consensus is that the General Electric Co. will be ushered in with renewed activity in real estate, especially in the northwestern part of the city, to be sustained at flourishing proportions for a long time.

Receiving the cue, perhaps, from the General Electric Co., a number of other large concerns are casting about for sites here, according to real estate men.

A site in the central part of the city, east of Eighteenth street and north of St. Louis avenue, is being sought for a mammoth concern with plans for a building to embrace an entire block. It is to be used for both distributing and manufacturing purposes, and will be on an overshadowing scale, it is understood.

Identity of Firm Withheld.

The identity of the concern is being withheld pending negotiations for the site, which is being acquired piecemeal. ST. LOUIS, MO. ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH January 10, 1926.

THE YELLOW DUCK RHYMES

This morn-ing I Went for a trip,
A-cross the sky,
In my new ship!

I land-ed in
A roy-al gar-den,
Fright-ened the King
And begged his pardon.

He said it took Him by sur-prise,
To see a duck
With gog-gled eyes!

We talked a-bout
The wind and weather,
In-di-a's pearls,
And Scot-land's heather,

The Ir-ish heart,
And the Eng-lish crown,
And my new suit
Of ei-der-down,

Dan-gers that lie
A-cross the channel,
The date he donned
His win-ter flannel,

And ma-ny more
Im-por-tant things,
Like lol-li-pops
And sig-net rings.

Mat-ters of state
So fill his days,
He says he al-
Most nev-er plays.

And every night
Some ques-tion deep,
Will worry him
So he can't sleep.

He says he finds
It ve-ry hard,
The choos-ing of
A greet-ing card!

Then I sailed home
In my new ship,
And glad am I
That I took that trip.

For now I know
I'm in great luck,
Just to own a pond,
And be a duck.

The Wonderful Stories of "OZ"

by L. Frank Baum

The Dragon Defies Danger

WITH this speech of Kaliko's, Ruggedo threw his sceptre at Kaliko's head, aiming it so well that the Royal Chamberlain had to fall flat upon the floor in order to escape it. But the Hearer did not see the sceptre coming and it swept past his head so closely that it broke off the tip of one of his long ears. He gave a dreadful yell that quite startled Ruggedo, and the King was sorry for the accident because those long ears of the Hearer were really valuable to him.

So the Nome King forgot to be angry with Kaliko and ordered his Chamberlain to summon General Guph and the army of nomes and have them properly armed. They were then to march to the mouth of the Tube, where they could seize the travelers as soon as they appeared.

Although the journey through the Tube was longer this time than before, it was so much more comfortable that none of our friends minded it at all. They talked together most of the time, and as they found the dragon good-natured and fond of the sound of his own voice, they soon became well acquainted with him and accepted him as a companion.

"You see," said Shaggy, in his frank way, "Quox is on our side, and therefore the dragon is a good fellow. If he happened to be an enemy, instead of a friend, I am sure I should dislike him very much, for his breath smells of brimstone, he is very conceited and he is so strong and fierce that he would prove a dangerous foe."

"Yes, indeed," returned Quox, who had listened to this speech with pleasure; "I suppose I am about as terrible as any living thing. I am glad you find me conceited, for that proves I know my good qualities. As for my breath smelling of brimstone, I really can't help it, and I once met a man whose breath smelled of onions, which I consider far worse."

"I don't," said Betsy. "I love onions."

"And I love brimstone," declared the dragon, "so don't let us quarrel over one another's peculiarities."

Saying this, he breathed a long breath and shot a flame fifty feet from his mouth. The brimstone made Betsy cough, but she remembered about the onions and said nothing.

They had no idea how far they had gone through the center of the earth, nor when to expect the trip to end. At one time the little girl remarked:

"I wonder when we'll reach the bottom of this hole? And isn't it funny, Shaggy Man, that what is the bottom to us now was the top when we fell the other way?"

"What puzzles me," said Files, "is that we are able to fall both ways."

"That," announced Tik-Tok, "is because the world is round."

"Exactly," responded Shaggy. "The machinery in your head is in fine working order, Tik-Tok. You know, Betsy, that there is such a thing as the Attraction of Gravitation, which draws everything toward the center of the earth. That is why we fall out of bed, and why everything clings to the surface of the earth."

"Then why doesn't everything go on down to the center of the earth?" inquired the little girl.

"I was afraid you were going to ask me that," replied Shaggy in a sad tone. "The reason, my dear, is that the earth is so solid that other solid things can't get through it. But when there's a hole, as there is in this case, we drop right down to the center of the world."

"Why don't we stop there?" asked Betsy.

"Because we go so fast that we acquire speed enough to carry us right up to the other end."

"I don't understand that, and it makes my head ache to try to figure it out," she said after some thought. "One thing draws us to the center and another thing pushes us away from it. But—"

"Don't ask me why, please," interrupted the Shaggy Man. "If you can't understand it, let it go at that."

"Do you understand it?" she inquired.

"All the magic isn't in fairyland," he said gravely. "There's lots of magic in all Nature, and you may see it as well in the United States, where you and I once lived, as you can here."

"I never did," she replied.

"Because you were so used to it all that you didn't realize it was magic. Is anything more wonderful than to see a flower grow and blossom, or to get light out of the electricity in the air? The cows that manufacture milk for us must have machinery fully as remarkable as that in Tik-Tok's copper body, and perhaps you've noticed that—"

And then, before Shaggy could finish his speech the strong light of day suddenly broke upon them. It grew brighter and completely enveloped them. The dragon's claws no longer scraped against the metal Tube, for he shot into the open air a hundred feet or more and sailed so far away from the dangerous hole that when he landed it was on the peak of a mountain and just over the entrance to the many underground caverns of the Nome King.

Some of the officers tumbled off their seats when Quox struck the ground, but most of the dragon's passengers only felt a slight jar. All were glad to be on solid earth again and they at once dismounted and began to look about them. Queerly enough, as soon as they had left the dragon, the seats that were strapped to the monster's back disappeared, and this probably happened because there was no further use for them and because Quox looked much more dignified in just his silver scales. Of course he still wore the forty yards of ribbon around his neck, as well as the great locket, but these only made him look "dressed up," as Betsy remarked.

Now the army of nomes had gathered thickly around the mouth of the Tube, in order to be ready to capture the band of invaders as soon as they popped out. There were, indeed, hundreds of nomes assembled, and they were led by Guph, their most famous General. But they did not expect the dragon to fly so high, and he shot out of the Tube so suddenly that it took them by surprise. When the nomes had rubbed the astonishment out of their eyes and regained their wits, they discovered the dragon quietly seated on the mountain side far above their heads, while the other strangers were standing in a group and calmly looking down upon them.

General Guph was very angry at the escape, which was no one's fault but his own.

"Come down here and be captured!" he shouted, waving his sword at them.

"Come up here and capture us—if you dare!" replied Queen Ann, who was winding up the clockwork of her Private Soldier, so he could fight more briskly.

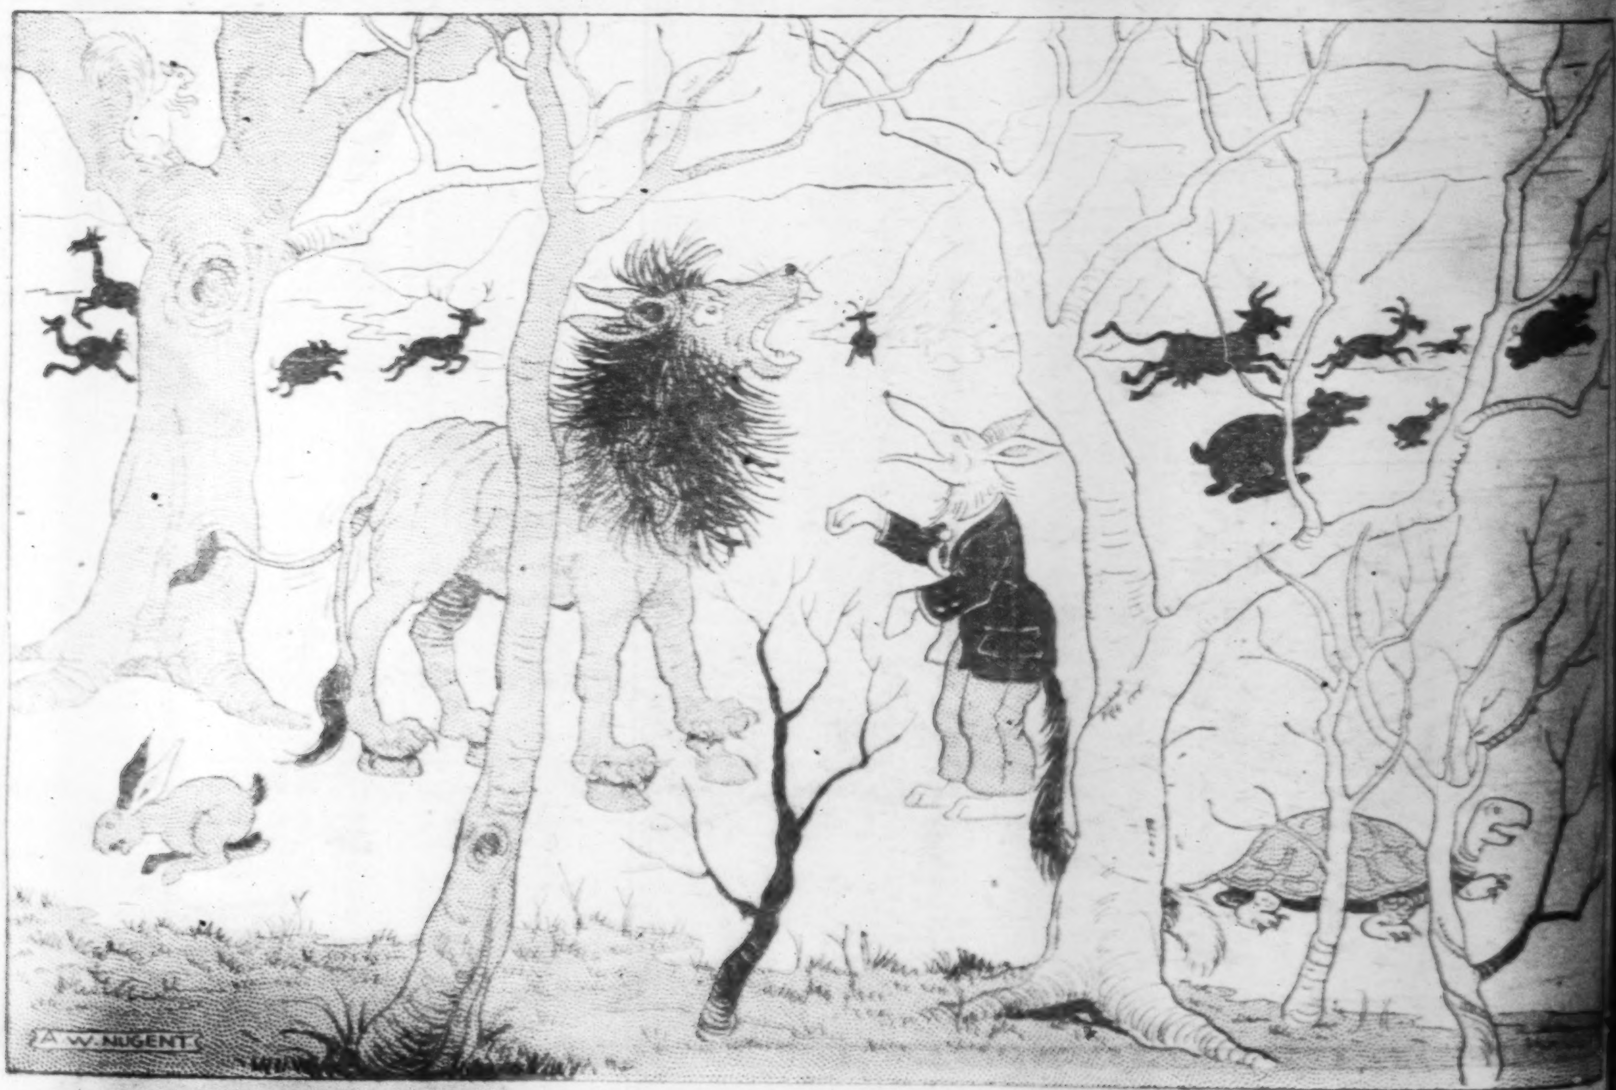
THE DONKEY IN THE LION'S SKIN



You remember the donkey who put on the lion's skin and frightened all the animals till he tried to roar and only succeeded in braying, which gave away his secret? Here we see him discovered by the wise old fox. A man, a horse and a goat have all been frightened by the donkey's fierce appearance, and are hiding in the picture. Can you find them?

defiance; then he turned and issued a command to his nomes. These were all armed with sharp spears and with one accord they raised these spears and threw them straight at their foes, so that they rushed through the air in a perfect cloud of flying weapons.

Some damage might have been done had not the dragon quickly crawled before the others, his body being so big that it shielded every one of them, including Hank. The spears rattled against the silver scales of Quox and then fell harmlessly to the ground. They were magic spears, of course, and all straightway bounded back into the hands of those who had thrown them, but even Guph could see that it was useless to repeat the attack.

It was now Queen Ann's turn to attack, so the Generals yelled "For—ward march!" and the Colonels and Majors and Captains repeated the command and the valiant Army of Oogaboo,

ght in the Deserted Shack

By FRANK A. SECORD.

[illegible] swampy [illegible] unfit for a [illegible]tat.

At Duke's exclamation his companions — three boys accompanying him on a rather "creepy" expedition — ducked low and waited for further orders.

Through a window of the old shack brilliantly gleamed a light, although it was known that no living human was in the building.

The lads held a hurried consultation, after which Duke Collins gave the order, "Advance, and every kid for himself, but remember, we are all for one another!"

With a rush the four boys ran through the dank weeds, over a patch of very mucky ground, where their feet churned in the gumbo, and on to the dark shadows under under some neglected and vine-clung trees of an abandoned orchard.

It was an ideal night for a "spook" investigation and the surroundings were more than ideal for something uncanny to take place.

Under the trees, the adventurers paused again, drew deep breaths and Duke whispered: "Fellows, this is the time we get next to the crook, ghost, man, kid or animal, that is doing the mysterious work at Old Man Simons' Folly. Unless a human being sneaked in there from an underground passage—and I have the same to say of an animal—there is no flesh and blood thing inside that shack to make the light or cause it to burn. We are four. We all see a light gleaming through the windows, and the light is, beyond a doubt, in the old kitchen of the house. So much. Now, if we have the nerve, we will find out what we find out!!

Each of the boys carried a weapon of some kind. Duke Collins held in front of him a rifle; Billy Owens carried a club; Harry Biggs lugged a corn knife big enough and heavy enough to chop off a man's head at one stroke; Jimmy Coyle had strapped to him his father's six-shooter; and as the little crowd advanced, Jimmy's fingers drew the weapon from its holster and set his jaws, while a determined look overspread his face.

Now this was no bit of foolishness. For quite a while people of the town two miles east of Old Man Simons' Folly, when passing the shack at night, observed a light burning in the place. Sometimes the light gleamed a long time, sometimes it went out immediately after appearing, especially if a noise on the road broke the still of night. People at first decided that hunters or fishers were using the old ramshackle building for a camp; then it was decided that jokesters were responsible; then folks paid no attention to the strange light at all. Some men who attempted to investigate, one night, declared the light was caused by a will-o'-the wisp.

Well, one evening, as a couple of boys passed the place on their way home from a fishing expedition to the ponds beyond, the light appeared, went out, appeared again and remained burning until one lad cast a stone against the echoing side of the building. Quick as a wink the light disappeared—went out as if a lamp had been extinguished or an electric light had suddenly been turned off.

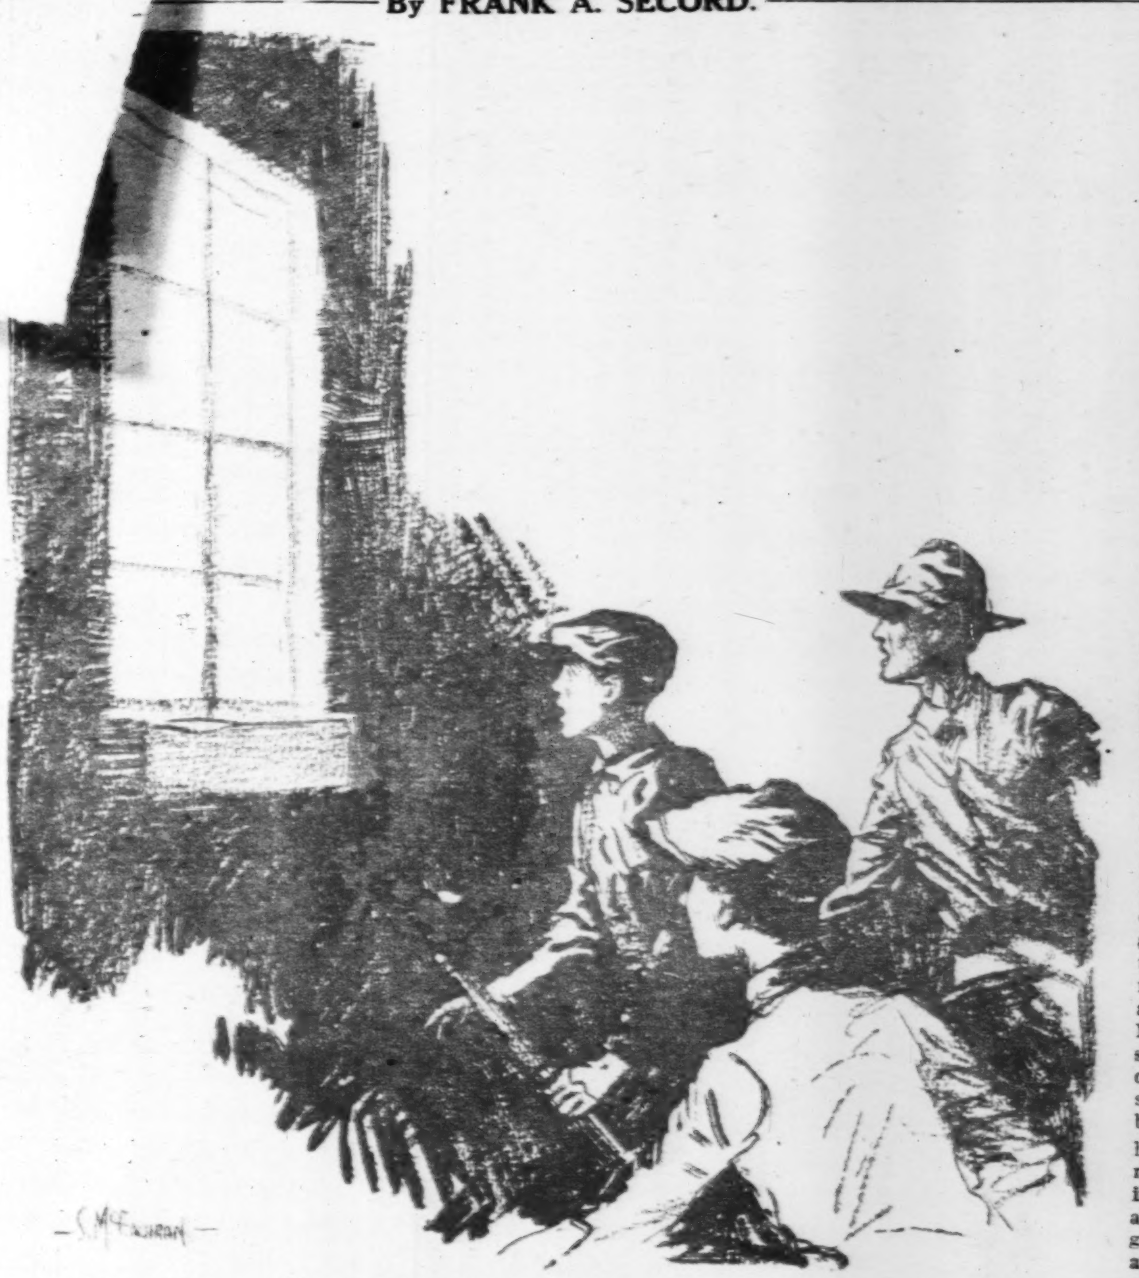
The boys, on that occasion, "beat it," and reached home with all sorts of weird tales of what they saw and heard; rather, what they didn't hear. They saw the light, however.

Therefore, Duke Collins, picking his closest chums, arranged a raid.

Years before, Old Man Simons built the house on the marshy piece of ground and intended to drain the locality in such a manner as to leave the newly planted orchard and the yard surrounding dry and healthful. However, his plans failed, there being a number of small springs thereabouts, which could not be stopped from oozing out their contents. Old Man Simons died where he lived, in the house now gone to decay. He was an obstinate man and often declared he would win against nature or die in the attempt. He died. His heirs farmed the higher land, left the house and surroundings to their decaying fate and—

So, on the evening in question, Duke Collins and his chums planned a raid on the spot to determine once and for all time what caused the uncanny gleam of light through one of the windows of the old room that had served, in the other days, for a kitchen.

The four boys left the shadows of the old orchard trees and advanced to within a dozen paces of the back door. They made no noise. The shaft of light flooded the weeds outside the window and the lads peered anxiously to discover, if possible, some sign of a moving object within.



The lads peered anxiously to discover, if possible, some sign of a moving object within.

Not a shadow, not a cracking of a board, not a rattle of anything to denote that anybody was in the house, was discovered.

"What'll we do next?" Duke whispered, nudging Billy Owens.

"Take a shot at it!" was the answer.

"That won't get us anywhere. Suppose the light goes out—then what'll we gain?" Duke whispered again.

"Want to take a chance and butt into the place?" Jimmy Coyle inquired, waving his father's six-shooter in a half-circle.

"Bow, wow!" muttered Harry Biggs, making a grimace and backing up until one of his feet stepped into a small water-hole and let him down about a foot. With a flopping noise the boy pulled out his foot, kicked off the mud and a bit of this flew forward, chugging against the side of the house, but not very hard.

Quick as a wink the light went out and there, in the semi-gloom the adventurers stood trembling, undecided what they would do next.

Without noise the four lads backed up to the trees once more. There Duke whispered, "Hang it, Harry, I wish we'd left you at home. You big boob, you've spoiled it all for us!"

"Um, huh, looks that way!" grunted the offender.

"And run on, Bub!" growled Jimmy Coyle, thrusting his gun into its holster. "Go on home to your mother, Bub!"

"Aw, shut up!" Harry exclaimed. "I bet I've as much nerve as you. I dare you to go into the shack."

"Before you give a guy a dare, try it yourself!" sneered the other.

"Sh-h-h!" warned Duke Collins at that moment and there was intense quiet. Once more the light shone through the window and its rays flooded the weeds as before.

"Huh!" chorused the other three boys, mystified at the goings-on.

"All I've got to say," whispered Duke, "is, the old joint is haunted and there's no guesswork about it. If we find out anything tonight, we have to expect to locate a spook. Get me?"

"Well, the spook you mention is evidently afraid of us, for he douses the glim as soon as we make a noise!" muttered Billy.

"And," said Jimmy Coyle, "if he's afraid of us, what have we got to be afraid of, from him?"

"Lead on!" Duke giggled, pushing Jimmy ahead and into the softer mud.

"I haven't lost any ghosts," growled Jimmy, "but if one shows up and a shot will get him, I bet I know how to wind up Mr. Ghost!"

Tip-toeing to the house, the boys gained the window. Duke had been thinking of what the town folks would say, in case himself and chums returned without any explanation of the mystery. He remembered how, the evening before, in relating to Mary Bevins the proposed plans of the expedition, he promised the girl that he'd be able to tell her all about it or never come back. He also remembered how Mary—and he was real sweet on her—took hold of his coat sleeve and said something about his being a brave boy; and how Mary begged him not to endanger his life in the attempt. "I'd about as soon die as to go back and tell her we are a bunch of cowards and unable to pick up this business!" thought young Collins, and he decided right then to accomplish what he came for.

Duke peeked in at the window. He saw a dusty, grimy, spider-web covered room. In front of a shelf on the wall dangled an electric cord, at the end of which hung a globe. This globe burned brightly as possible through the dirt covering its exterior.

To Duke's mind quickly came the fact that during the afternoon of that very day he had inquired at the Light office in town and was informed that the meter had been taken out of Old Man Simons' Folly long, long before; that it was impossible for any current to flow into the shack. Therefore, Duke felt a creepy streak wander down his spine when he saw the light burning. Next instant he spied a dark object that he was certain was a hand around the chain clinging to the light, said chain being once used to turn on and off the current. This dark hand—it must have belonged to a Negro or an Indian, the boy thought as his hair began to straighten—was not connected with any arm or body; that is, nothing but the hand was visible.

Motioning for his companions to draw up and take a peep into the house, Duke, pale now, placed a finger over his lips to demand silence.

Before any of the crowd realized what was going on, Jimmy Coyle burst out in a weird—the boys thought—laugh. Bang! savagely barked his father's six-shooter, the light went out and, with a bound Jimmy dashed to the door. With a kick he knocked the rickety door open and next struck a match.

"Come on, you galoots!" this boy yelled. He ran to the chain on the light, pulled it and the globe at once lit up.

"Hey!" gasped the companions of Jimmy.

"Not hay, but rat!" Jimmy Coyle exultantly shouted, kicking a dead rodent to one side in the room.

"I guess 'spooks,' fellows!" cried the boy, shoving the still smoking revolver into its receptacle.

"But how, tell me," urged Duke Collins, "could the rat turn on the current when there's no 'juice' on the line?"

Said Jimmy, slowly, scratching his head, "Hanged if I know. Hadn't thought of that, unless—"

"What?" eagerly inquired the other three of the party.

"Must be crossed with another light wire somewhere, is all I can say."

Before going home the boys uncovered this phase of the mystery. The line into the house, badly weather-beaten, had sagged to a cross-country light circuit, the winds had sawed the two until the insulation was worn off and so the lamp was able to burn when the chain was pulled.

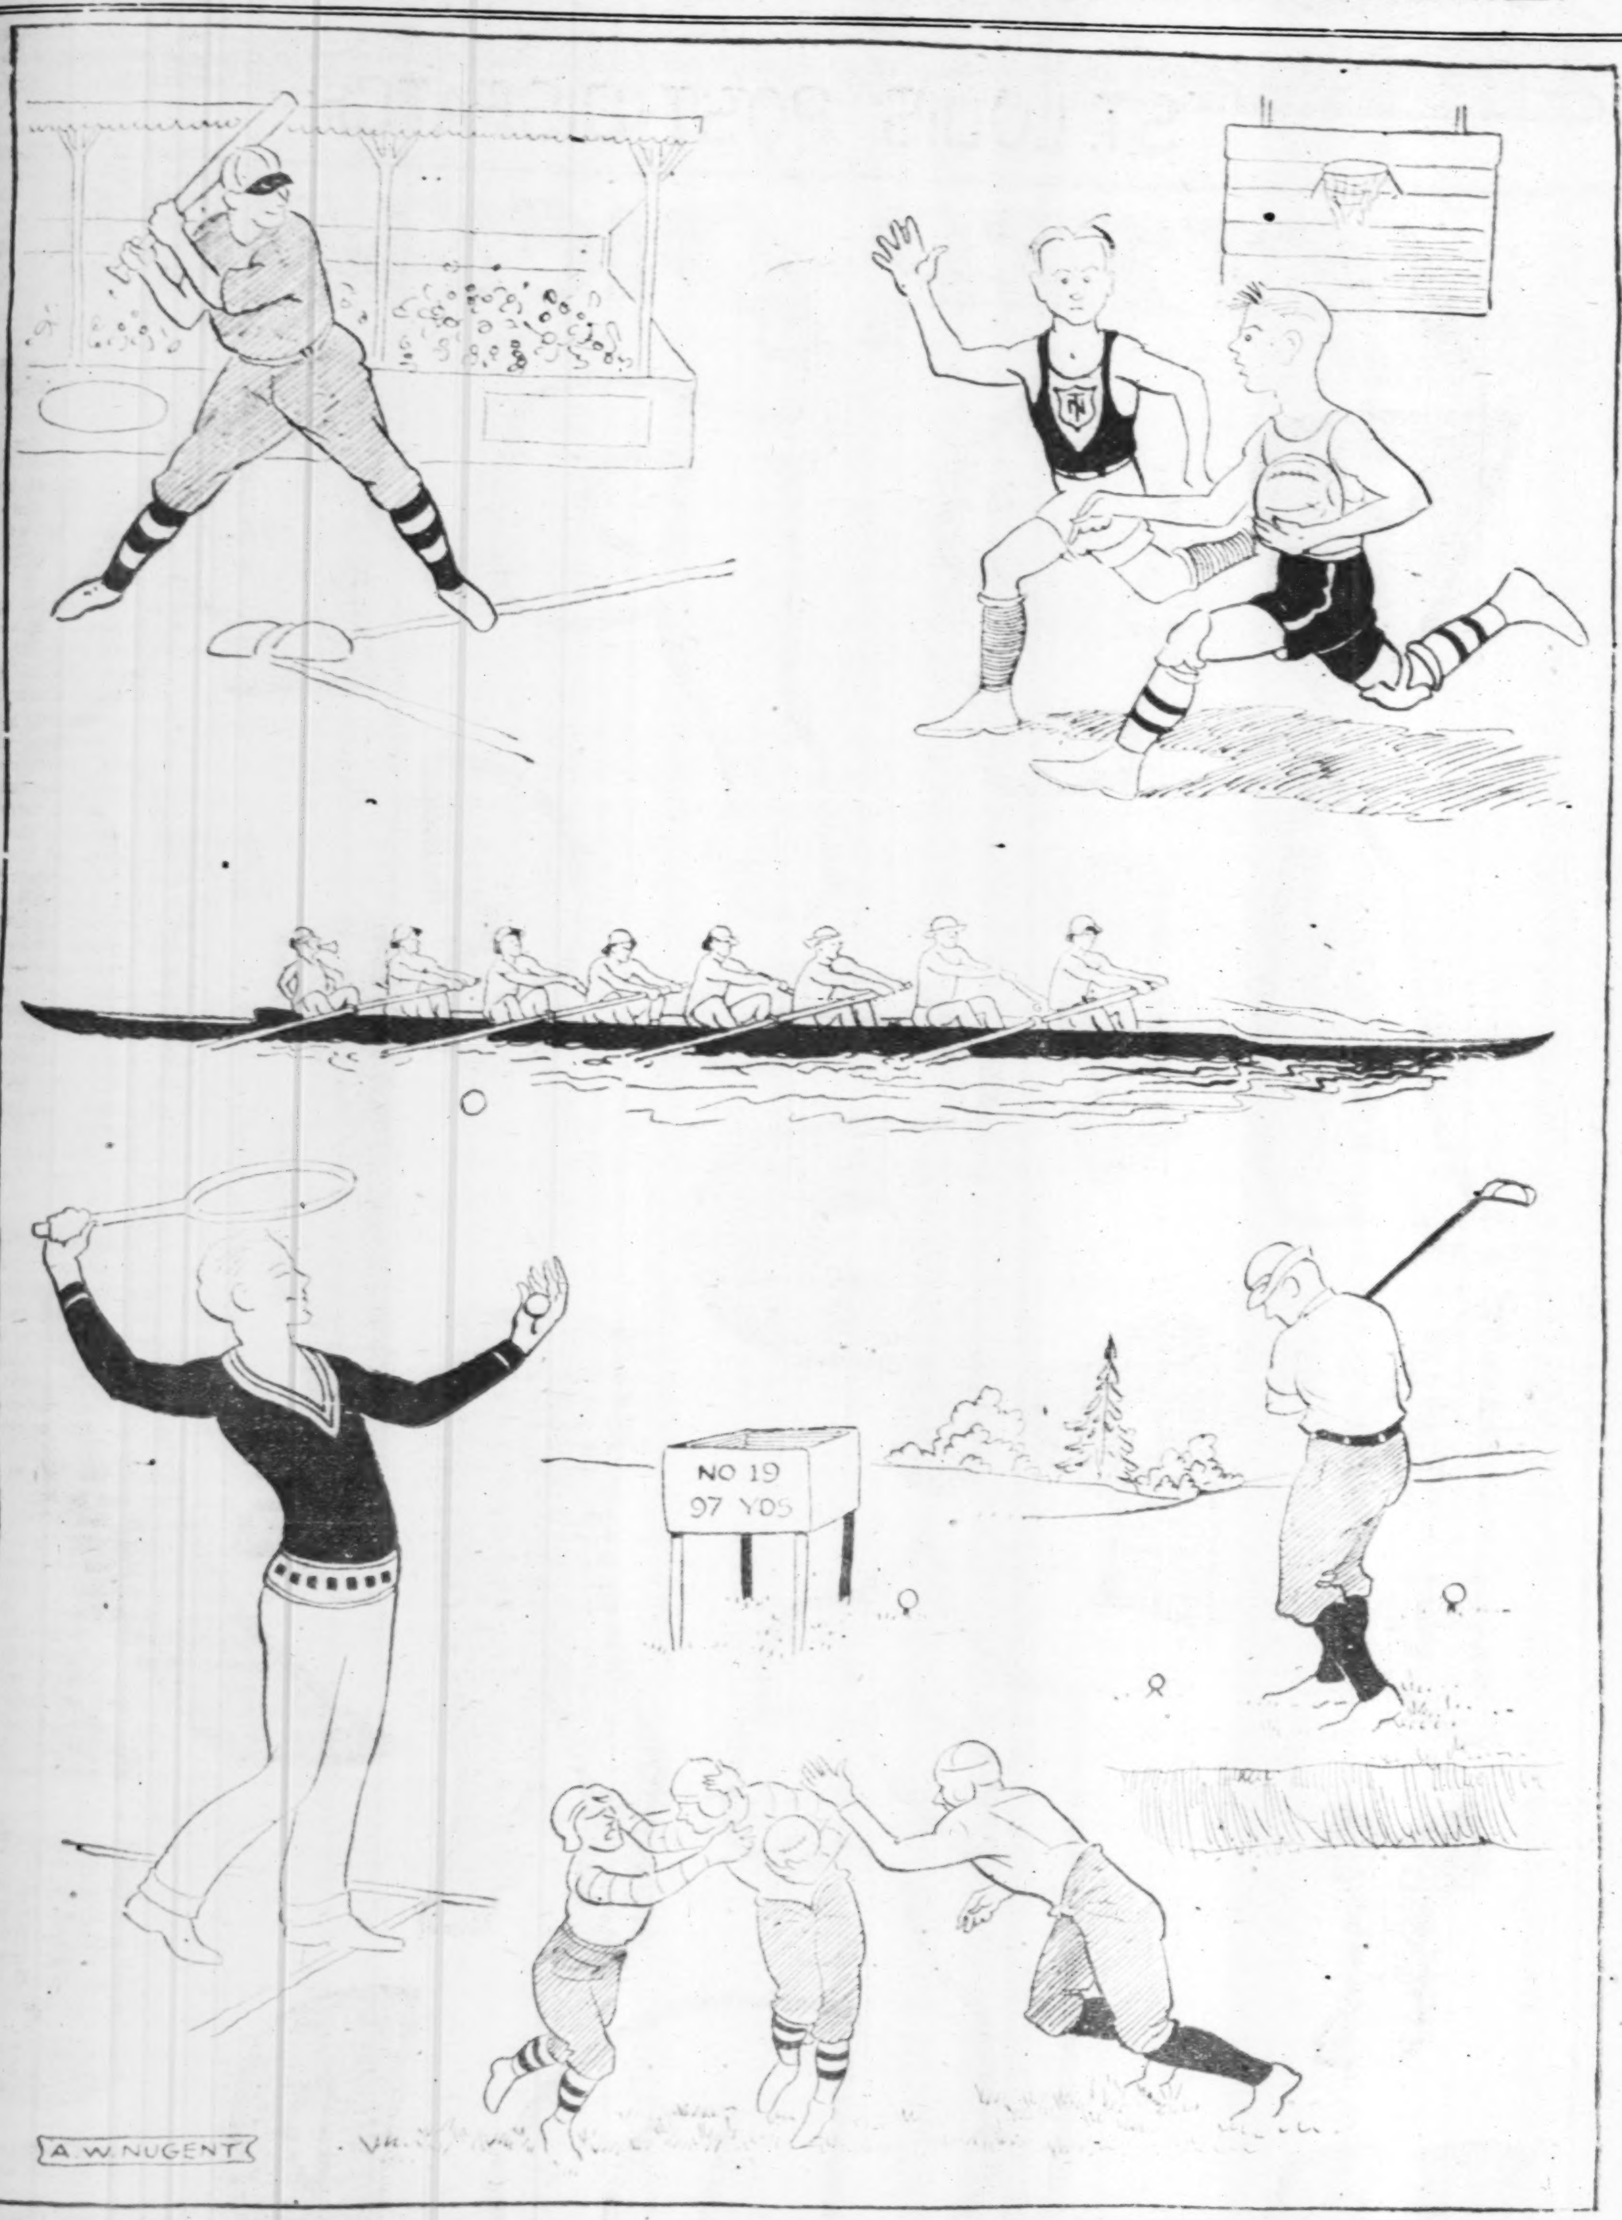
WHAT IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?



Our artist asked if he couldn't make some sport pictures for us this week, as he is a great devotee of the open spaces. We said yes rather dubiously, for we knew him of old. He presently turned in the picture you see above. He has made at least one grave mistake in each of the pictures. For example, there is no 19th hole on a golf course—not on the course, at least. In all, there are fifteen mistakes. Can you find the other fourteen?

The Light in the Deserted Shack

On a shelf in the old shack were found the remnants of a lunch left there at some time by hunters or fishers who camped in the house. This old dried-up food was in a box. Bits of old mouldy cheese were found inside, and through one end rats had gnawed a small hole. From time to time the rats jumped to the chain, in order to climb to the shelf after the food. A rat's weight was enough to pull the chain, turn the light on and when surprised at the lunch the rat or rats on the shelf went down the way they came up and their weight on the chain pulled it again, thus putting out the light. That's all there was to the ghost of Old Man Simons' Folly.

POOR MAN'S WEATHER GLASS

The figures of which the leaves of the horse-chestnut are made up keep flat and fanlike so long as the fine weather is likely to continue. With the coming of rain, however, they droop, as if to offer less resistance to the weather. The scarlet pimpernel is known in England as the poor man's weather-glass and opens its flowers only when the weather is fair.

INGENIOUS PLEA

Little Dickie was visiting his grandma, and after lunch he spoke to him about taking his afternoon nap. He looked shyly at her and did not speak. After a short pause she again mentioned his nap and he said. "Why, grandma, you wouldn't put your company to bed, would you?"

Lionel Atwill vs. Elsie Mackay

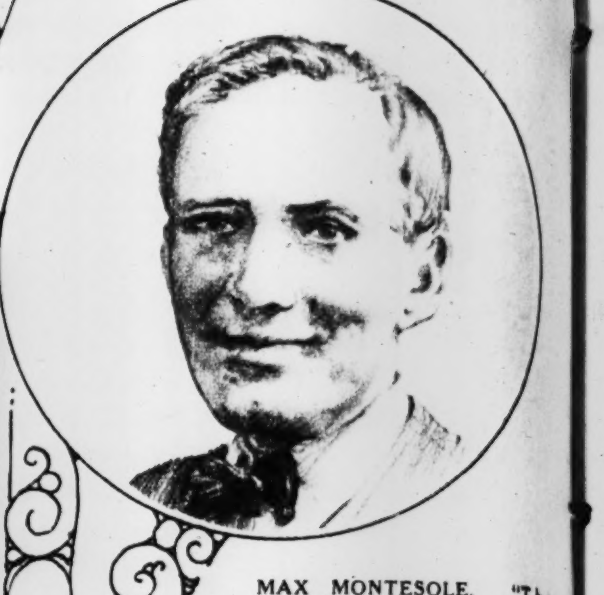
They Are Now Acting Their Stage Parts in Real Life

ELSIE MACKAY. She has just sailed for England on the same ship with the oily Max Montesole who, Lionel Atwill charges, broke up their home.

"Very Happily Married," Everyone Said of Lionel Atwill and Elsie Mackay. Now He Is Suing for Divorce.



MAX MONTESOLE. "The man who stole my wife," says Atwill.

They Have Frequently Acted in Plays of Marital Unhappiness and Deception. Now They Are in Earnest.

By ARTHUR HENRY STRAWN

Special to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

ONE NIGHT, exactly five years ago, a New York audience sat spellbound in the Belasco Theater. The play was "Deburau," a drama of stage life, in which an actor loses the woman he loves. The handsome star, Lionel Atwill, was playing the title role. His wife, Elsie Mackay Atwill, the leading lady, was playing the part of Marie Duplessis, the Parisian beauty who rejects Deburau's love for that of another. In a heart-breaking scene, she visits the broken actor for the last time. Deburau, knowing that he is about to lose her forever, holds her hand tenderly.

"Ah, smile at me," he pleads sadly. "When I let your hand go I shall hold your smile fast!

"With life at its best I wanted you most. "Life's over.

"I've loved you. Now . . . go to your lover."

The faithless one looks at him, smiles and goes . . . to her lover. Deburau, crushed, bows his head. It is a heart-breaking scene. The audience is moved to tears.

That was five years ago. Today, by an ironic twist of fate, Lionel Atwill and his wife are playing exactly similar parts, but this time in real life. And to add to the irony of the situation, the "other man" this time is Max Montesole, an actor whom Atwill himself rescued from obscurity and raised to the position of leading man. But in this real drama of life, Atwill whispered no tender words of farewell and asked for no last smile at their final parting. Instead, shortly after finding his wife and Montesole together in an apartment, he served her with notice of a divorce just 15 minutes before she sailed for England on the steamer Samaria. And the same ship that was carrying Mrs. Atwill to Liverpool numbered among its passengers one Max Montesole.

BUT the chain of circumstances which have made possible the tragi-comical roles which the Atwills are playing in their own version of "Deburau" started as far back as eight years ago. Mrs. Atwill was then Elsie Mackay, the daughter of a very wealthy Australian stockman and an exceedingly good-looking young actress of 23 years. She made her stage debut in London, where she played with Sir Beerbohm Tree and Cyril Maude. She was attractive and capable, although her talents as an actress were not so pronounced as to arouse unlimited enthusiasm. In fact, after she came to this country, many reviews of the plays in which she appeared merely made some such reference to her as "others in the cast who gave satisfactory interpretations of their roles were Elsie Mackay, etc." She had yet to achieve distinction.

In the meantime, Lionel Atwill was also struggling for recognition. He, too, had been born abroad, in England, and had taken up the study of architecture in London. Mathematics was his forte, but ever since he had formed a comic circus in his nursery and had given plays in drawing rooms when only 14, he had cherishel the ambition to become an actor. His work as an architect did not stifle this ambition, so in his spare time he formed a dramatic society and took part in the performance of several old masterpieces.

Atwill, too, made his stage debut in London and then came to America. His first engagement here was with the famous Mrs. Langtry in a vaudeville sketch. Through some native ability, coupled with hard work, experience and love for the theater, Atwill rose steadily and became recognized as a first-rate leading man. He had a number of important, though not stellar roles, his most distinguished performances being those with Mme. Nazimova in a series of Ibsen dramas.

ATWILL was married then, but not to Elsie Mackay. His wife was an English actress, Julia Ralph, who played with him in a number of plays. There was every indication of a happy domestic life. Atwill's rise to eventual stardom was practically assured. He was apparently contented. Then Elsie came upon the stage. This was in 1918. The cast was being chosen for "Another Man's Shoes." Atwill had been given the leading role and Miss Mackay was chosen to play opposite him. Atwill objected to her. He wanted the role given to someone else, possibly to his wife. But the producers refused to consider his objections to Elsie Mackay and made her the leading lady in spite of Atwill's protest.

Rehearsals got under way. At first there was a plainly discernible hostility between the two principals. The atmosphere back-stage was decidedly strained. It was feared for a while that the producers had blundered in choosing a leading lady over the objections of the man who was to play opposite her. The play, it was rumored, would have to be recast. And then, suddenly, everything changed. The rehearsals began to move along spiritedly, with not the least trace of ill feeling between the leading players. All the unfriendliness had vanished. The members of the cast were working together in complete harmony. And it was also discovered about this time that Mr. Lionel Atwill and Miss Elsie Mackay were having tea together every day. Indeed, it was suggested by some wag at the time that it was too bad the play couldn't be renamed "Another Woman's Shoes."

However that may be, the private little domestic drama in which Atwill was playing the combined role of producer and principal moved rapidly toward a climax. Within six months after he had met Elsie Mackay, Lionel Atwill sued his wife for divorce. And in February, 1920, almost exactly a year later, Atwill and Miss Mackay were married.

Then came "Deburau," the play of stage life. David Belasco hailed it as one of his greatest productions. He predicted that the play would be his most notable triumph. And he chose Lionel Atwill to play the leading role and Elsie Mackay Atwill to play opposite him. The drama played for six solid months in New York and then was taken off by Belasco solely because of the approach of summer. It was a singular success. In it Lionel Atwill reached dramatic heights he had never before achieved and the critics were unanimous in hailing him as a star. Elsie Mackay Atwill, as the faithless Marie Duplessis, also gained a distinction she had never known before.

LIONEL ATWILL, noted actor who forms the third corner of this triangle. He is suing for divorce.

AS DEBURAU, Lionel Atwill played the part of a great French pantomime actor who had deserted his wife for the blandishments of Marie Duplessis, the original Lady of the Camellias. Marie, after amusing herself with the actor's love, casts him aside and gives her love to the handsome Armand Duval. Deburau's first intimation of her faithlessness comes when he discovers Marie and Duval alone. The blow crushes him and robs him of all ability or desire to act. In his final performance he is hissed off the stage, an actor broken by love. So beautifully, so poignantly did Atwill and his wife portray their characters that the critics lauded them to the skies while capacity audiences shed copious tears. But the dark powers of life, for whom all men are but so many little puppets, must have smiled maliciously at this touching little spectacle.

Indeed, they even gave Atwill some slight forewarning of the fate in store for him. They also heightened the irony of the present situation by putting Mr. and Mrs. Atwill in another play called "The Comedian," very much like "Deburau." Only in this play, Mrs. Atwill, playing the part of Julienne, the actress wife of the comedian, walks out on Atwill in the final act, never to return again!

If these two plays caused Atwill any concern it was far from being apparent. In fact, Mr. and Mrs. Atwill seemed supremely happy. They purchased Douglas Manor, a beautiful mansion at Douglaston, Long Island, which they converted into a luxurious home. They had motor cars, a golf course, tennis courts and a swimming pool. Atwill turned producer on his own account and prospered. And then last fall he decided to produce "Deep in the Woods," a romantic play. He couldn't find a leading man to suit him, until one night he saw Max Montesole playing an unimportant role in "The School for Scandal." Atwill was impressed by Montesole's appearance and engaged him.

Montesole, a very attractive and happy-go-lucky fellow, had already had quite a career before he met Atwill, although his most important parts had been played off-stage, rather than behind the footlights. He is the son of a famous English doctor, a graduate of Marlborough, an officer in the Royal Flying Corps, an actor, and he had married Alice Moffette, and she divorced him.

Then he came to New York, married a beautiful actress, Mary Fowler, and had a child by her. They lived in Greenwich Village. For months Montesole had to occupy dingy quarters. He ate at cheap restaurants. Unable to find work, he began to appear shabby. Then he obtained a part in "The School For Scandal," the biggest part he had been able to obtain since coming to New York. He moved to a more habitable dwelling and began to wear good clothes, of which he has always been very fond. And then Atwill lifted him from obscurity to give him a leading role. The tall sandy-haired, well-groomed Montesole, with his insouciant air, was just the man Atwill was looking for. Atwill engaged him and invited him out to Douglas Manor for a reading of the play.

There he met Elsie Mackay Atwill for the first time. The play intrigued Montesole, who asked for another reading, and still another. Then Mrs. Atwill invited him to stay at the house to rehearse the part. Mr. Atwill, of course, seconded the invitation. Montesole thanked them, and stayed. And there began the revised version of "Deburau," a drama of stage life.

Montesole and Mrs. Atwill fell in love with one another. Their attachment became so marked that Atwill was led to question his wife about it. And she confessed to her husband that Montesole meant more to her than anything else in life. Atwill then did the magnanimous thing. He called the two together. He pleaded with his wife and tried to reason with his rival. Finally, as a compromise, he asked that nothing be done until "Deep in the Woods" had been produced.

SHE'S LAUGHING AT HIM! Lionel Atwill trying, in the play Deburau, to win back his wife, Elsie Mackay. He is not doing so well with this difficult job in real life.

THE play had its premiere in Baltimore, and was scheduled for an opening on Broadway in December. But something happened. The Atwills' domestic affairs reached such a state that Lionel Atwill summarily took Montesole from the lead and closed the show. Montesole came back to New York. Mrs. Atwill promptly left home and took an apartment in the city. Shortly after midnight of December 11, Atwill, accompanied by two detectives and his chauffeur, entered his wife's apartment. Montesole was there. A few hours later Atwill served her with a summons to appear in an action for divorce. And then, Mrs. Elsie Mackay Atwill and Max Montesole boarded the steamer Samaria for Liverpool.

Like Deburau, Lionel Atwill has gone into seclusion and will see no one. Perhaps he is hoping that Elsie will return, just as Deburau hoped that Marie Duplessis would come back. It would be interesting to know which of Deburau's speeches comes to Atwill's mind most frequently.

Does he repeat the passionate lines:

". . . Successs . . . . Applause . . . .
Do you think that is all the good God meant you
To have when he gave you the heart of a man
In the skin of an actor? Gather life's joys while you can;
. . . . And while their applauding still echoes above you,
Find someone to love . . . . and, oh, someone to love you!"?

Or, conscious of the great irony of his role, does he repeat after Deburau:

"Life seems tragic sometimes, no doubt,
But it turns to comedy if you wait it out."?

The Heavens Are Telling

And Professor Edwin B. Frost, Now Almost Blind, Is Still at His Post in Yerkes Observatory Attempting to Penetrate the Mysteries of the Fifteen Hundred Million Spheres That Surround Our Little World

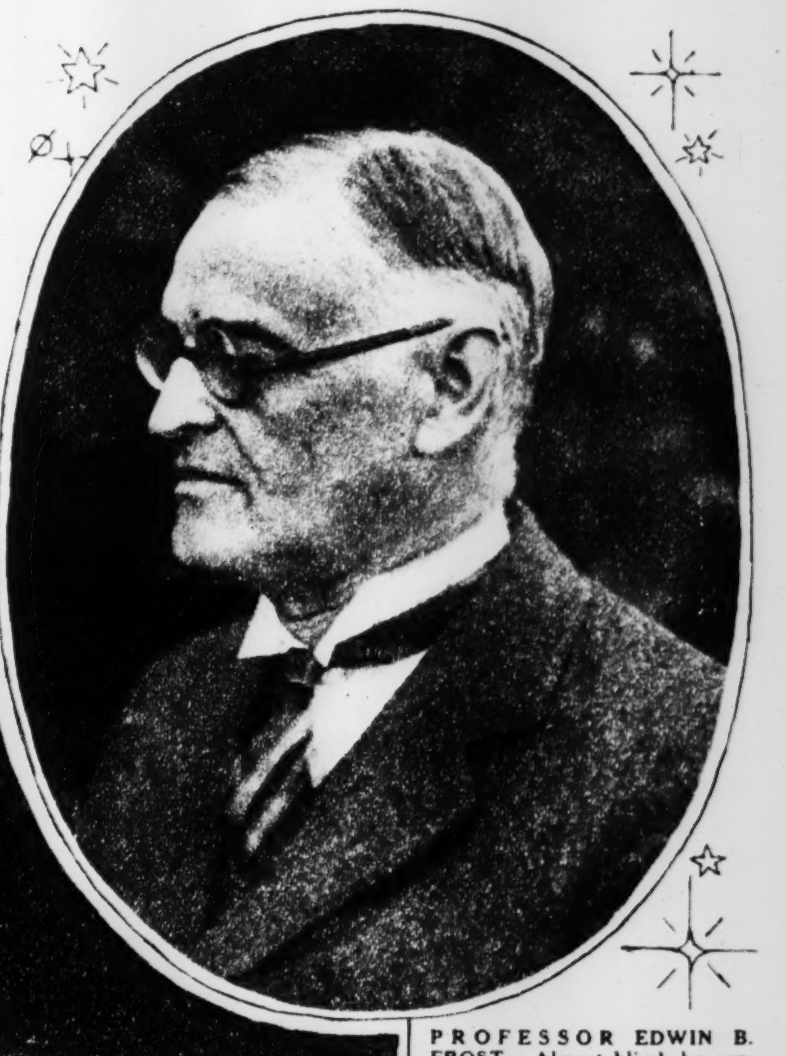
PROFESSOR GEORGE VAN BIESBROECK, in the arctic costume worn by the astronomers at Yerkes Observatory. The building may be seen in the background.



PROFESSOR EDWIN B. FROST. Almost blind, he continues to see beauty in the spheres.

IF THIS GREAT CLUSTER OF SUNS—the nebula of Orion—were to be extinguished tonight the world would still see its light for 800 years. It is 800 light-years away.

LAST YEAR WAS AN "OPEN SEASON FOR COMETS" and 11 were observed by astronomers. They are "tramps of the skies." The photograph shows one of the Brooks comets hurling itself toward the sun.

THE NEBULA OF ANDROMEDA, which was discovered by Abdurrahman, a Persian astronomer a thousand years ago, and before the telescope was invented. But only a telescope could reveal the beauty of that great nebula. It is five million million miles away and so great that light traveling at 186,000 miles a second would take 40,000 years to cross from one end of the nebula to the other.

YERKES OBSERVATORY, WILLIAMS BAY, Wisconsin.—"The spectacle of the starry heavens is the privilege of everyone who has eyes with which to see," wrote Professor Edwin B. Frost, in his pamphlet, "The Heavens Are Telling." But Professor Frost, himself, has not eyes to see. Vision has been lost to him in the search for stars. The man who for 21 years has directed the destinies of Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago at Williams Bay, Wisconsin, and who edits the Astrophysical Journal, the leading astronomical publication in scientific fields, has given his sight to science. He is like another Beethoven amid the music of the spheres.

Yet even his intimate friends scarcely know how helpless is the man in regard to vision. The casual visitor would never observe the fact. He sees—somewhat. A blurred and darkened world with moving shapes is suggested to him. And with his cane to point a way, and the air currents in the observatory halls to guide him, he moves about with such precision that one is astonished when those who know him best—as Professor George Van Biesbroeck, his chief aide—seek to anticipate his movements, to guide him with a nurse's tenderness.

Beethoven, grown deaf in the midst of his music, was a rebel. Professor Frost, blind among the dazzling splendors of the heavens that he loves, is patient, philosophical and firm in faith. He can even smile, amusedly.

PROFESSOR FROST whirled in his desk chair and groped on the book-shelf behind him. There was just a hint of uncertainty in his movement. He took down a bound volume of the Astrophysical Journal.

"I am, you see," he said, "a journalist myself. This is my publication. Isn't it a beauty?" He turned the pages in his fingers as though with a delicate appreciative sense of the good quality of the paper, and one could believe that behind those thick glasses the eyes really saw the beauty of the printed page.

He smiled: "It's curious, isn't it?" he said. "An editor who cannot see?"

But it wasn't curious. His interviewer recalled the names of a great editor and some near-great ones who had been so afflicted.

Professor Frost smiled. "Well," he said. "It doesn't seem to affect our circulation much. But for that matter neither did the war. You might be surprised. Despite war troubles our circulation in England remained the same. We have subscribers in China, Japan, India, the Philippines, in every country of Europe." He was proud of that.

"But tell me," he was asked, "how were your eyes affected?"

"What is the difference?" was his rejoinder. "My difficulties are personal. They do not interest the world. And they are infinitesimal. I would rather not talk of them. The loyalty of my associates helps me conquer them. That is enough."

If not, at least it was all. Of comets Professor Frost would talk. Of sun spots. Of the visions of the night. But of himself, there was nothing he would tell.

A tall New Englander, lean and spare, with graying hair, and thinning. Fine wrinkles are about those deep-set blue eyes, the wrinkles one sees in the eyes of those who look at distance. His face is seamed, as by exposure to the weathers, for the observer at a telescope is so exposed. The eyes and the alert responsiveness of the face gives the impression of a seeing man. A baggy suit of gray hangs from square shoulders. There is the white wood cane without which he scarcely moves. His feet were encased in heavy arctic overshoes.

In fact, when one stepped from the crisp snowy night into the heated halls of the Yerkes Observatory, one had the impression of entering upon a field of arctic exploration. So were the scientists therein dressed. Professor Frost wore a heavy cap, a muffler and a heavy coat. Professor Van Biesbroeck in fur cap, comforter, heavy coat and sheepskin mukluks—the wool inside—might have stepped, one thought, from the Klondyke. Other watchers of the stars were so accoutred. Yet steam hissed merrily from the radiators and the new thermostats registered above summer heat.

One couldn't understand it then, but the passing hours would show the reason.

QUICKLY Professor Frost called off the names of certain St. Louisans. "Do you know them?" he asked. "Dartmouth men. They came up to Chicago for the Dartmouth game. Dartmouth, you know, didn't show so badly against Chicago."

Having confessed an ignorance of the stars, it was not for the interviewer to confess a total ignorance of football. He knows now that it was a victory of 33 to 7 for Dartmouth.

"Not so bad," he parried. Professor Frost fairly glowed with his enthusiasm. "There were a lot of us Dartmouth men got together afterwards. Among them those I named. We weren't ashamed of the old school."

The muscularity of his body, the strength of his chin, suggested he, too, might have played football. But the dreamer and ascetic was uppermost in the man. Suddenly, he said:

"Did you see that wonderful show in the sky tonight?"

Walking along on the windswept shore of Lake Geneva one had seen it—a crescent moon hung low in the heavens, and near it, triangulating with the upturned sickle-points, the planet Venus, so that the crescent and the star—Islam's symbol—hung glowing there, in the crisp bright air.

"Beautiful, wasn't it?" It was as though the man himself had witnessed the phenomenon. One recalled those placid uncomplaining words from "The Heavens Are Telling":

"If it is a transparent night, the eye beholds the stars of many degress of brightness and of varied shades of color, shining steadily from above and twinkling near the horizon, while some brilliant planet with serene radiance may be a dominant factor in the scene. . . . Athwart the arch of the heavens will appear the soft outline of the Milky Way. . . . The scene is one of beauty not soon to be forgotten. Such a view can hardly fail to inspire in the observer a feeling of wonder and of worshipful admiration of this partial exhibit of the external universe. . . . The pleasure is the greater for those who have often watched the stars and have come to know the constellations, so that each hour of the night brings new but familiar stellar friends into view."

That pleasure now to him denied.

But there was no sigh. There was no regret in the tone of Professor Frost's voice as he told of the beauty of the early night. It was as if a poet spoke, so great was his enthusiasm. And it was as if that poet had really seen.

FOR there must be part of poet and part of explorer in these men who devote their lives to the study of the vastness of the skies. "Astronomy," observed Professor Frost, "isn't exactly a practical science." He spoke of it as compared to chemistry, physics, those sciences which function in the industrial and commercial development of our country. But even as he spoke those unseeing eyes, back of their thick glasses, were focused upon something that may be more important than our civilization—upon infinity. The astronomer seeks to study the secrets of the universe. To the laws that underlie creation the stars may hold a clew.

Infinity—that is the word. Up at Williams Bay infinity enters into some of those complex mathematical computations by which they work out, for instance, a comet's path. In the earlier stages of those figures, before the exact orbit is known, the computations of the parabola are based frankly upon the infinity of space.

And even when they measure—Professor Frost and his assistants—they use figures that are as incomprehensible as infinity to the average man. The sun, they have learned, is 500,000 times as bright as the moon. The distance of that sun from earth is 93,000,000 miles. If an airplane traveled at the rate of 100 miles an hour it would take the flier 106 years to reach the sun. But it would take 1000 years of constant flying to pass the planet Saturn, and quite 3000 years of ceaseless flight to attain the frontier of our solar system by reaching Neptune.

And then the journey would just be begun. To reach our nearest neighbor among the stars that impossible aviator traveling without a break through space must be flying for 27,000,000 years.

ONE learns the reason of those subarctic costumes if one enters the observatory's towers—there are three—even on a night like this. The largest of the three domes houses the great Yerkes telescope, the largest in the world. The floor raises and lowers to enable the observer to adjust his telescope to that segment of the heavens which holds his interest. The great dome is erected on a turntable to that same end. You pass from the heated hallway through stout steel doors into the great circular brick inclosure.

A glint of hoar-frost is on the wooden floor. The steel stand of the telescope rises 62 feet above, the telescope itself about 30 feet further, almost touching the dome through the observation slit in which one sees the stars, as in a haze.

There had been talk of comets and Professor Van Biesbroeck was to have proudly shown the one he discovered this year, but the observer was disappointed. That hoar-frost augured ill. A haze had come up outside. The weather was moderating. Warm air striking the cold in the observatory tower condensed into frost. To protect the big lense the rift in the dome must be closed with canvas. But one could understand the conditions under which these men work, sitting still through hours in that intense winter cold, and following the movement of the stars with that delicately adjusted telescope of which the mechanism is as carefully adjusted as a watch.

Van Biesbroeck's comet is one of 11 that were seen in the skies last year. Out of his head Professor Frost recalled them:

There was Schajn's, discovered at Odessa; that of Reid, a Capetown amateur, found in South Africa; that of Orkisz, a Pole; the periodic comet of Temmel, an Italian, and that of Wolff, a German, which appears about every eight years; there was one of the periodic comets discovered by Brooks, an observer with several to his credit; a new one, discovered by Borrelli, a Frenchman, at Nice; that of Faye, another Frenchman, which returns periodically; the Peltier comet, discovered at Delphos, Ohio; that of Professor Van Biesbroeck, and, lastly, that of G. E. Ensor of Pretoria, South Africa, found on December 19, and not to be seen in our hemisphere. An open season for comets!

SOMETHING of Columbus in these men, something of the prospector, panning the desert sands for gold. One can feel that excitement of discovery in their scientific explanations. One never knows what the heavens may reveal. There is the story of Professor Biesbroeck's comet.

There are unending tasks before the great telescopes of the world. Their time is occupied, fully, with the important work that is before them. Consequently—though it seems a paradox—most of the discoveries of comets are made by amateurs. These are reported to Harvard University, which disseminates the information. The great observatories check on them. They devote their telescopes to more important uses while the comet wings its way toward the sun. At its nearest approaches they will study it for a few days or nights. As it wings away again they permit the smaller instruments to follow it.

So it was that when Harvard telegraphed Yerkes Observatory that Peltier, an amateur, had found a comet Professor Van Biesbroeck turned the big telescope in the direction where the "tramp of the skies" was reported seen, to check again the report it had no tail. He never found it. Peltier had neglected to report that it had been seen three days before the Yerkes telescope was turned that way. And it traveled with a startling rapidity.

But, as he searched, another stranger appeared in his vision in the vicinity where the Peltier comet should have been, according to the first report. He could tell, as he watched, that the speed was not that of Peltier's. Moreover, this comet had a tail. The observer was on the threshold of a discovery. Peltier's comet he let go by. He watched his own. He saw it grow more distinct. Other observers caught and checked Peltier's. There could be no doubt that they were not the same. Professor Van Biesbroeck had found a comet of his own.

Day after day he watched it travel, platting the arc of its path. Still it is coming on. Enough has been learned to show that it is not a comet of which science has a record.

"How long until it returns?" asked Professor Frost. Professor Van Biesbroeck shook his head. "We have not computed that. Surely not less than 500 years; possibly not for 1000." They travel great distances, those comets in their flight.

FOR 21 years Professor Frost has directed the study of these and other heavenly phenomena. In June a year ago, following a period of unseasonable weather, it was hinted that sun spots lowered the sun's radiation and lessened its heat. Professor Frost pointed out that the radiation was from 1 to 3 per cent under par. But the sunspot theory he refused to accept. "We are in the middle of a period of depression of solar radiation," he explained. "It progresses in a huge rythmic cycle, reaching a climax every 22 years. But when the cycle reaches the depression stage it does not mean that the sun is cooling off."

Talk turned to eclipses and the sun. Two years ago two famous specialists had promised Professor Frost they could restore his sight and that by the time of the sun's eclipse on January 24, last year, he would be able to observe it.

No such total eclipse had been visible in the northeastern part of the United States since 1806. Another would not be visible there until 2024. What opportunities it presented to a scientist!

Not that Professor Frost talked of them. Not one word did he mention of the promise made to him. Quietly he told the story of how the Yerkes Observatory's expedition, which he directed, made its way to Iron Mountain, Michigan, with half a million dollars' worth of scientific apparatus.

And he smiled as he told of it, of the joke infinity had played upon mere man. For the day was cloudy. The eclipse could not be observed.

And there was another story of the expedition to Catalina Island in 1923, under Professor Frost's direction, in which the scientists were unable to get a glimpse of the eclipse. "And yet," he said, "you know what California climate is, in the region of Los Angeles."

THE interview came to an end. The blind star-gazer handed his visitor a pamphlet—"The Heavens are Telling," which is circulated by the thousands through the American Institute of Sacred Literature to the ministers of the gospel throughout the world.

And, as I left the observatory, from that pamphlet I caught these words about the laws that control the skies:

"It seems to be a sacred and reverent duty to thoughtful men to go on with the study of those laws and to find man's relation to them. When they bear most heavily against him he will seek to adapt himself to them, and he will always have as a supreme illustration these words of Christ: 'Thy will, not mine, be done.'"

More than all he had said those words disclosed the man.

A St. Louis Girl, Annie Laurie Warmack, Was Recently Presented to the King and Queen of England. On This Page She Tells the Colorful Story of the Ceremonies.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

TO BE presented to the King and Queen of England is a privilege allowed 12 Americans at each royal reception in Buckingham Palace. This privilege was accorded, at the last reception, to a St. Louis girl, Annie Laurie Warmack, and she, recently returned from Europe, consented the other day to tell me the detailed story of the presentation. It was interesting and colorful throughout.

Miss Warmack is the daughter of Mrs. Robert N. Warmack of the St. Regis Apartments and the late Robert N. Warmack. She has been a great favorite in the exclusive social set since her debut five years ago. And it was quite in order that this newest distinction should have fallen to Miss Warmack, even though it is an honor many travelers of social distinction have striven for in vain. It came about in the simplest, most natural way, without any of the wire pulling commonly associated with the procedure. The invitation just fell into her lap, Miss Warmack declares, and while not insensible to the distinction, since it was not sought she was left free to view the whole affair from an abstract unofficial angle, with a perspective which makes her tale all the more sprightly. It was like taking part in a fairy tale pageant, she says.

"Quite casually a year ago, when Mr. Kellogg was our Ambassador, a friend asked me if I should like, on my contemplated trip abroad, to be presented at the English Court," she related. "Quite casually, believing it was just an idle compliment on his part, I said that assuredly I would. I didn't suppose he would ever think of it again.

"I remember we discussed the significance of such an honor, whether or not it should have any significance to a patriotic American, and I took the position that it was mere provincialism or pretense that would cause an American to scorn an opportunity to rub elbows with the mighty of another land, even though they were to our democratic eyes only figureheads. I thought English politics immensely interesting and believed English women, with the political associations to which they are so freely admitted by their men, led more interesting lives than American women who are left to herd together except in the purely social sense, with little more interesting to think and talk about than gossip, personalities and clothes.

"AS FOR the pomp and ceremony, tradition and precedents maintained by the English Court, since they mean so much to them, I thought visiting foreigners ought greatly to respect them. I was not unappreciative, either, of the prestige given by a court presentation, since there are many functions to which one is not invited in England unless the guest list is approved by the King and there is a tradition that he scratches the names of those who have not been formally presented, especially if his wife is to be present. Then there is the further prestige assured by the fact that it is supposed to be impossible for persons without a certain amount of social background to be thus vouched for by their own ambassador. All invitations come finally and officially through the Embassy of the country of which one is a citizen.

"Well, when Mr. Kellogg was recalled to become Secretary of State, I thought that was the end of my invitation, which had been merely speculative at best," continued Miss Warmack, "but when Mr. Houghton returned to Washington for his new portfolio at London, something must have been said to him, for one day I received a cablegram signed by a secretary of the Embassy asking at which drawing room I should prefer to appear. We were not going abroad until June, so those in May were out of the question. Investigating a little, I learned that Lady May Cambridge was to be presented at the second one in June. Knowing she is spoken of as the possible fiancee of Prince Henry or even the Prince of Wales, I had a curiosity to see one who may be the future Queen of England. So I chose this one and cabled my response accordingly.

"BEFORE my message could have been replied to, a formal invitation signed by the Ambassador himself arrived by mail. With it were instructions that I apprise the Embassy of my arrival and London address four weeks before the date of the drawing room. This I did and in due time received an invitation to tea at the Embassy.

"At the tea I met the 11 other Americans who were to attend the same drawing room. Miss Matilda Houghton, the Ambassador's daughter, a most charming young girl, came in and put us all very much at ease, saying she had been presented while they were still at Berlin and she would tell us just how we would be expected to conduct ourselves according to time honored and imperative precedents.

"She pictured the plan of the throne room at Buckingham Palace, how we would enter at one end of the long chamber, have a view of the Court at the other end and all the diplomatic corps ranged upon raised platforms on either side. How we would pass on to a hall which parallels one side of the chamber and re-enter at the other end within a few paces of the King. How we would side-step the few paces in front of a row of chamberlains who would have our cards and be passing them from one to another to the Lord High Chamberlain who stood next to the King, and who would announce our names. Just how we were to curtsy before his Majesty, take exactly three more side-steps which would bring us in front of the Queen, before whom we would again curtsy and take three more side-steps before falling back into the line which would move on out into another hall bringing us back into another chamber where we would be free to follow our own devices.

"She rehearsed us in the curtsies and the side-steps and explained that was all that would be expected of us. Nobody was expected to utter a word to the King or the Queen. Then we women discussed the instructions we already had received officially as to what we should wear. A white veil of tulle, three Prince of Wales feathers in the hair, a train which must lie on the floor at least half a yard, and white gloves being the mandatory features. She told us also about the anteroom in which we would wait in the interval between our arrival at about half after eight and the assembling of the Court at nine o'clock.

"'And if you see any women with their feathers pinned on at a grotesque angle and wearing their gowns frumpishly, don't smile, for they may be some of the greatest ladies in England,' she warned us.

"AT LAST the evening of the drawing room arrived," continued Miss Warmack, "and although we were not due until eight-thirty we had been warned that we had better start about seven since a thousand persons are invited to each drawing room and the traffic congestion round the Mall causes many delays. These thousand persons comprise all the newly created nobles, knights and ladies or those who have succeeded to new titles, who must be presented all over again in their new roles, even though they have been there before, many officers of the army and navy, all the eligible debutantes, for it is through the court presentation that they are officially launched, and all the guests of the different embassies.

"A procession round the Mall which is just outside the Palace grounds, is one of the traditional features and I was soon to see why. The populace gathers in a dense mass upon either side to inspect the guests of their Majesties. And they do it thoroughly, I can assure you. If we were feeling rather exalted they brought us down to earth. If we were not looking as well as we should to grace such an occasion, we were told of that too. We might have been caged animals in a circus parade, from the freedom of their comments. If I had been alone in the automobile I don't know how I should have weathered their frank remarks, but I was accompanied by the wife of a New York Congressman and with our combined sense of humor we managed to rise to the occasion. At every stop as many as could climb on our running board would peer in and inspect us from top to toe, commenting not only upon details of our costumes but upon our personal characteristics.

"We were much diverted, not knowing which of us was meant, when one young person inspecting us called to her friend, 'Come and see this gell, Mame, she looks better than the other one.'

"THE English point to this custom, cheerfully gone through with by all concerned, as proving that nowhere is there such democracy as in their country.

"It was a bit of comic relief which gave the next incident a greater thrill. This was when we saw the equipage of Beatrice, the Princess Royal, emerge from the grounds of her residence across the Mall and sweep past us. It was a coach drawn by four white horses with postillions and outriders, just like a carriage from an old romance. We enjoyed it indeed.

"Inside the palace gates we found ourselves in a huge courtyard where, on either side of the driveway, were guardsmen in high beaver hats standing rigidly at attention, with swords presented. Down near the entrance a gorgeously uniformed band was playing.

"On the first floor, as we entered the Palace, we were shown by other dignified functionaries to dressing rooms, where we left our wraps. Then we were escorted up a magnificent grand stairway lined as close as could be with more guardsmen, immovable as wax figures. In the anteroom we sat and chatted with whomever sat next us, being careful, as we had been warned, not to indulge in personalities.

"The presentation ceremony turned out to be much as it has been described innumerable times. If any of us had been in danger of missing a cue there was one busy little functionary, I didn't learn his title, who buzzed about us like a bumble bee, prompting us at every turn.

"As for myself, I think I never shall quite recover from the shock of hearing my name, 'Miss Annie Laurie Warmack,' read out in so loud and sonorous a tone in such impressive surroundings as I stood just in front of the King.

"HOWEVER, I was so busy taking in as many details as possible while remembering my part in the ritual, that I had not much time in which to become self-conscious. The King and Queen do not sit upon their state thrones at the drawing rooms, but upon temporary ones at the edge of the dais before which we passed. Standing beside the King, I recognized from their pictures the Duke of York, Prince Henry and Viscount Lascelles. There were many other members of the royal family, but I was surprised to observe in the reception group many persons not of the oldest nobility, also. Among these, the Earl of Birkenhead, who was born plain Frederick Smith.

"Just beyond the Queen sat the Duchess of York, Princess Mary and the Princess Royal. And I quite fell in love with the Queen. She had such a friendly manner as I stood before her.

"Surely not enough credit has been given her magnetic personality. She seemed not a bit stiff, as reported, but rather to radiate good feeling. She never betrays the slightest weariness or boredom, they say, though these ceremonies must become very wearisome, year after year. Certainly, as a Queen she does her work well. To me, she seemed every inch a Queen.

"She was robed in a tight-fitting long skirted cloth of gold gown with a ribbon blazing with decorations across her bodice and round her neck and upon her brow the crown jewels from the Tower. She affects a style of her own as is well known, but, indeed, why should she follow others? She is not a frump by any means. She is always perfectly groomed and it is a style that she has made stand for all that is regal and stately. Bobbed hair and short skirts never can seem really royal until she adopts them.

"And then, though you seldom hear it said, the Queen is really beautiful. Photographs of course give no idea of her coloring. Her hair is real gold except where it is becoming frosted a little with white. Her skin is like a rose leaf, and beautiful skin to me is the first requisite of feminine beauty. The Princess Mary has the same coloring. One is struck with the intense blueness of the eyes of all the family. None of the women over whom the Queen holds immediate authority uses any makeup since she doesn't approve of it. She and the Princess Mary stand the test of the bright lights and are still radiant, though the rule is rather hard on some of the other women, who seemed too pale. The King—I wonder if any King would not suffer in the shadow of such a radiant personality as this Queen. Yet King George is not altogether eclipsed. I had time to feel that he had very friendly eyes as his glance lingered just a little upon me and then there was just the right touch of masculine gallantry toward his consort as he bowed me on toward her.

"THERE was time to note that Prince Henry is the best looking of the royal brothers. He must tower several inches above the Prince of Wales, who, unfortunately for us, was away on his travels. That the Princess Mary, like the Queen, is much better looking without her hat, that the little Duchess of York wore her quaint banged coiffure and that as usual she hovered close to the Queen.

"Out in the next room, which was the picture gallery, the scene was very gay and gorgeous with so many splendid uniforms and colorful gowns. The Earl of Birkenhead had actually recognized me and I had a little chat with him and there were many introductions and names that sounded very grand indeed.

"The reception concluded, the royal party passed through, chatting by the way, and on to their own supper room. In a state dining room we were served standing, buffet fashion, with a wonderful array of food, hot or cold, as one chose, and champagne. I have always been interested in old china and the display in cabinets round the walls of all the sets of dishes used by successive kings and queens, was fascinating to me. Then we roamed at will through the state apartments of the Palace. At about 12 o'clock, and so fully had the time been occupied that I could not believe so many hours had gone by, the party began to disperse.

"This was not the last we were to see of the King and Queen, for we were all requested to return at a stated time a few days later to sign the Queen's guest book, a graceful method of disposing all at once of the problem of party calls.

"By this time," concluded Miss Warmack, with a playful gesture of mock ennui, "of course I was beginning to feel very much at home in Buckingham Palace and in the presence of royalty.

"And still later in the season all who had attended the drawing rooms were invited to an enormous garden party in the palace grounds. Here the atmosphere was much more informal and it was possible, if one could get near enough to them in the throng, to have a few words of conversation with the King and Queen."

GILBERT, Arkansas.—The church house on the hill is locked and silent now. The Buffalo River which ripples and tumbles on its restless journey past this little village of the hills is about the only sign of activity. The quaint inhabitants of the Incoming Kingdom drive their donkeys to and fro with an air of hopelessness and chagrin. Plainly they are blue—as blue as the great Buffalo Hills which loom high and silent on the south, or as the somber tops of the Boston Mountains which one discerns through the breaks in the ridges to the west. Fate has not dealt kindly with the Incoming Kingdom colony. Trouble there is, alas, nothing but trouble, in this land of Canaan.

Not many months ago the village of Gilbert was alive industrially and vibrating with religious fervor. Nightly came the sound of "exhortin'" from the church house. Almost daily the clear and sparkling waters of the Buffalo cleansed the souls of converts just as did the waters of the Jordan in the long ago. Praises of the Lord reverberated along those ridges all the way from Pumpkin Flat to Bear Creek and the community was abustle with preparation for the day when Jehovah should pour out his wrath in war and earthquake upon a sinful world and Christ should come to reign over the earth and its peoples from the rocky summit of Gin Hill. The Kingdom's inhabitants—that is, all except the "devil scratchers" and "low-bush Baptists"—were to be the favored children of the Lord and were to prosper in life eternal, with nothing to do but sing hallelujahs and salvage the spoils of an otherwise devastated world. Happy and glorious was to be the future of Gilbert and fruitful the lives of the followers of "Brother John" Battenfield.

But, sad to relate, there came a disenchanting hitch in the Lord's elaborate plans. Not only one, but a series of such reverses as never before assailed the faith of a devout people hearkening to their prophets. In the first place, the great religious war, the world-wide conflict of 1923, which was to have separated the grain from the tares, or, in other words, the followers of John Battenfield from the low-bush Baptists, was a flat fizzle. The Kingdom spent three years getting ready for it, laying in great quantities of provisions, and then not even a good-sized rumor of war developed. Next, the prophet said there would certainly be a disastrous earthquake that would destroy everything outside the sacred confines of Gilbert. That turned out to be a dud, like the war, and the tornado that was to have followed it failed just as dismally. Finally, to cap it all, Brother John kept his followers up all night waiting to see him raise a dead man, and then the corpse refused even to stir. Was ever a colony of miracle workers beset by such misfortunes? Even if the lightning hadn't struck the church house and Dan Peek's goats hadn't butted Brother John over a cliff, what wonder was there that certain unbelievers should speak up and cast discredit on the leader's prophecies?

THE doubters did just that, and now look at the state of affairs in the Incoming Kingdom settlement. The house is divided against itself and woe is over Israel. The church stands empty and idle because each side has locked the other out. The roller mill and the canning factory are closed because the successive blows dealt to the colony's religious hopes have fallen on its industry as well, and the present leaders of the two contending factions aren't preaching any more because they haven't any place to preach in the first place, and—well, what's the use, anyway? Since getting himself locked up in a New York insane asylum Brother John has moved the date of the millennium up to 1972 and that is a long time for anybody to wait for a millennium after expecting it for nearly three years. But there is one thing that the faithful want distinctly understood about Brother John's presence in an asylum, and that is he isn't crazy. And he didn't desert his people because of disappointment or doubters or goats. No, sir! He is under restraint because he showed the Jews of New York that he was a messenger of Christ and they locked him up for revenge. That's what it was!

The traveler alighting in Gilbert from the celebrated "slow train"—or, in fact, the only train—of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railway may not perceive at first the whirlpools and rapids which lurk under the outwardly peaceful stream of life that drifts along on the banks of the turbulent Buffalo. How unlike the fitful river it appears. The Buffalo, coming from nowhere of importance and going nowhere in particular, tears along as if its mission were one of mighty portent. The village presents a scene of undisturbed somnolence. A hopeless and rushing resignation, an indescribable dullness and sense of the utter futility of living is what weighs most upon the stranger when he saunters from the station platform—or rather the station, for there isn't any platform—and casts an eye about in quest of a place to "put up" for the night. No sign of anything so strenuous as strife appears; no trace of war or earthquake or awesome prophecy; only a scattering of cottages and cabins stretching up a flinty slope toward the cemetery and oblivion.

If the visitor wants to know the real story of the Incoming Kingdom's woes he had better make sure he is talking to a native and not to a colonist. The colonists are reluctant to discuss such intimate affairs with strangers. They are wary. So are the natives, for that matter. They will tell one "it ain't a good idee to stir up trouble with these folks when we have to live with them." But since the followers of John Battenfield came to these Arkansas hills from the Illinois prairies five years ago they have held themselves somewhat aloof from the original inhabitants of the region. Furthermore, they have referred contemptuously to the natives as "old Southerners" and "corn bread eaters," and that hasn't been conducive to mutual affection. A little insistence upon conversing about the colony and the natives rally to the occasion with gusto.

IN a little while one learns that obscure little Gilbert has been the scene of tragedy and romance and blasted hopes and loud contention before the hills. One hears how old Mrs. Graham hanged herself in the woodshed "on top of the hill thar one night 'cause old man Graham was so mean to her." "I'm going to hell, and you are the cause of it," said the note she left. And one hears how her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Jo Graham, was carryin' on with another man while Frank was away from home and was even plannin' on gettin' a divorce and then, after Frank come back, she got up and confessed it all in church before she had said anything about it to him. Well, Frank was sitting right there and heard every word of it and "when he got her home he took her by the nape of the neck and throwed her bodaciously out the back door." Anyhow, that's the way Aunt Sarah "ketched" it, and Aunt Sarah "ketches" about everything that's loose in the way of gossip and public comment.

Aunt Sarah has her own opinion of these colonists, and she doesn't hesitate to express it. Between more or less accurate shots of tobacco juice at the stove door she will tell anybody that "these here newcomers hain't got no religion atall 'cause they don't shout." Aunt Sarah is a "shoutin' Baptist" and in her 79 years she has run through all the gamuts of religious expression, shoutin' and all. She knows all about religion and about swearing. The villagers are still telling what she called an old mountaineer a while back when he asked her sudden like how she would like to be somebody's wife again.

But how about this man John Battenfield and how did he happen to take unto himself the task of redeeming the sinful world? Well, he came from somewhere in Ohio originally. When he was a boy of 14 he learned the Book of Revelations by heart while sitting on a plow beam between rounds and he carried a Bible to school with him every day. After he grew up he herded sheep out in Wyoming a while and finally settled in Illinois. For some time he mixed preaching with farming and then, in 1920, he rounded up about 250 followers from Clay, Lawrence, Wabash and Wayne counties and they bundled up their belongings, farm machinery and everything, and shipped into the Arkansas hills. They didn't bring any automobiles because automobiles were sinful, and so were railroad trains, only the trains couldn't very well be dispensed with at once. The automobiles would vanish sooner, they said, because a great war was coming and all such materials would be needed for making guns and bullets.

AS to why they chose the Arkansas hills as the site for an Incoming Kingdom, there is a difference of opinion. The colonists say they came here because they longed for solitude in which they could meditate upon the ponderous theme of world destruction and Christ's return to earth. But the natives have another explanation. They assert that the colonists, foreseeing the great oncoming war, were simply "scared to fight, and come to these hills so they could hide out." There is evidence in favor of both explanations. Effort to cultivate an atmosphere like that of ancient Jerusalem so as to make the returning Savior feel at home is apparent and admitted. Horses were discarded in favor of donkeys like that upon which Jesus made His entry into the Holy City, and some of the more faithful have allowed nature to take its course with regard to beard and hair. "Man must return to his natural state and throw aside the vanities of the devil," Frank Graham said to the writer. "It is only then that he will be fit to dwell with God. Here among these hills we expect to return to that state and be ready for the end which John Battenfield has prophesied and which will surely come soon. It is bound to come before 1972."

"MAN MUST return to his natural state," says Graham, unshorn.

The question of why they really came to this rugged region, however, was not so puzzling to the natives in the beginning as that of how they were going to make a living after they got here.

"Us old timers knowed there wasn't enough in these hills to feed them that was here already," a grizzled mountaineer told me. "But they said they didn't count to make no money, but only to get away from the war. Now, I reckon they need money worse than they do a hidin' place from a war. A dollar would look as big as a wagon wheel to any one of them.

"They started out here to make a factory town of this. They built a cotton gin, a roller mill, a canning factory and a printing office, besides the church. Now all of these are shut up except the cotton gin. They seem to have lost interest in everything but fightin' among themselves and callin' each other liars about the Bible. But they had a lot of bad luck here.

"To begin with, they paid too much for the land. These Arkansas hillbillies knew what land here was worth and them newcomers from Illinois didn't. They had been used to paying $200 an acre for farms. Well, when they came here with such notions, the hill billies didn't say nothin' but just charged them all they could and got out themselves with the money. When the colonists saw they had been stuck with a lot of flint rocks some of them tried to go back but they had paid so much for their farms they couldn't and now they have to sit around like the hill billies did and wait for some other suckers to come along. One feller paid $1400 for a piece of land I could have bought for $500. Some others went in together and paid $10,000 for 52 acres which was mostly rock. It sold for $2500 a little while before they came.

"THEIR hard luck didn't stop with paying too much for the land," the speaker went on. "The first year nearly all their crops failed and that again was because farming in Arkansas ain't like it is in Illinois. They planted four or five grains of corn in a hill when this land won't any more than grow one stalk besides the weeds. Then they tried to sow oats without plowing the ground first. Well, about all they harvested was cockle burrs. And they didn't get along well with each other, neither. Most of them bought land in pairs and tried to farm together. Then they were all the time falling out about what crop to plant and what time to go to work and what time to quit. They had it up and down, I'll tell you, and the people here didn't like them much because their women was so high-headed and wouldn't be sociable.

"They used to have rousin' meetings up on the hill. Old Brother John preached about five times a week. He was a powerful exhorter and he used a chart with a lot of drawin's on it of animals and things. There was a picture of a lion, a goat, a bear and a serpent, and there was horses and a fiery furnace and a dead man. I couldn't make head nor tail of it, but he said something about it representin' the seven ages since the fall of man. He was always preachin' about sevens. He said everything goes in a system of sevens, but I don't know if that's a good religion or not.

"Yes, sir, Brother John was a funny feller if ever you seen one. I never could make out whether he was crazy, but he certainly acted quair. I guess he was a pretty good man, though. I never saw anybody who learned so much of the Bible by heart. You oughta seen some of the baptizin's he used to have down at the river. For a while there was one or two every day. Whenever he'd get a convert he wouldn't wait for any more but would take him right down to the Buffalo and put him under before the feller got out of the notion. Lots of the natives here joined at one time or another, but they have been drifting away here lately. I guess there ain't more'n 25 of us old-timers left here who didn't join."

It was about Brother John's deplorable run of luck with his prophecies, however, that the writer wanted to hear, and this account was promptly forthcoming, for the "old timer" had thrown off his reticence and got started, and didn't "care a durn" if them people did find out who told on them.

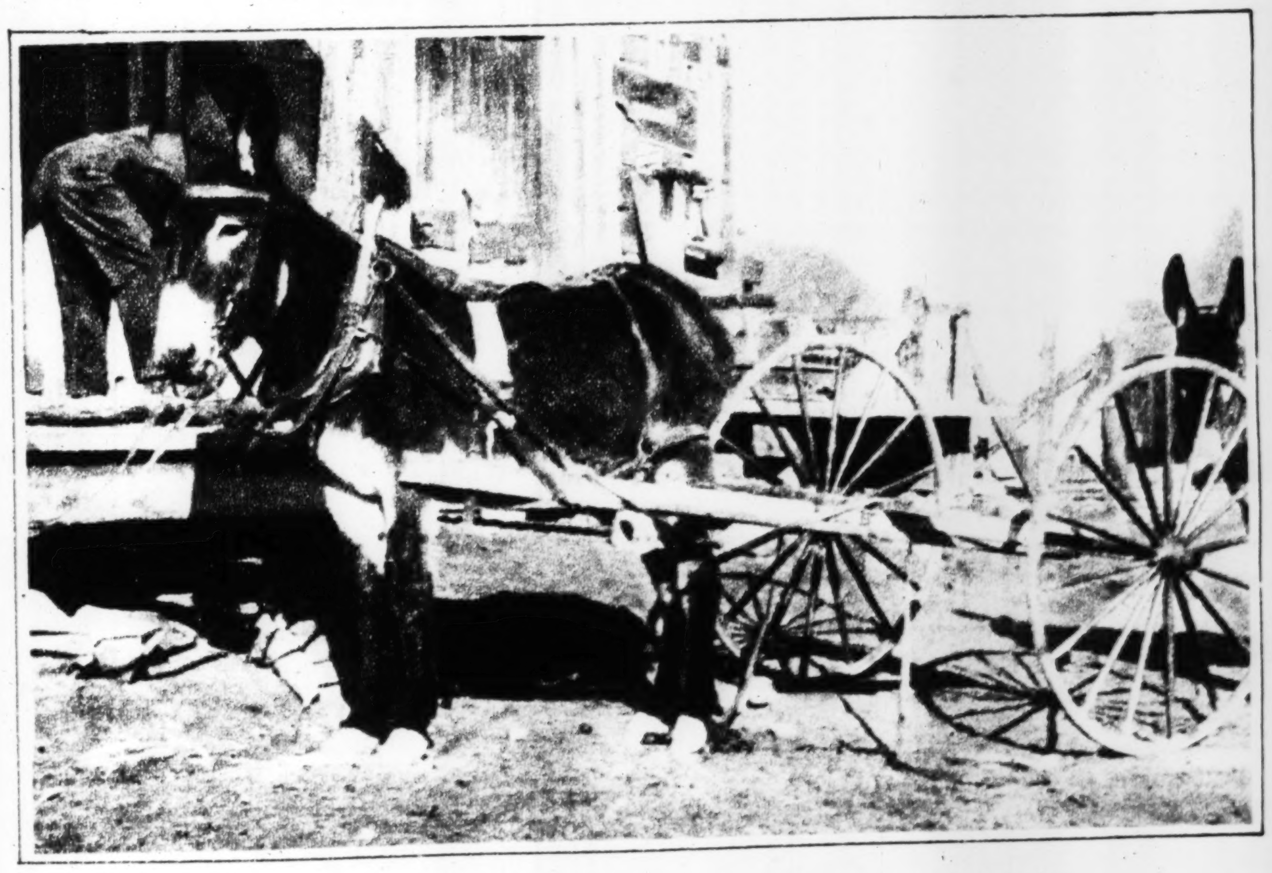
"WELL, the big war was the first thing they figured on. It was to be between the Catholics and Protestants, and everybody to speak of was going to get killed, everybody except John's flock here in the mountains. When the war fell through he decided on a big earthquake that was to do what the war hadn't done. Some of 'em even picked out the houses they was goin' to live in after us low-bush Baptists was out of the way. After settin' a date for the quake, John went to New York to preach to the Jews, but come back in plenty of time for it. All the colonists got ready and on the day it was to happen they took basket dinners and assembled up on top of Gin Hill, where they could see all the fun. Well, sir, they stayed up there on the rocks all day waitin' for an earthquake and the only excitement they got was when somebody found a groundhog den. They was pretty low-spirited after that and when John predicted a cyclone nobody seemed to figure it made much difference. They let the day go by without noticin' it, but when Frank Gould died of pneumonia-fever and Brother John said he would raise him from the dead, everybody got interested again.

"GOULD died about 6 o'clock in the evening, and during the night Brother John had a vision and the Lord appeared and told him to go and raise the dead man. At 9 the next morning he commenced praying and then he got a lot more to help him and they prayed till 11, but nothing came of it. After a while John said the Lord must have meant for Gould to be buried before he was raised, like Christ was, so they buried him in the cemetery up there on Mays Hill and kept on prayin'. That business of tryin' to raise a dead man caused more trouble than the earthquake and war put together. Some of 'em didn't believe in raising dead people and having visions and said so. Dr. Roberts go so mad about it he left the graveyard and Mrs. Lutes Bing wouldn't let her husband go up there at all. She said if he went around raisin' dead men he'd be without a wife, and I guess she would 'a' left him, too.

"WELL, the corpse never showed no sign of coming out of the grave and finally they give it up late in the night and went home. Brother John made them leave the cemetery gate open, though, because he said Gould might rise in the night and wouldn't be able to find his way out. When morning came and the grave was just like they left it, Brother John was a mighty disappointed man. He never was the same afterwards and some folks said he was crazy. Then the colonists started quarrelin' and they're still at it. A lot of 'em have gone away, saying they were goin' visiting, but they never come back and I don't guess they ever will."

The mountaineer had about reached the end of his story, but still he hadn't told about the goats, and he remembered that incident with a chuckle. It seems that Brother John, plunged in melancholy after his series of disappointments, took to "strikin' out" across the hills to Star Mountain, 18 miles away, there to seek solace in the church of Brother Hurd, a kindred soul. The first time he went he didn't say where he was going, but started out walking, loaded down with two suitcases, an overcoat and two pockets full of peanuts. The natives say he was the "beatinest peanut eater you ever saw" anyway, and never went anywhere without a good supply.

He hadn't gone three miles that morning, however, until a pack of dogs set upon him and tore a leg of his trousers off. Then he started across Dan Peek's farm and a flock of goats got after him and butted him over a bluff. He fell only eight feet and wasn't hurt much—only "stove up"—but he thought he was hurt and lay out there in the brush eating peanuts until he was found by rescuers who went on his trail. Peek, a loyal member of the colony, was greatly upset over the affair. He took the prophet back to Gilbert in a hack, and mighty was the wrath he harbored against the goats. In fact, he sold them all a few days later, scattering them far and wide as a punishment.



DONKEYS, used instead of horses, help to bring back the atmosphere of Jerusalem.

It's hard for anybody to say just what will become of the Incoming Kingdom, now that Brother John has gone back to New York and run afoul of the lunacy commission. His brothers, Ben and Sam, are carrying on as best they can, and so is Graham, who is letting his whiskers grow while he earns a meager living cobbling shoes at the top of the hill. But the odds are against them and spirits are low.

ON DEPARTURE from the village, one's impressions are not widely different from those experienced on arrival. There is still the barricading wall of hills, still the fretful river and the scattered cottages straggling up the slope toward the cemetery. Many of those cottages are vacant now, as well as the church house, and this fact, coupled with the presence of trunks at the railway station, seems to hold a significance of its own.

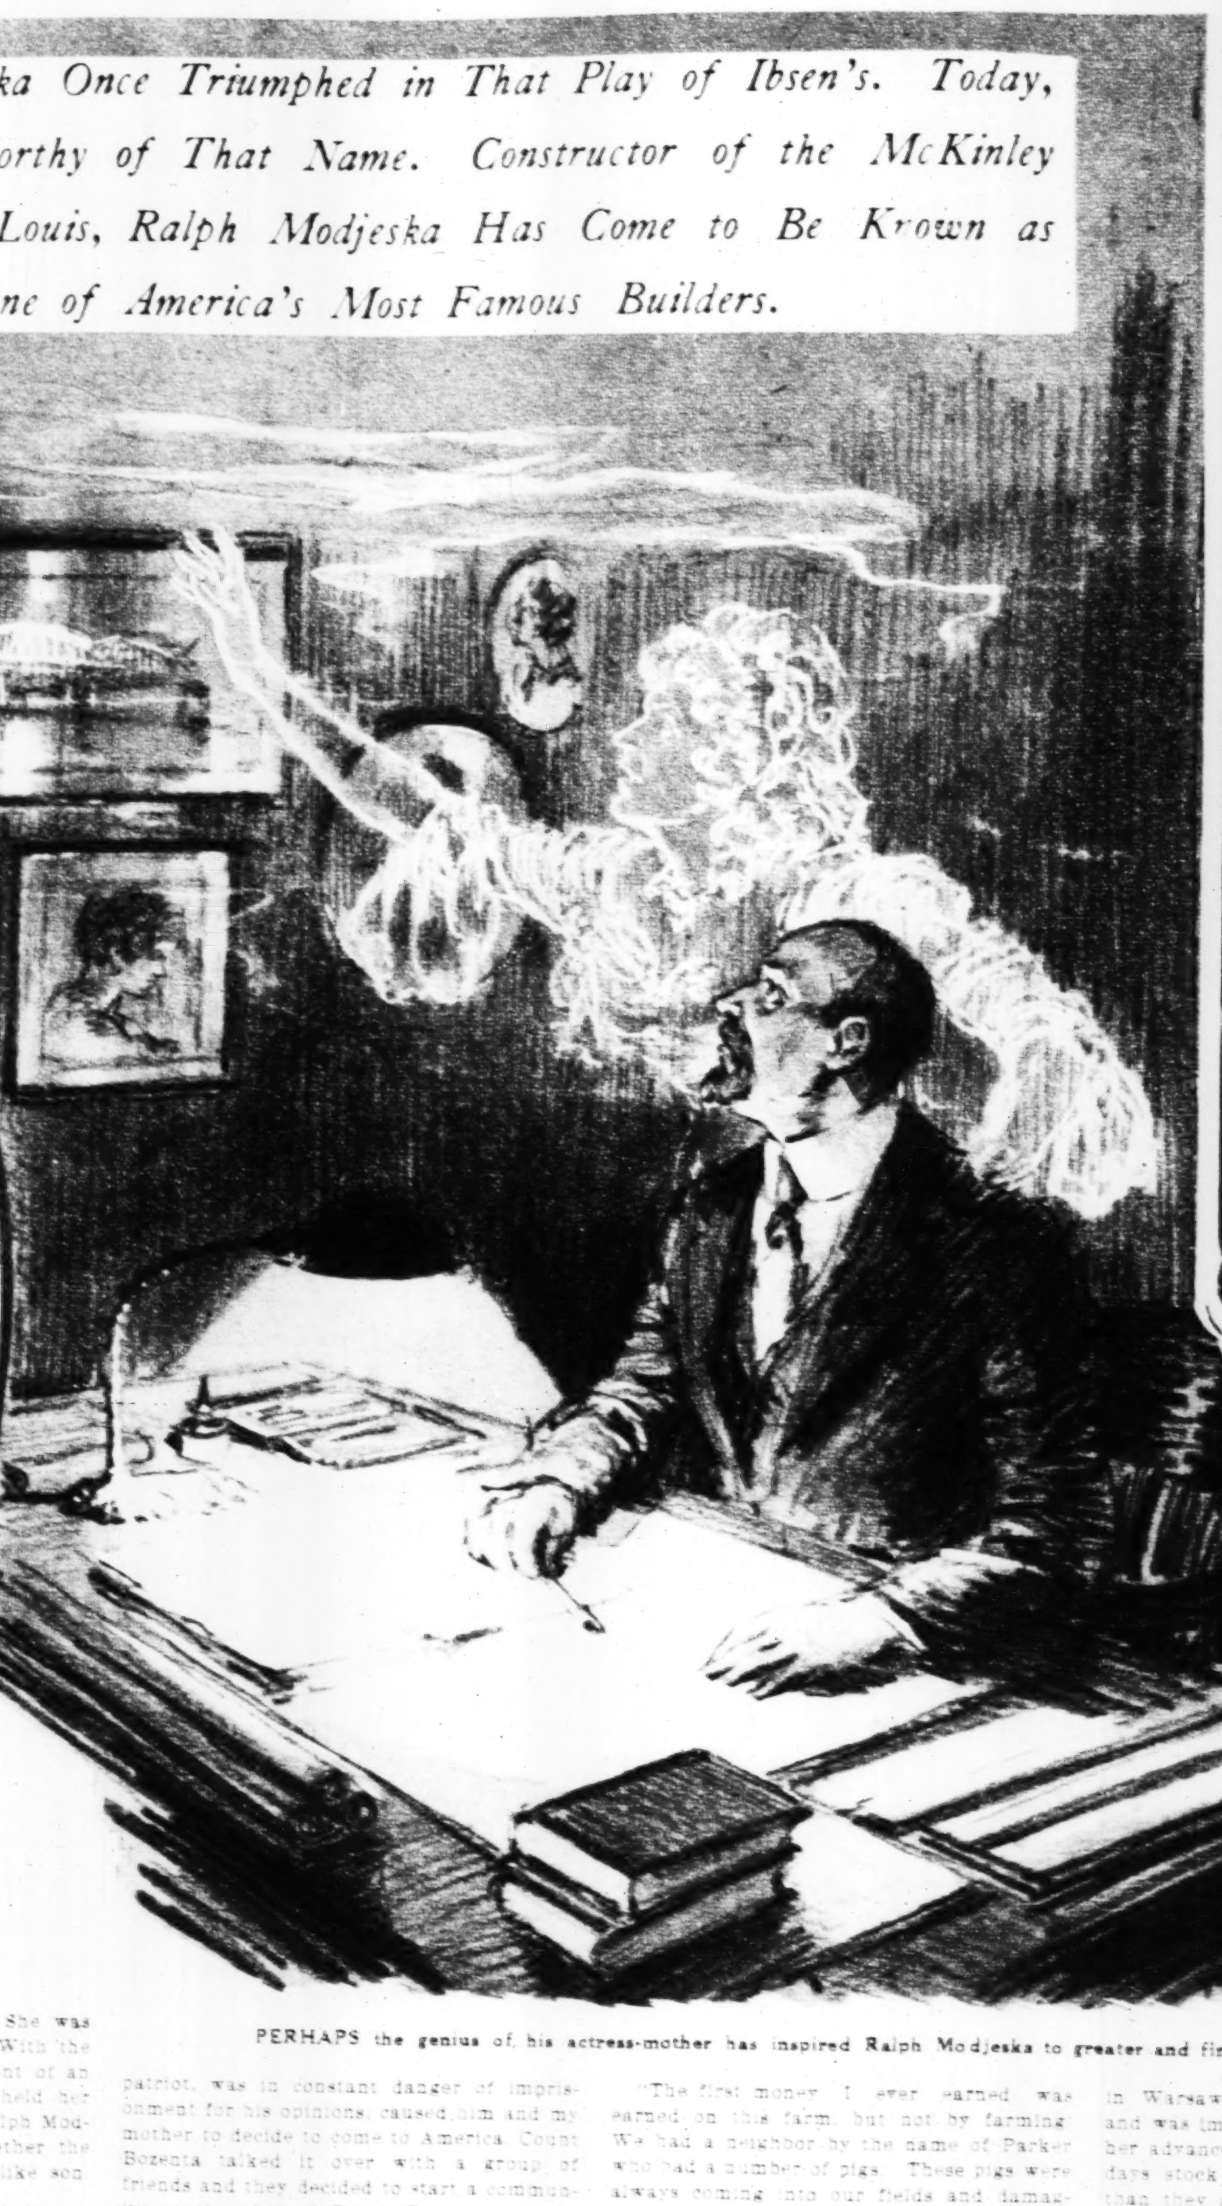
"Going away?" you ask a group of prospective travelers waiting for the train.

"Yes. To Illinois—for a visit."

And so, despite Frank Graham's firm declaration that the colony will live and die in Gilbert, there flourishes a firm conviction that the Incoming Kingdom is mostly "go"-ward bound.

"THE MASTER BUILDER"

Helena Modjeska Once Triumphed in That Play of Ibsen's. Today, Her Son Is Worthy of That Name. Constructor of the McKinley Bridge in St. Louis, Ralph Modjeska Has Come to Be Known as One of America's Most Famous Builders.



PERHAPS the genius of his actress-mother has inspired Ralph Modjeska to greater and finer creative effort.

RALPH MODJESKA, noted builder of bridges.

HELENA MODJESKA—renowned actress and mother of a son full-worthy to bear her celebrated name.

By ARTHUR HENRY STRAWN

Special to the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

NEW YORK.—There are artists who create with words, with paint and canvas or with notes and bars. But Ralph Modjeska is an artist who builds his masterpieces out of steel, mortar and stone. They cross the great rivers of America. They span deep chasms. With arches and girders silhouetted against the sky, they bind together a vast continent with cords of steel. For Modjeska is a Master Builder, probably the greatest builder of bridges in America today. He has built, among others, 14 great bridges at a cost of $28,000,000. He has just closed a contract to build the longest and largest railway bridge in the United States—across the Mississippi River at New Orleans. It will cost $15,000,000. He is now engaged in building the tremendous $35,000,000 bridge from Philadelphia to Camden.

"I have always wanted to create," he says earnestly. "That is why I have spent my life building."

But this powerful artistic urge to create, which is the dominating impulse of Modjeska's life, has not fallen upon him accidentally. He is not one of those mystifying outbreaks of genius which seem to have no explanation. He comes by his gifts in a direct line of descent. And he is the first to recognize and acknowledge his debt.

FOR Ralph Modjeska is the only son of Helena Modjeska, the great Polish tragedienne, who was the delight of a past generation of theater goers. In Poland, her birthplace; in Paris, in London, and in America, her home, she was hailed as an actress without a peer. She played important roles with such stars as Edwin Booth and Forbes-Robertson. One speaks of her in the same breath with Sarah Bernhardt and Eleonora Duse. The role of Shakspeare's Rosalind she made peculiarly her own. Whether in Adrienne Lecouvreur, Phedre, As You Like It or Macbeth, she interpreted her roles with such imagination and emotional intensity as virtually to create new characters. She was an artist with the spoken word. With the tone of her voice and the movement of an arm, she built up a mood which held her audience as firmly, as surely, as Ralph Modjeska's powerful girders hold together the shores of a river. Like mother, like son. Artists both.

Modjeska speaks of his illustrious mother with tender and profound admiration. "I owe her much. Her great courage in adversity has always served to encourage me. Her fame and success have always made me want to achieve some greatness for the sake of her name."

Thus the mother not only transmitted great gifts to her son, but her great work has acted as a constant inspiration. Modjeska loves his bridges. He speaks of these children of his brain with the pride of a father. But he talks of his own work only when urged to do so. It is his mother, her career, his memories of her, that he prefers to talk about.

SITTING in his New York office, his latest blueprints before him, the walls covered with sketches of his bridges and with countless honorary degrees and certificates of membership in great scientific societies, Modjeska finds visible pleasure in forgetting his surroundings to lose himself in memories of his mother and his early youth with her.

"It was shortly after my birth, in 1861, that my mother gained distinction in Poland as an actress," he began. "My father died when I was very young and my mother married Count Bozenta Chlapowski, a politician and critic of some prominence. By this time my mother had a lifetime engagement at the Warsaw Imperial Theater, but the Russian censor made this engagement intolerable. He mutilated many of her plays, changing the lines to make them agree with what he thought they should be. The word 'slave,' for instance, was adjudged to be disloyal. It was cut out in one of the melodramas and replaced by the word Negro, so that one of the actors, instead of saying, 'He was a slave to his passions,' was obliged to say, 'He was a Negro to his passions.'

"Such stupid censorship, coupled with the fact that Count Bozenta, an ardent Polish patriot, was in constant danger of imprisonment for his opinions, caused him and my mother to decide to come to America. Count Bozenta talked it over with a group of friends and they decided to start a community on the plan of Brook Farm. In addition to the Count, my mother, a servant and myself, the colonists included Lovburg, a talented musician; Paprocki, a well-known caricaturist, and Henry Sienkiewicz, who was later to gain fame as the author of 'Quo Vadis.' In 1876 we came to California and settled on a farm.

"I WAS 15 years old at the time, but had long since made up my mind to be an engineer. That was my ambition as far back as I can remember. I don't believe I was more than 6 years old when I did my first piece of mechanical work. I found a screwdriver and immediately set about removing all the screws and bolts from one of the doors in our house. I didn't have much opportunity for study in California, although I did my first construction job on our farm. We were in need of a barn. There was no one else there to do the job, so it fell to me.

"In fact, most of the work about the place fell upon the Count, my mother or myself. My mother did much of the cooking. The Count's most important task was to milk the cows. And, besides plowing, most of the chores were done by me. Sienkiewicz was the most enthusiastic one of the group and also did about the least work. He was always busy writing and hated to leave that to do any sort of farm work. Under the pseudonym of 'Litwos' he was busy contributing letters of travel to a Warsaw paper. Whenever he could escape a task he would.

"I remember one day when I was plowing a field Sienkiewicz came out to me and started a conversation. 'Ralph,' he said, 'I'm supposed to clean out the stable this evening, but I'm working on a story that I'd like to finish. Be a good fellow and do it for me. If you do, I'll take you hunting with me Sunday. How's that?' Needless to say I cleaned the stable and went hunting with him Sunday.

"The first money I ever earned was earned on this farm, but not by farming. We had a neighbor by the name of Parker who had a number of pigs. These pigs were always coming into our fields and damaging the crops. We spoke to him about it several times, but it seemed to have no effect. One day I hit upon a solution to the situation. I purchased a rope and practiced throwing the lariat. I practiced for two solid weeks and became quite proficient. One day I heard the customary squealing and grunting in the alfalfa field. The pigs were there again. I lassoed one and locked it in our barn. Later in the day Parker found one of his pigs missing and asked me if I had seen it. 'Yes,' I said, 'it's locked up in the barn, and you may have it if you'll pay for the damage it has done.' Parker handed me a $5 gold piece and I gave him the pig. After that Parker not only kept his pigs at home, but became very friendly.

"NEITHER my mother nor I knew English when we came to this country, but we studied it whenever we could. I found more opportunity than she did to talk with people in the neighborhood, and when I would come home in the evening mother would make me teach her everything I had learned. Sometimes she would give me coffee to keep me awake so she could 'pick my brains,' as she used to call it. I even wrote a play in English. I don't remember the name of it, but I remember that we all acted it at home one evening and found it very amusing.

"Our farming was not a success, because no one knew anything about farming. We finally gave up the plan. Paprocki and Sienkiewicz returned to Poland and my mother decided to take up a career on the stage again. After many unsuccessful efforts, Barton Hill, manager for the producer, John McCullough, reluctantly consented to hear my mother in a tryout. Hill came to the tryout without any interest in the affair and fully expecting to be bored. By the time my mother had finished reciting her lines he was in tears.

"Her debut in San Francisco, like the one in Warsaw, was in Adrienne Lecouvreur, and was immediately successful. I acted as her advance agent for two years. In those days stock companies were more common than they are today and it used to be my work to rehearse with the company and to explain to them just how my mother read the lines and what cuts she made. Finally, mother was welcomed in New York, and the rest of her life belongs to the history of the American stage. She considered the United States her home and died in California in 1909, after nearly a half-century on the stage.

"MY MOTHER never attempted to influence my choice of a career and she seemed to be pleased when I told her I wanted to study engineering. In 1880, when I was 19, I applied for admission to the Ecole des Ponts et Chaussees in Paris, a Government school. I was one of a hundred applicants. I was very excited and nervous when I stood for examinations, and to my disappointment I found that I was twenty-ninth on the list. I had failed to qualify because I wasn't in the first 24.

"I was greatly discouraged and almost decided to give up engineering in favor of a career in music. I had always played the piano and loved music. Ignace Paderewski and I were on friendly terms. In fact, my mother had been instrumental in obtaining for him one of his very first concert engagements in Warsaw. But my love for engineering was too great and I decided to make one more effort. The next year I took the examinations again and passed easily, taking fourth place on the list. I loved my studies and was very confident of my ability, with the result that I was graduated at the head of my class in 1885.

"I RETURNED to Chicago and was given a $50-a-month job by John Morrison, one of the leading bridge builders of the day. I served my apprenticeship under him for seven years, and then I began building bridges independently. I have been building ever since.

"The first large bridge that I designed and constructed was the Government bridge at Rock Island, Illinois, over the Mississippi River. It was finished in 1896. Then followed the reconstruction of the Bismarck Bridge at Bismarck, North Dakota, over the Missouri River, and later the Thebes Bridge over the Mississippi at Thebes, Illinois. It required two years to build that bridge. In 1905 the work was started on the Columbia River bridge and the Willamette River bridge, both in Oregon. Among others, I designed and built the McKinley Bridge spanning the Mississippi at St. Louis.

"My work at times has been very dangerous and I narrowly escaped death twice while superintending the building of bridges. At the building of the Rock Island bridge I was standing with the resident engineer on a piece of timber about 50 feet below the structure. Suddenly I heard a tearing sound at our feet. There, between us, a heavy pointed steel bar was sticking in the timber. It had passed but a few inches from our head, barely missing me."

"On another occasion, while I was superintending some blasting operations at the same place, a heavy piece of steel plate weighing about 20 pounds flew past my head, barely missing me. I was very fortunate to escape."

DURING all this recital of his career the simplicity and modesty of Modjeska was apparent. But with that, one got a definite impression that his great achievements are the product of unusual intelligence, imagination and learning. Nor does his engineering occupy his mind to the exclusion of all other interests. Ralph Modjeska is intimately acquainted with the literature of England, America, Germany and France, not to mention that of his native Poland. He reads and speaks fluently the language of each of these countries. He is familiar with the literature of music and is himself a talented pianist. He attends the opera and theater when he can find time, and is very fond of moving pictures. And his eyes brighten with pleasure when he speaks of a certain little golden-haired granddaughter, for Modjeska has two sons and a daughter. Some day, he says, he hopes to retire, and then he will spend his last days with them.

But although Ralph Modjeska is 65 he is still active and does not give the thought of retiring much serious attention. The writer found him working on plans for another great bridge. When the words Master Builder were mentioned the great engineer smiled.

"'The Master Builder,'" he repeated, shaking his head reflectively. "That is a great play, but it always makes me a little sad when I think of it. It reminds me that the younger generation is almost upon me. But I don't mind. I, too, was of the younger generation once, and I was given my chance."

"I only hope," added this great son of a great mother, "that I have built well enough for at least another generation."

KITTY GILHOOLEY

She Was Known as "The Queen of Chicago's Underworld" Until They Caught Her the Other Day. This Story of Kitty's Adventurous Life Has Its Moments of Pathos . . . .

Drawing by GEORGE H. CONREY

"GUILTY!" read the clerk—"It's a terrible lie!" screamed Kitty Gilhooley. "There is no God," she cried. "I've prayed. I've prayed on my knees day and night. There can't be a God when innocence is called guilt!"

By a Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO.—On the day that Kitty Gilhooley left for Howard, Rhode Island, to do her five-year stretch in the Government's penitentiary for women, Kitty's little daughter was married. It had been a hard day for Kitty. The dawn had seen her husband, Willie, pickpocket, gunman, international crook, started on his way to Leavenworth, where he must serve 10 years. "We'll make out all right," said Kitty Gilhooley. "But the kid"—and then she wept. Puzzled and hurt was the daughter, that the mother, who to her is just a name, should not be there to see her married. That is the right of every girl. Kitty Gilhooley believes so. And she would have been there—only. . . .

"Whether she knew it or not," continued Kitty, "I would have been in the church to see my baby girl married. But I couldn't make it." She looked at the bars of the Chicago jail cell with frightened eyes.

"And now I must go out of her life forever. It wouldn't do for her to learn the truth. She doesn't know. . . . Poor kid."

"The great mistake of Kitty Gilhooley's life," her attorney had told a jury in the United States District Court here, "was when she crossed the threshold of Willie Gilhooley's home as this man's wife." And he pointed to Willie, immaculate of dress, and sitting beside her there.

Kitty had wondered about that.. Except for "the kid" she had no regrets. .There passed through her mind the story of how she, a drug addict, had met Willie Gilhooley, also "on the dope." They were married and then, for 20 years, beautiful Kitty Gilhooley ruled, a queen in the underworld.

After two years the "baby girl" had come. But at 4 "the kid" was asking questions.

Then Kitty bundled up her child and took the baby back to Mrs. Bridget O'Grady, in Long Island City, New York. After that "the baby girl" knew her mother no more, except as a "Mrs. Charles Gilbert"—a mythical personage like a Santa Claus or a good fairy who sent her beautiful things.

The child did not know that the money which brought those things was the fruit of law-breaking and crime. She did not know, nor did the good sister in the convent where she was sent to school, that the little girl's education was the price of souls that were steeped in opium. She never knew that her mother was a criminal, nor will she know. For Kitty Gilhooley, though she lives behind the penitentiary walls, is dead.

Kitty thought of these things, her eyes fixed upon the ceiling of the courtroom whereon is painted a Continental Congress scene, with Ben Franklin pointing toward George Washington in the distance. She dimly knew that Louis Piquett, formerly of the District Attorney's office, was talking in her defense. But what she heard, as the vision of her life passed thus before her, was what Willie Gilhooley had said when he surrendered himself to be tried with her: "They call us the King and Queen of the Underworld, but that's a lot of bunk. We're just a couple of little deuces."

It was just like Willie to name himself first that way.

FOR five years there hadn't been an important arrest for illicit narcotic sales in the Chicago district. Colonel Will Gray Beach, chief of the division for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, had gone up and down the country lecturing before women's clubs and welfare societies and uplift organizations, telling what an awful thing the drug traffic was and what success he'd had in fighting it. Then, on August 4, last year, Pat Roche, special narcotic inspector in Chicago, came down upon the flat at 439 Oakwood avenue, Chicago, where Kitty and Willie Gilhooley lived. It was at 10 o'clock at night and Kitty met him at the door.. At that minute they started making history.

KITTY GILHOOLEY says: "Will my little daughter hear about it?"

The Gilhooleys lived in Flat No. 48. Max and Georgia Ebler lived in flat No. 51. Pat Roche led Special Agents Converse and George and Mrs. Lulu Burke, a policewoman, into the Gilhooley flat and out through the back door into the back door of the Ebler flat. There they found the greatest drug and opium lay-out Chicago had ever known. Drugs worth $50,000 were seized and carried away. They found and destroyed the furniture of a luxurious apartment fitted up with "dream-bunks" for opium smokers, equipped with pipes, and lamps, and needles, with cans and cards of opium, with rugs and cushions, and every comfort to regale the hop fiend.

In that back room of the Ebler apartment—and when he raided the place Pat Roche knew that Kitty Gilhooley paid the Eblers' rent—they discovered 74,700 grains of morphine, worth in sales to addicts $1 a grain; 37,500 grains of cocaine, which sells to those unfortunates at the same price; 100 pounds of gum opium, which is worth $175 a pound; 75 pounds of "yen-shee," or the residue of cooked opium, worth $200 a pound. That amounts in all to $155,700 worth of drugs. They arrested Kitty Gilhooley and took her away.

Willie wasn't home.

"Thank God," said Kitty.

FOUR men found in the apartment were placed under arrest: Tony Volpa, Barney Goldman, Ralph Maida and Mike Doyle. Kitty was beautiful enough, mysterious enough, to make what reporters call "a whale of a story." Chicago newspapers were full of it. And Earl Benedict reads the Chicago papers.

One part of the world called Earl Benedict contemptuously "a hop-head." He was a drug addict. The other half called him, just as contemptuously, a "stool pigeon." He was an informer on the payroll of narcotic agents in Chicago. An outcast among outcasts.

What Kitty Gilhooley had done for him nobody knows. Kitty herself would never tell. Benedict hasn't chosen to do so. Certainly she had not sold him drugs. That Kitty would sell drugs goes without saying. That is admitted now. But she wouldn't sell to everyone. This "Queen of the Opium Ring" had a curious conscience. She would not sell a grain of drug to an addict.

But whatever she had done, when Earl Benedict learned that Kitty Gilhooley was in jail Earl Benedict got mad. He decided then and there that Colonel Will Gray Beach wasn't a square shooter. He blamed Beach for the raid.

So he went to Pat Roche, the detective, with an offer to show that Beach himself was as deeply involved in the drug traffic as was Kitty. Another would have called his tale a pipe dream. Pat Roche asked him for proof.

"Sure," said Earl Benedict. And he laid his plans to give it. Those plans worked better than he had dreamed.

THIS is the story he had told: That Colonel Beach would spot some curio or piece of jewelry he wanted. That Beach would tell Benedict about it and that the addict would steal the coveted jewel and trade it in to the Government agent for cocaine, morphine or opium. Some of Beach's closest aids, he said, worked just the same. He named Alonzo Baxter, a former Baptist preacher who had come west with Beach when the latter was transferred from Philadelphia to Chicago, and Dennis J. O'Brien.

The story was as improbable as an Arabian Nights tale. There was Beach, a man with a distinguished war record, a member of a distinguished Tennessee family, a man prominent in fraternal orders, one who was active in arousing uplift workers to the perils of drug use. Six feet of man, gray-haired, benevolent, paternal and keen of face and eye. Pat Roche checked the story. Then he took the facts to Washington.

On August 11 Roche led a raid on his superior's apartment in the Atlantic Hotel.

"Aladdin's Cave," the papers called it because of the wonders that were found. There were 47 pistols and revolvers, 10 daggers, countless pocketknives, 167 bowls for opium pipes, 124 stems for opium pipes, lamps, needles, jade, jewels and cameos, ivories and silks, the skull of a three-months babe. And $8000 worth of drugs.

Among the treasures were an opium-smoking layout of jade, encrusted with a score of jewels. Not in all America was one finer than this, which is valued at $7500. There was a $5000 jade vase.

Raids on the homes of Baxter and O'Brien uncovered still more treasure. And Colonel Will Gray Beach, faced with ruin thus, told of his safety deposit box—it held $50,000 worth of drugs.

In the plunder that they found, Roche and his aids identified property reported to them as stolen; property which Benedict had described before he traded it to the Government agents. The trades had been made with Roche and his assistants listening at a keyhole. Their case was complete. Beach was indicted. "But I'll never come to trial," he said. "I'll never disgrace my people. Thank God, my mother is dead. In Tennessee we don't live through disgrace like this." Special Agent Converse reported that statement of his former chief. A watch was put on Beach to prevent his suicide.

THINGS had moved rapidly for Colonel Will Gray Beach and one Patrick Roche. Not so with Kitty Gilhooley. She remained in jail. Everywhere Government agents were seeking her husband. She was willing it should be known Willie was out on the Pacific Coast on a big drug deal. He wasn't. He was hiding in Wisconsin.

Meantime Kitty waited without bail. She was silent in the jail. A woman of mystery. Who was she? Where had she come from? What had she been? Government agents and police sought to unravel her past. They did find out about her "baby-girl." Otherwise Kitty remained idly provocative, chic, beautiful, stylish—"the most modish woman that ever strummed a bronze satin pump on the floor of Chicago's jail."

The raid on Colonel Beach's apartment gave the Government agents a clew. They would search the safety deposit box in Kitty's name. Then Kitty Gilhooley awoke to action. She sent for an attorney and provided a bond. She was released. But the narcotic squad had beaten her to the bank.. They had investigated her cache. They had found jewels worth $50,000.

Kitty was out of jail. The fight was on. Government men, seeking Willie up at Pelican Lake, Wisconsin, on a tip, had found him flown. He appeared in Chicago and surrendered. "I came back to fix the bail for my wife," he said. They would fight it out together, side by side. For Kitty Gilhooley that was a comforting dream.

A pipe-dream! But Willie was chivalry itself until they came to trial.

DAY after day Kitty sat in the courtroom while the United States District Attorney, with Pat Roche's help, spun the web that would entangle her. Now she learned for the first time how it happened she was caught. Roche had been looking up some bootlegging operations in the Twenty-second Ward. He had chanced to be in the neighborhood of her home. He had recognized some well-known crooks. He watched the house they entered. For two weeks he kept watch. During that time more than 100 known crooks entered Kitty's apartment.

Then Roche had tapped her telephone wires. He had learned a lot about the affairs of Kitty. He knew that if one wanted morphine one asked for "one blue"; if cocaine, for "one red." He had seen Kitty, when her callers came, slip over from the rear door of her flat to the rear door of the Eblers. Always. Upon the basis of these discoveries he had made his raid.

The court took a recess. Kitty sat in her chair at the side of the table on which was piled the "evidence," morphine, cocaine, opium—a fortune! She tapped the floor with the tip of a dainty suede shoe. She fingered a golden cross that hung from her neck by a chain. Her bobbed gold curls escaped from under her tiny black hat. There was an impudent tilt to her nose, there was a determined thrust to her chin. Her cheeks were scarlet with rouge, and when she smiled, it was a golden smile.

WILLIE GILHOOLEY says: "We ain't King and Queen of the Underworld—we're just a couple of little deuces."

AT HER side was Willie, immaculate in a gray suit, a shirt of delicate hue, a gray tie and a handkerchief to match. The gray tie flaunted diamonds.

An agent of the narcotic division drew near. He was pointing out the fortune in drugs upon the table. "Two hundred thousand dollars there if there's a cent," he said.

"Why," Kitty Gilhooley volunteered, "there's not $2000 in those drugs."

"Speaking from experience, Kitty?" scoffed the man.

"I haven't been on the stuff for a year," she declared, reddening. She dropped her face.

"Not since they had you out at the Alma Parker McDonald Rest Cure," jeered the man. They had hunted her down like that! Kitty was silent.

"She met Gilhooley, who was a 'cannon' —a pickpocket," he said, "while she was a dope-fiend. He married her. That was 20 years ago. Last year she took the cure. I don't know how she ever came to marry Willie. He isn't in her class. She divorced him once, when he was doing a stretch in the big house—while he was serving a prison term—then she married him again. She has told me she doesn't love him now—that she's sticking just because he's a good scout and pretty sick."

Kitty's personality had puzzled the Government agent. It puzzled the others. Tall, stately, she looked the 28 years she first admitted, but must have been a bit above 40, as she confessed when telling of her daughter. Her blue eyes were frank and clear. In her carriage there was refinement, poise, a certain sureness. Her voice was quiet, cultured, and her enunciation, careful. Court attaches believed she had been an actress. Kitty laughed. She declared she was not—had not been.

But no actress could have played a role with more dramatic feeling than did Kitty when the crisis came.

THERE was terror in her eyes when the jury filed in with its verdict. Willie Gilhooley didn't notice that. His eyes were glazed. He had been out during the recess, free on bond, and had "imbibed a few" with friends.

There seemed an agony of waiting until all the court functionaries were there. Kitty touched her husband's arm. "I don't deserve this, Gil; tell them I don't deserve this," she said. She was almost hysterical. Her husband paid no attention. Then Kitty fainted. Dr. E. T. Sloan, who sat nearby, revived her. Kitty stared wildly, she bit her lips and clutched the arms of her chair.

"We the jury"—— the clerk of the court read solemnly from the paper the foreman handed him.

"What's he going to say, Willie?" Kitty asked in a whisper that carried through the room.

"Find the defendants"——

There was a scream. Kitty's arms flung straight up. Her black hat flew off her bobbed gold curls. She closed her eyes and her whole body was twitching as it might have been the body of one in agony for drugs.

"GUILTY!"

"IT IS a terrible lie!" she screamed. Her eyes were rolling. Her twitching fingers clutched the cross on her breast. She tore it from her bosom and flung it on the floor.

"There is no God," she cried. "I've prayed. I've prayed on my knees night and day. There can't be a God when innocence is called guilt!"

Dr. Sloan quieted her.

"I'll kill myself. I'll end it all," she was repeating.

"The sentence," the Judge announced, "will be deferred." Court was adjourned. They marched Willie and Kitty out to the Marshal's office. Kitty tried to cling to her husband. He pushed her away.

"If you're going to put me in a cell," he announced loudly, "don't put me in with that woman. I'm through with her."

THAT was a hint to the Government agents. While Kitty was held in her cell awaiting sentence they talked and pleaded with her. They promised to do their utmost to win for her the leniency of the court if she would tell all she knew about the gigantic dope plot in which she was evidently involved; about the great international ring, believed to have headquarters in Naples and of which she and her husband are believed to have been the heads in the United States.

Kitty was obdurate. It didn't matter what Willie had said. It didn't matter if she must go to jail. She was beyond hurting now.

"It might have been different," she said, "if I could have gone to my daughter's wedding without the possibility of this notoriety and disgrace."

They pleaded. She laughed. They threatened. She laughed again.

So that she went before the court for sentence firm and obdurate.

"Ten years," said the Judge to Willie. "Five," to her.

Willie went back to his cell. "Well, boys," he said, "here I go to the big house to do a long stretch for some of those nice people whose names, if they were printed, would make Chicago's Blue Book look yellow." He laughed. "Ten years, why, I'll do that on my ear."

Even then they pleaded with Kitty, trying to get her to tell. But Kitty had her code.

"I want to be buried and forgotten," she declared. Think of the publicity if I should tell. Think of the pictures that would be printed. Suppose my baby-girl would learn from them just who her mother is.

"Five years could never hurt me half so much as that," said Kitty Gilhooley.

The Day After Christmas Was a Bitter One

Out in Arizona, Wrapped in the Icy Arms of a Blizzard, One St. Louisan Had an Unforgetable Experience.

If He Had Trusted to the Judgment of Old Twenty-One, His Horse, He Might Have Escaped With Less Hardship.

By David Newell

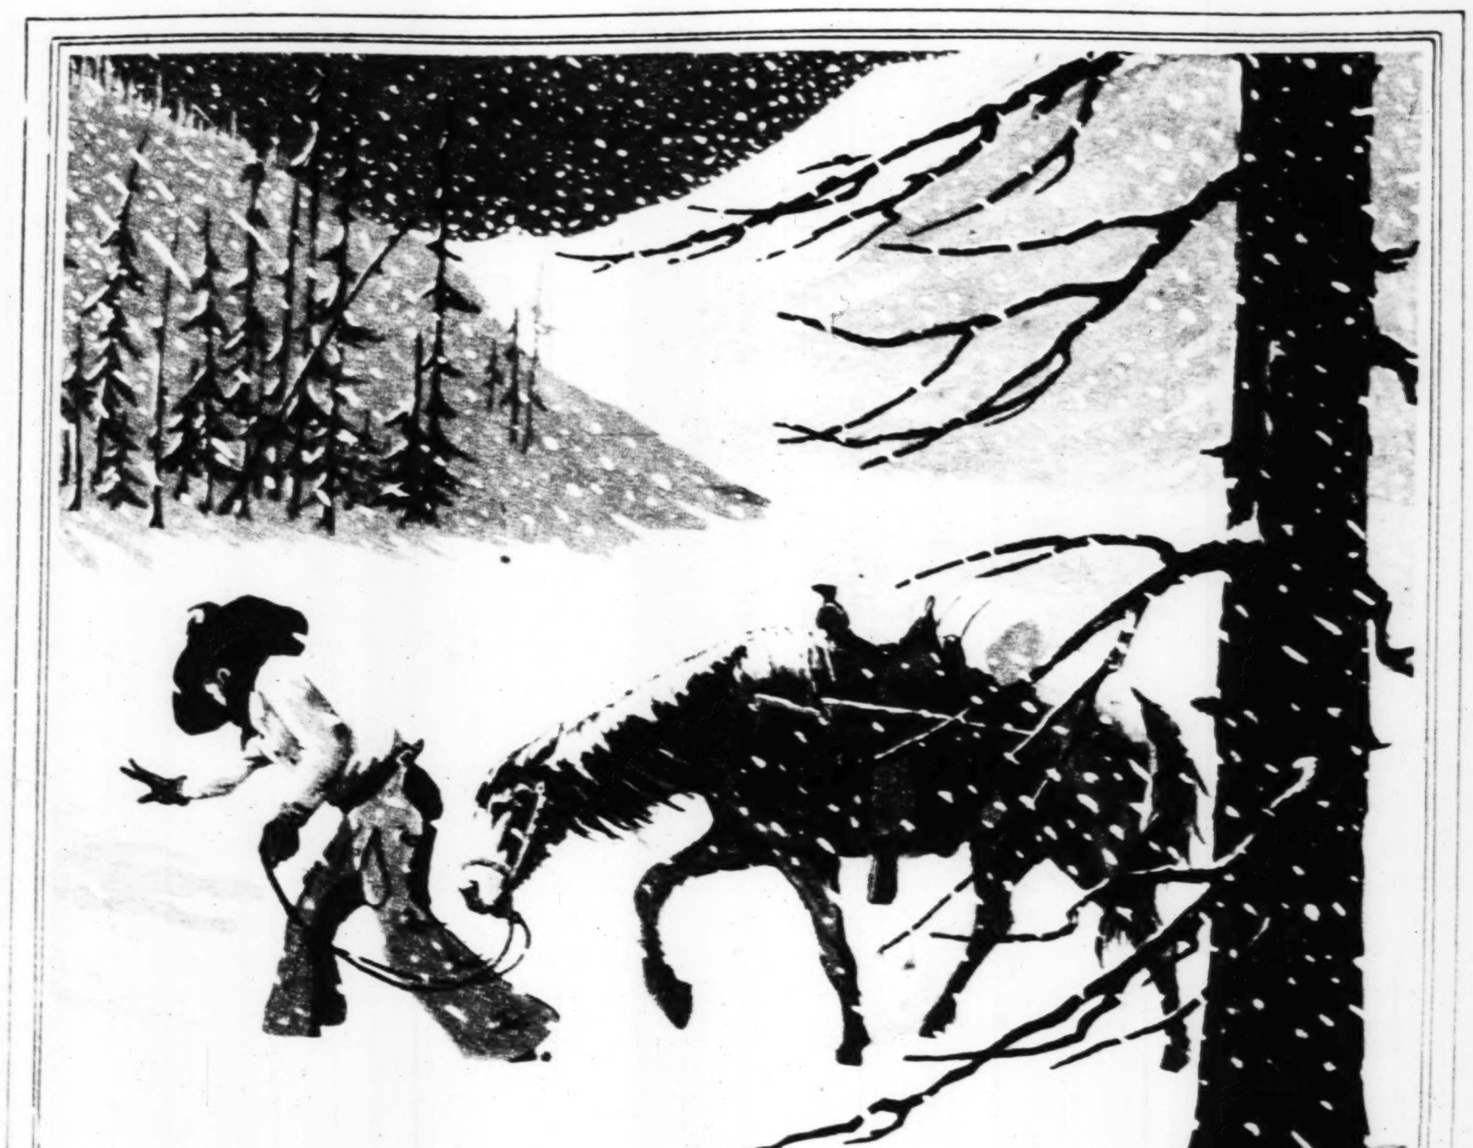
WHEN a cowpuncher catches his foot in the stirrup as he is thrown from a mean horse, or his gun jams when he faces a wounded grizzly, he says he is "in a jackpot." This is his way of describing a dangerous situation. Hazardous experiences come to all men. Especially do they come to the man who bucks up against life in the wilds. Some of these experiences take place so suddenly that a man has no time to be afraid. Others, such as being shipwrecked, caught in a burning building or subjected to heavy artillery fire, give men time to realize their danger and to be afraid. It is instinct for a human being to act swiftly in a sudden crisis to save his life, but the man who pulls himself out of a "jack pot" by seemingly superhuman effort or quick thinking is liable to lose his head at a time when he has opportunity fully to realize his predicament.

I have a friend who was marooned 150 miles off-shore in a burning seaplane, and preceding his miraculous rescue by a destroyer, he very nearly lost his reason. There was apparently no way of escape, the wind was blowing a gale, heavy seas were running, and the fire was rapidly eating its way toward the gasoline tanks. Alone, and at the mercy of the elements, a man learns what it means to be desperately afraid.

During most of my brief life I have sought adventure in the wild places, in the tropic swamps and the barren desolate mountains, and during my quest I have succeeded in getting myself into quite a few jackpots. Some had to do with poisonous snakes and some had to do with bad animals—and bad men. But with all these things man can cope. He understands them, he can fight against them. It is only when he faces unseen danger, forces over which he has no control, that he really knows fear. And the greatest teacher of fear is Nature. The life of man and beast is a fight against the forces of Nature—against hunger and cold, against floods and famines. Nature is beautiful and wonderful, but Nature is cruel.

I have had one outstanding adventure. There were no onlookers but the towering cliffs and the dark pines, no excitement to key me up, no visible and tangible foe to conquer—just the grim realization that I was in a mighty tight fix, with the odds all against me. The fact that I am alive today has proved to me that there is a higher force than Nature. My faith in an omnipotent God has been strengthened more by this experience than by all the sermons I have ever heard.

When you have read my story you may shrug your shoulders and say, "Lucky coincidence." Or you may say nothing and think—as I have thought. Should you ever find yourself in a similar situation, I know what you will think and say. It is worthy of note that the Titanic's band turned to an old hymn as the great ship lurched, shuddered and went down.



Through the snow of the blizzard we plugged our weary, weary way.

AS I SIT in a warm house it is hard for me to realize that it all happened. But when I half close my eyes and listen I can hear the roar of the water and feel my horse tremble beneath me. Most vividly can I feel the bitter, bitter cold. Two Indians froze to death during that storm, men who knew the country and who were of long experience in mountain blizzards. Small wonder, then, that I should become lost and more wonder that I should come out alive.

I had been employed by the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey to hunt mountain lions, bobcats and cattle-killing bears, and had been assigned to the Northern Apache Reservation of Arizona. My wife and daughter were in Florida and expected to join me shortly after Christmas.

On December 24 Pecos Higgins, one of the cowboys at the ranch where I was making my headquarters, brought me a telegram from my wife. She would start the day after Christmas and would expect me to meet her at Rice, a small town some 60 miles to the south, on the Southern Pacific Railway. It would take her three days and nights to make the trip, and I figured that it would take me two days to ride down to Rice. The trail lay over a rugged range of mountains, and at that season there was always snow and the going was very hard on a horse. About half way down to Rice was the Cross-S horse camp and the Indian sawmill. I planned to stay over night at the Cross-S, and ride on to Rice next day.

Christmas Day it snowed hard, and by night there were great drifts under the bluffs along White River and the sky was still heavily overcast. The next morning it was warmer, although very cloudy and threatening, and I prepared to start on my trip. While I was saddling, Pecos walked up and drawled:

"Ain't figgerin' to go nowhars this sort o' weather, be ye?"

"Why not?" I asked.

"Crazy if ye do," was his only answer.

Now I have since rather held it against Pecos that he did not enlighten me a little. I was a stranger in the mountain country and knew nothing of the dangers of an Arizona blizzard. But he said nothing more, and I finished saddling, tied a canvas bag containing a few extra clothes back of my saddle, got into my chaps, slipped my rifle into the scabbard and took the trail. As I rode out and looked back down at the roaring gray river and the little ranch house nestling under the bluffs, I had a vague feeling that perhaps I should turn back after all. But that would never do now, and besides, my wife was expecting me. I was riding a faithful old horse known among the cowboys as Twenty-one. This horse will have a warm place in my heart as long as I live. Several times on the trip he tried to show me that we had better turn back, but when he found that I was set on going ahead he put all his strength into taking me where I wanted to go.

About two hours' ride took us to Black River, and as the trail wound down into the river canyon I could hear the mighty roar of the water as it raged at its rocky confines and broke into white spray on the great boulders in its bed. I remember thanking God that there was a bridge over Black River. No horse or man could have lived in that water.

We crossed the bridge and entered the mouth of Bronco Canyon. I had been over the trail but once before, and that in dry weather, but I had a vague recollection that it followed this canyon for several miles. As I rode I kept hearing a dull, ominous roar, and for a moment attributed it to the river behind me. But when it continued to increase in volume I realized that there was fast water ahead. Then I rounded a cliff and beheld a sight that I shall never forget.

A SEETHING river was before me, a torrent of foaming water that swept all before it. Great cottonwood logs, boulders and masses of brush and driftwood rolled, tossed and plunged in that racing current. Old Twenty-one snorted and stopped. He didn't like the looks of that water any more than I did. But it was noon, and I knew that if I were to try to get through I must waste no time, for there were still 22 miles between me and the Cross-S camp. So I decided in my ignorance to risk it.

Twenty-one decided not to. I argued with him, I spurred him, I coaxed him, but all to no avail. He had been born and raised in Arizona, and he knew something about fast water. Finally I prevailed, and we entered the water.

The horse had to struggle to keep his footing before he was in up to his knees, and I began to realize what I had tackled. When a big log had swept by and the river appeared fairly clear I spurred the old horse desperately and headed him straight across. The next few minutes are more or less of a blur. I remember that a huge boulder rolled over and knocked old Twenty-one down, and I remember the feel of the icy water as we went under. Then the horse lunged forward and swam with all his might. It seemed that we gained nothing. The swiftness of the water made me dizzy, and I tried to fix my eyes on a clump of pines across on the other side. Then I became aware of the fact that we were being swept down the stream at a tremendous rate toward where Bronco emptied into Black River!

But Twenty-one perhaps realized this, too, for by a mighty effort he made the other bank and scrambled out, snorting with terror, his sides heaving convulsively under my legs. I rested him, then rode back to pick up the trail. The poor old fellow was lame in the left shoulder where the big rock had hit him and plodded along at a walk, and although I knew that it was growing late I did not have the heart to push him.

Toward evening it began to grow bitterly cold, and a few scattered flakes of snow began to fall. I was chilled to the very marrow, my clothes soaking wet and my hat hanging down over my eyes. Three times I had to swim the canyon wash again, although here the current was not so swift or the wash so wide. Nevertheless, it was hard on the horse, but he seemed to sense that now there was no turning back, and did not hesitate when I put him at the water. As night began to fall the trail became harder and harder to follow, and the snow began to come down steadily. With it the wind rose, and between the roaring of the water and the howling of the wind down the canyon I was nearly distracted.

At length we came to a drift fence, and the trail turned sharply to the right. To my disgust I found that it led straight down into the water again. There was nothing to do but swim it, much as I hated the idea. My legs were already numb, and chaps and clothes were frozen stiff. Old Twenty-one was as loath to swim again as I was, and I had some difficulty persuading him to go into the water.

When we finally reached the other side I couldn't find the trail anywhere, although I hunted high and low. As a last resort I recrossed the wash and hunted on the other side, but with no luck. I knew that I was right as far as that drift fence, for it was the southern boundary of one of the big cattle outfits, so I crossed the wash again. But the trail did not come out on the other side.

Under ordinary circumstances it would have been obvious to me that the trail followed the canyon bed, and that if I followed the wash I should eventually find where it emerged from the water. But the cold and that incessant roaring in my ears had paralyzed my power to think clearly. I had to fight to keep from becoming panicky. It was now quite dark and at last I got off my horse and plodded along on foot, hoping to quicken my circulation and perhaps to stumble on the trail. Finally I realized that I was lost, and it was not a pleasant thought.

I KNEW that if I attempted to go on I might easily wander 60 or 75 miles without finding so much as an Indian camp. And then I realized that in my present condition I couldn't ride 20 miles. There seemed to be nothing to do but build a fire and wait for daylight. I tied Twenty-one to a pine sapling and began to hunt for a dry match, only to find that I had forgotten my waterproof safe and that what few loose matches were in my pockets were soaking wet.

I knew that if I attempted to remain in one place, without a fire, I should surely freeze to death, and my teeth chattered with cold and fear. I was afraid—terribly afraid—and life suddenly looked very sweet to me. Everywhere was water, roaring, hissing water, that did not give a man a chance to think sanely. The wind screeched in the pines, rocking them to their very roots, and the snow drove in my face.

I began to walk—up and down, up and down—about a hundred yards at a time—until I began to have a little feeling in my feet, and at last until I felt my body growing warm. Twenty-one stood with his back to the wind, head lowered, his mane and tail stringy with ice and snow. I unsaddled him, and he shook himself as if to thank me. As I threw the saddle down, I suddenly remembered that in the canvas bag was a flannel shirt, and that in the pocket of this shirt there might possibly be a dry match.

It seemed hours before I could untie the bag and get at that shirt! But I found a match—just one—and I stuck it in my hair and put my hat back on while I hunted for wood. With my knife I whittled into a big pine log until I was able to get a few dry pitch splinters. These I stacked under the log where the snow would not fall on them. Then I lit my one match.

It flickered feebly, then burned, and I lit one of the splinters. A tiny blaze . . . and then, as I bent to shield it from the wind, some snow slid off the point of my hat and drenched my last hope! I do not believe that I was ever so near insanity in my life as I was at that moment. I was numb with cold, numb in body and mind.

Finally I sat down with my back to a big log, although I knew that I was doing a foolish thing. An overwhelming drowsiness seized me, and I crawled under the log and lay down, vaguely fighting against the thought of sleep. I knew that if I went to sleep I should probably never wake up, but, somehow, I did not care.

I woke up. That in itself is something to be thankful for. It was nearly midnight and still snowing hard. Although I had been partially sheltered by the log, my legs were covered by several inches of snow. Old Twenty-one apparently had not moved. He stood with his back to the storm and was covered by a blanket of snow and ice. I tried to get up, but could scarcely move. If I had been cold before, it was nothing to what I was now. My whole body seemed numb and asleep. I finally got to my feet and staggered over to my horse. My intention was to saddle him and ride somewhere—where I did not know nor care. Then an idea came to me. I would hunt for the trail on foot. In this way I might keep up my circulation, and I stood a much better chance of seeing a trail, however faint.

I located myself by three big pines that stood near where old Twenty-one was tied, and started out. It was my plan to go about a quarter of a mile in one direction, return to my starting point and try another direction. For an hour I stumbled around in the dark, vainly searching for signs of the trail. At last I decided to follow the canyon wash for a mile or two. I knew that I could not get lost as long as I kept in sight and hearing of that roaring flood of water. As I walked I fell to thinking that perhaps a lion might get my horse while I was gone, and I almost started back. The fact that I entertained such a thought proved that I was not thinking clearly. It would have been possible for a lion to kill my horse, all right, but very improbable, with human scent so fresh.

I stumbled on, and as I went I prayed desperately that I might find the trail. A mile I went, or more, and then I tripped and fell. For a moment I did not fully realize what I had fallen over. When I did I experienced the greatest relief of my life. The cause of my fall was a little bridge of planks—an old sawmill road!

EAGERLY I hurried back to tell the good news to Twenty-one. I found him exactly as I had left him, apparently resigned to a slow death.

Poor old pony, he probably thought: "This idiot of a tenderfoot has brought me out here and tied me up to freeze to death, after I carried him through places that no other intelligent horse would have tackled."

I dragged my saddle from the snow and threw it on, untied Twenty-one and headed up the canyon. Finally we struck the logging road. But my troubles were not over.

After a mile or two the road turned down into the water. Again we plunged into the icy water, but on reaching the other side found that our logging road had disappeared. This time I was not so easily fooled, and so followed the wash. Shortly the road emerged again, and now turned away from the canyon bed and wound up through the rocks. I was glad to leave that unearthly roar behind me, and old Twenty-one actually broke into a lope. The wind was still whistling in from the northwest, and as my clothes were again soaking wet I was very uncomfortable.

When at last I reached the sawmill I was near frozen to death, and could scarcely keep my seat in the saddle. There was a light in one of the cabins belonging to an Apache mill hand, and I rode up to the porch. But I could get no reply to my shouts. I knew that it was only a mile to the Cross-S camp, but I was so cold that I felt unequal to another hundred yards.

At last, seeing no alternative, I turned my pony up the road and eventually rode up to the little ranch house. At my repeated calls, a voice finally came from the house.

"Who's thar?" I recognized the voice as belonging to old man George, and I hastened to tell him who was outside.

"Why, you pore fool!" he bellowed. "What in the world are you doin' out in sich weather as this? Why, you pore ignorant fool!"

BUT he opened the door and told me where to put my pony, adding: "I'll have some coffee hot by the time you git back."

I put old Twenty-one under shelter and gave him a good feed of grain and half a bale of alfalfa. Then I hit for that coffee!

Old man George cussed me for every kind of a fool yet born, but I didn't care. I had my mouth full of Cross-S beef and the coffee pot was singing on the stove. It was 3 o'clock in the morning, but I ate two steaks, six sourdough biscuits and drank four cups of coffee. Then I crawled into a bunk and slept like a baby. Nor, I am thankful to say, did I dream of Bronco Canyon.

X.—THE NEW CATHEDRAL.

In opal mist of morning
The great Cathedral stands
A shadowy supplication
Of myriad yearning hands.

The incense of her altars,
The music of her bells
Float out upon the sunrise—
The organ soars and swells

In paeans of devotion
And all that holy place
Re-echoes to the glory
Of everlasting grace.

In shimmering light of morning
The great Cathedral stands
A glittering gift to godhead
From yearning suppliant hands.

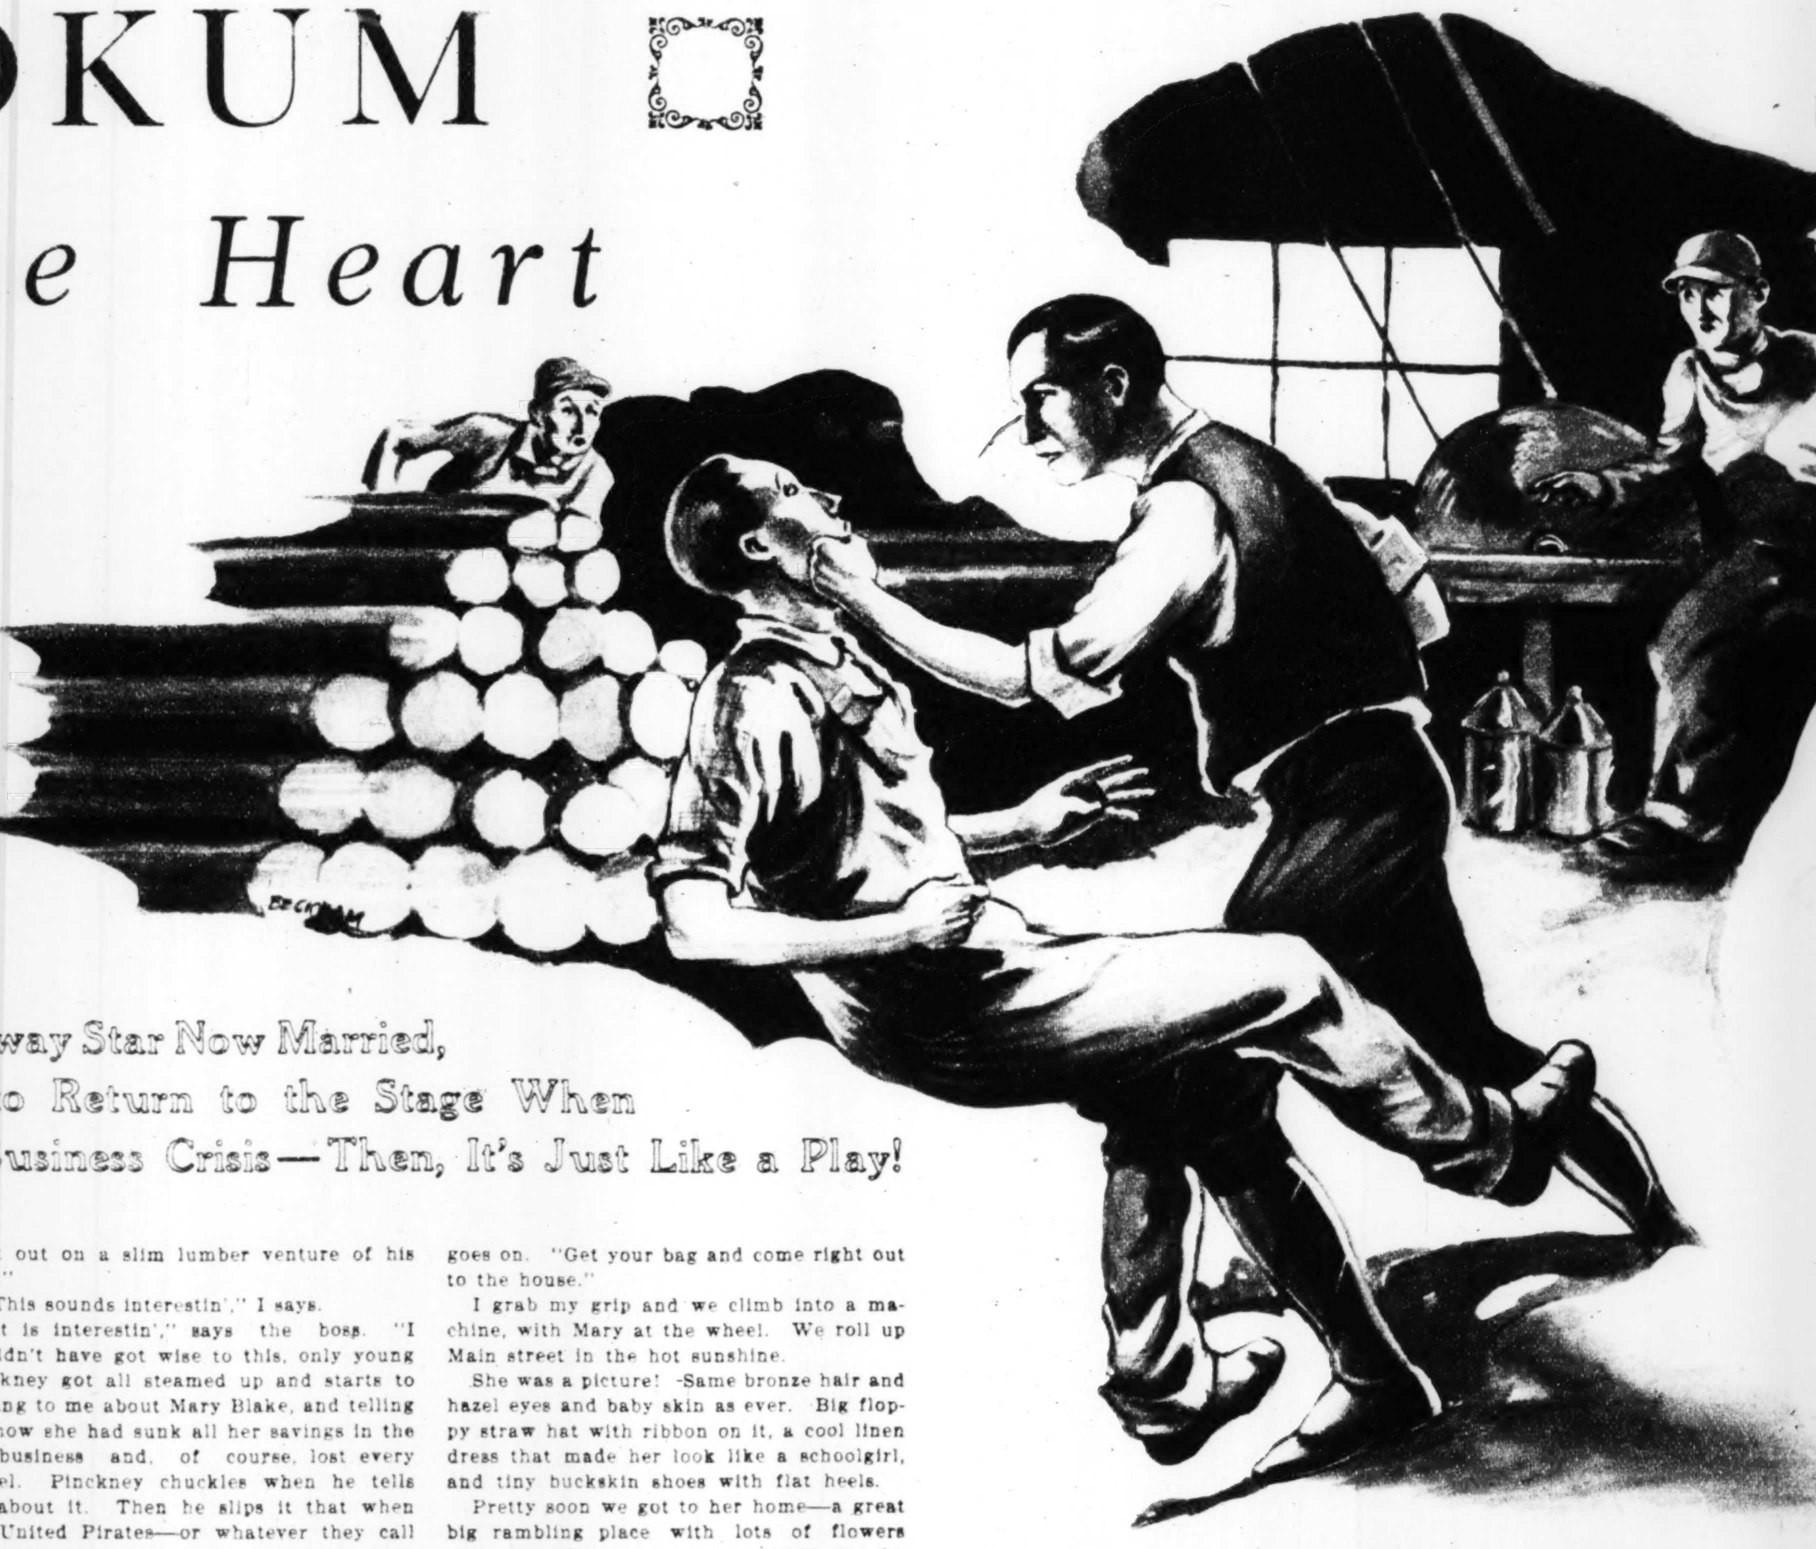
HOKUM

In the Heart

By
MEIGS O. FROST



"THEN, when the husky rushes the third time, the youngster steps in and meets it. Right to the heart and left to the jaw. It was like a coupla locomotives doing a head-on."

Mary Blake, Former Broadway Star Now Married, Has a Dazzling Chance to Return to the Stage When Her Husband Is Near a Business Crisis—Then, It's Just Like a Play!

SURE, it's a good show, but it ain't a whang. There ain't enough hokum in it. Yeh, I said hokum. I mean hokum. You said it. The way Mary Blake used to put it over. I had Mary in mind all the time. I learned about hokum from her. Where's Mary now? Out in a Louisiana hick town you never heard of. Sawmill town! Mary Blake! And happy.

It just happens I'm the guy can tell you all about Mary Blake. That ain't her name any more. She's Mrs. John H. Ralston. Though inside the profession, even, there ain't many folks could tell you her married name on a bet. Once you drop off Broadway, usually, you're out of sight.

How do I know so much about Mary? Here. Light up. I was out in Dallas ahead of "Happy Hearts"—say, there was one surefire box-office riot—and getting ready for the long jump out to the coast when I get the boss' wire. All it says is:

"Brownson takes your job. Report New York office at once."

Orders are orders. I check out at the Adolphus and take next train. And I was worrying. And when I step into the elevator a coupla mornings later I ain't wearing the kelly cocked any too far over the starboard lamp. But everything was all right, as I soon found out. Where does Mary Blake and the hokum stuff come in? Why, Mary Blake's the job the boss was talking about. Mary and me, we'd worked together a long long time. I used to be her personal press agent.

Sure, she'd been off the stage four years then. Had Broadway and Hollywood where they lay down and rolled over and played dead and jumped through the hoop when she said the word. And she quits the whole works cold, to get married.

Doesn't break her contracts, get me? Finishes 'em out like the little lady she is, right up to the last minute, cheerful, with never a sulk.

This John H. Ralston she's marrying, his father is a cypress lumber millionaire down in Louisiana. Sent the kid back East to school—usual Andover and Yale combination—and once he's in New York with a rah-rah gang celebrating some mayhem they've committed on Harvard, he lamps Mary over the footlights and it's all off. She was just a kid starring in "Baby Darling" then.

Well, "came a day," as Anita Loos puts it, when Ralston and Mary Blake climb into his royal blue choo-choo and roll up to Greenwich, Connecticut, which is altogether another thing from Greenwich Village, New York. They come back to town, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ralston. After that Mary only sees Broadway when she runs back up North amongst us Yankees to buy some clothes or take a boat for their summer vacation.

FOUR years! It's a million years off Broadway. The profession remembers, mostly, but the crowd forgets. Only the boss, he don't forget anybody who made him the money Mary made. So that's why he's called me in. I ask him what this new job is all about.

"Well," says the boss, "there may be a chance to get Mary Blake back. Here's the set-up. I'm out to dinner the other night with a bunch of financiers who get gobby on pre-war and slipped me some info. It seems that they had gotten busy with the old auger under the water line, scuttled the Ralston lumber business, practically killed the old man and forced young Ralston to start out on a slim lumber venture of his own."

"This sounds interestin'," I says.

"It is interestin'," says the boss. "I wouldn't have got wise to this, only young Pinckney got all steamed up and starts to talking to me about Mary Blake, and telling me how she had sunk all her savings in the old business and, of course, lost every nickel. Pinckney chuckles when he tells me about it. Then he slips it that when the United Pirates—or whatever they call 'em—get through with young Ralston he'll be lucky if he can hook onto somebody's payroll in the only business he knows. And I'm the only theatrical producer in America knows that."

I begin to see light.

"You said this info leaked, boss," I says. "But on the level, now, is it you or Graffenreid Pinckney, damn him, that thinks Mary's about due to come back to Broadway?"

"It's about 50—50," owns up the boss, smiling a little at the way I'd picked him off.

"Gee, boss," I says. "Do you think we can get her back?"

"That," says the boss, "is where you come in."

"Me?" I says. And I ain't pulling no modest-hero line, either.

"You," says the boss. "I'm all tied up here with this Equity row and I can't go. She ain't going to come for any wire or telephone or letter, and you know it. This thing has got to be handled while it's hot. Young Pinckney is heading down into Louisiana this week to slip over the knockout in this cypress war. You've known her ever since you were out ahead of her when she was a baby star. She likes you. You're my special agent in this. Full power to act. Written authority. Take all the time you need."

SO that's why the Dixie de Luxe has me for a passenger that same night. Eleven o'clock the morning after I hit New Orleans I'm in the town I was aiming for, armed with the location of Mary's house and settled in the town's one and only hotel. Pretty soon I call Mary up and find out she was out, but would be back by supper time. Then I wander out to give the main stem the up and down.

There's a tinsmith and a general store; a tin garage; a frame hotel and a few frame houses; a couple of cows and a few hogs nosing around, mournful.

That's Main Street, town of Bayou Cypress, Parish of St. Agathe, State of Louisiana, U. S. A. And at the end of it lived Mary Blake! Home! It was the Old Home Town stuff, all right.

And this is home, I tells myself, for the girl that had Broadway traffic blocked only four years ago. I kinda shut my eyes and pictured the nights I'd seen "MARY BLAKE" there in big electric letters.

Then I go to the hotel and sit on the porch a while. I must 'a' fallen asleep, because the next thing I know I hear a laugh I'd of known anywhere.

There in front of me is Mary, with a long stalk of grass in her hand. She's been drawing it over my cheeks and chin.

"Jack Armstrong!" she laughs. "Oh, but the boss would know you'd been stepping out all night in the Bayou Cypress Tango Belt if he saw you sleeping the afternoon away like this!"

"Hel-lo, Mary!" I says, rubbing my eyes. "Say, you look like a million-dollar certified check in this burg. No place to cash it or spend it."

"Knocking the old home town!" she bubbles. "Old Jack!"

Say, it was like music, just to hear her talk.

"Imagine you in Bayou Cypress!" she goes on. "Get your bag and come right out to the house."

I grab my grip and we climb into a machine, with Mary at the wheel. We roll up Main street in the hot sunshine.

She was a picture! Same bronze hair and hazel eyes and baby skin as ever. Big floppy straw hat with ribbon on it, a cool linen dress that made her look like a schoolgirl, and tiny buckskin shoes with flat heels.

Pretty soon we got to her home—a great big rambling place with lots of flowers around. She told me to sit still on the porch while she went in and shook up a real mint julep. I said a real one.

Say, I ain't likely to forget that day if I live to be a million—aire or years, either one or both.

Not a question out of Mary, understand. Just glad to see me, and there she sits and talks of old times. Never the faintest hint, either, of her run of hard-luck.

"Well," I thinks to myself, "all the better for you, old kid. She'll listen to reason to save this place."

"Now," says Mary, after I've used up all the language I know telling how glad I am to see her, "we'll run back to town and I'll show you a real cypress sawmill. I don't think you've ever met Jack, my husband. He's been down in the swamp slashings today, but he was running back in his cruiser. He'll probably be at the mill now."

We roll up the little side road from the bayou to the main highway and just as Mary is turning into the gravel road she throws on all the brakes can give us. We stop right now. I nearly push my head through the windshield, and then I look around. Down the road toward us is coming a flivver that must 'a' been one of Henry's first hundred thousand. And she's coming wild. Some sort of a skinny old bird was fighting the wheel, but Lizzie has the bit in her teeth and she won't behave.

"His radius rod's broken," gasps Mary.

"His neck'll be in a minute," I says.

It looks like we're both right. The tin can shimmies across the road and nosedives into the ditch.

I HIT the road first, and what I pull out from under the tinware looks like something Fido found in the ash can. Blood on his face from a cut in his forehead is running down into a stringy white mustache and one of those Southern Colonel goatees. One arm bends back where it's got no business bending. He's dressed in a faded blue linen suit that looks like it's been washed twice a week for 10 years. Small feet in little square-toed shoes that ain't been blacked since they left the store. I do some first-aid stuff with ditch water, and he comes back, talking something I can't understand.

"Creole French," says Mary to me, and she spiels at him in his own stuff.

"Let's get him down to the house, Jack," she says, turning to me.

I fix him up the best I can in the back seat while Mary takes the wheel and we beat it for the big house. He faints the first hundred yards.

"Friend of yours?" I asks Mary.

"Never met him before in my life," she says. "But he lives down in this section. His name is Hugues de la Houssaye of Cypremort, he tells me."

Into the big yard she swings that car, honks for the house darkies, and we carry the old wreck into a guest chamber, while Mary telephones and the doctor comes a-running.

The doctor sets the old boy's arm and washes and bandages him, and the old-timer wakes up. Wants to get right outa there and on his way. But Mary says nothing doing until he's rested up a bit, and the doctor backs her up and says there may be internal complications. Old-timer lays back on his pillow and gives up.

"We're no more use here just now," says Mary to me. "Let's run on down to the sawmill. I want to tell Jack about this. He ought to be back by now."

So back we roll down Main street and into a side street that has two whole houses on it, and then we're at the mill. There's a bunch of men standing around outside like you see anywhere when a fight's going to start.

"What's the trouble, Aristide?" Mary asks a Cajun fellow in blue jumper and overalls, standing a little away from the gang, though he's watching close.

"Dawg-gone skunk done been a-driving spikes int' th' lawgs, Miz Mary," he says. "Mist' Jack, he done jus' got in f'om th' slashin's in time t' find th' big bandsaws on both rigs plumb tore t' hell. Looks lak he done foun' th' low-flung houn' w'at did it. Talkin' t' him now."

We walk over to the crowd. There was a "Howdy, Miz Mary" from some of 'em. Most of 'em was watching what's going on in front, though.

"There's Jack, my husband, talking to that big man out there," says Mary, sort of soft like. Just like a woman might have said: "That Koh-i-noor diamond over there! That's mine!"

That Ralston boy, his back was towards us. He wasn't talking specially loud, but we could get it, all right. Broadway never would 'a' recognized him now. Not in that makeup.

"That was a cute trick," he was saying. "Copper-headed sledge hammer so nobody'd hear you drive those spikes at night. I ought to have known more about you before I put you on the log pond and gave you that night watchman job you asked for when Pete Leblanc was sick. But I was sucker enough to swallow your hard-luck story, and raise your pay because I thought it was decent of you to help Pete out. But you earned your pay from your real bosses in the United, you dirty polecat."

The other guy looks at him, hard as they make 'em.

"You'll have a hell of a fine time proving copper sledge-hammer or United or anything else," he says.

THEN we heard young Ralston's answer. His hand streaks out, and, boy, you could hear that slap 50 feet away. It's a pity William S. Hart couldn't have been there. He'd have git him some pointers in the next five minutes. The husky has about 30 pounds on young Ralston, but all he's got on him is from the neck down, and I'm leaving out the heart at that.

It looks like the husky don't want to stop short of murder. He never heard about the Marquis of Queensberry, I guess. If he did, he didn't care. In the first clinch he cares about as much what his elbows and knees and teeth and head connect with as the Germans cared whom they hit when they were bombarding Paris with Big Bertha.

I said the first clinch. It was the only clinch. Young Ralston slugs his way out of it with some short-arm body blows that sound like they'd split the board fence around any ball park. He staggers the husky with an uppercut as he gets away, and the caveman just misses on a drive with his knee after he tries to grind his boot heel into the kid's instep. Sweet stuff!

Then Ralston gets busy. The husky bores in, acting like he liked to eat it raw. Ralston side-steps two rushes like that.

Then, when he rushes the third time, the youngster steps in and meets it. Right to the heart and left to the jaw. It was like a coupla locomotives doing a head-on. It staggers the big bozo. Then Ralston's on top of him.

IT WAS all too fast for me. It was too fast for the husky, too. But I saw the last uppercut start, and I saw it land, and I knew it was curtains when I heard it sock.

"This baby needs both barrels," says Ralston, panting as he looks at his hands. "Throw some water on him. Pete and Jacques"—he calls two heavyweights up—"take him over to the Town Marshal's office. Tell the Marshal I'll be right over to file a charge of malicious mischief. Let our little friend here cool off in the hoosegow. He seems to want a run for his money. We'll give it to him."

Then he turns away—and he sees Mary and me. You never saw a guy's face change quicker in your life.

"Hel-lo, honey!" he says. "Say, I'm sorry you happened in on this little argument. Just got in from the slashings a couple of hours ago. Found out our little playmates in the United Cypress Pirates have been playing off-side. I'd have been home earlier if I could. Be there inside of an hour, anyway. Will I be in time for tea?"

Then Mary snaps out of it.

"This is old Jack Armstrong," she says. "Used to be my press agent years ago, way back when I was on tour with 'Baby Darling.' He dropped into Bayou Cypress, and I've kidnaped him out of Mother Bordeaux's, and he's having dinner and staying with us tonight. Too late for tea this afternoon. We'll spend the evening hearing about dear old wicked New York. And, oh, Jack, we've got another house guest—on the sick list, too. An old man named Hugues de la Houssaye from down Cypremort way. Smashed up when his flivver ran wild up near our chicken farm and somersaulted into the ditch."

Young Ralston grins at me, friendly, and mitts me with a paw that ain't much harder than the head of a sledge hammer. It's some skinned just now, too.

"Ought to have a fine evening with a pair of jacks like you and me, and this queen to draw to," he says. "Glad you dropped in. Like to see any of Mary's old buddies. Make the casualty case easy, Mary. I'll join you all at the house inside an hour. Got my hands pretty full, just now."

Mary and me, we ride back to the big house. Hardly a word about the fight. Took it casual, she did, like a part of the day's work.

MARY shows me up to my room to wash up for dinner, while she bathes and changes. Pretty soon I wander down to the library and buddy with Bob, one of those big Llewellyn bird dogs, that has the run of the house. I sit there pulling his ears and thinking and smoking. Mary's good for close to a million and a half in two years, I figure, for she's in a position to demand a big split in the movie stuff they'll make after she finishes the regular run of those plays the boss has waiting.

Then it hits me like a shot in the arm. Lord, the publicity in why she's doing it! Coming back to Broadway and Hollywood to help her husband fight the pirates of Wall street. Page 1—Must on any newspaper anywhere. And the Sunday spreads! Just let me place that tip confidential like with a coupla Sunday editors I know, and good night! Watch the smoke!

I'm still all hopped up with it when Mary comes down in something clingy and pale blue, and a few minutes later when Ralston comes down the stairs in white linen and gets busy with a silver cocktail shaker.

We go in to dinner in a big cool airy room all paneled in polished cypress, and, say, I'd seen Mary eat in everything from a Baltimore lunch to the Ritz banquet hall, but you ought to see her there in the candlelight over her own home dinner table!

We wander back into the library for coffee, just like a John Drew play. And there, after we've talked about the boss and the show game and the old crowd for a while, I put it to the pair of 'em, straight, what I'd come to Bayou Cypress for.

After I'd finished and before either of them can say a word the telephone bell rings.

It's there in the corner of the library. A colored maid in a white cap and apron comes in and answers it.

"N' Awlyins callin' fo' Mist' Jack."

"Pardon me a moment, won't you?" says young Ralston, and steps over to the telephone.

You know how these one-sided telephone conversations sound—like half of nothing at all. Ralston yesses and quite-sos and I-understands for a couple of minutes. Then he hangs up.

"What is it, dearest?" asks Mary, anxious like.

"That was Douglas Maitland's chief clerk telephoning, Mary. My lawyer in New Orleans," he says, turning to me. "We're going to have callers tonight. Maitland's one of 'em. They're both coming up by automobile from New Orleans. The other one, Mary—and he's a few miles ahead of Maitland—is your little old playmate, Graffenreid Pinckney. He's representing the United gang. The same ones whose sporting sabotage specialists drove those spikes in those logs that ripped a couple of good saw-rigs to tatters today."

"WHAT have they done now?" asks Mary. And you could see she was worried.

"You know that Bouligny tract of cypress swamp?" says Ralston. "The big section down by the coast where our best stuff is coming from? We bought that tract, all clean and above board, from the estate when old man Bouligny died. The old-timer never would sell, like a lot of these old-timers down here. The United's lawyers, they've dug up a missing heir in France, and they've got an injunction from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana barring us from taking out another log till we come into court and show cause why we should be allowed to live without their permission. Say, they dug deeper for that heir than anybody dug for gold in the Klondike. He's their tool just as much as their wrecking crew star I had to lick today."

He shook his head and did some more thinking.

"I'm going to give them the roughest scrap I've got in my system," he says. "But if they hog-tie me with injunctions and break me fighting their lawsuits, Mary, you won't be the wife of an independent lumberman, I'm afraid. You'll be the wife of a sawyer or a lumber salesman—if they even

HUMORIST WANTS CITY OF GREAT NECK TO CHANGE NAME: SUGGESTS "GOITRE"

Lardner Now Insists There Is Something in a Name

"LET'S CALL THE CITY OF GREAT NECK—INFLAMMATION."

By RING LARDNER.

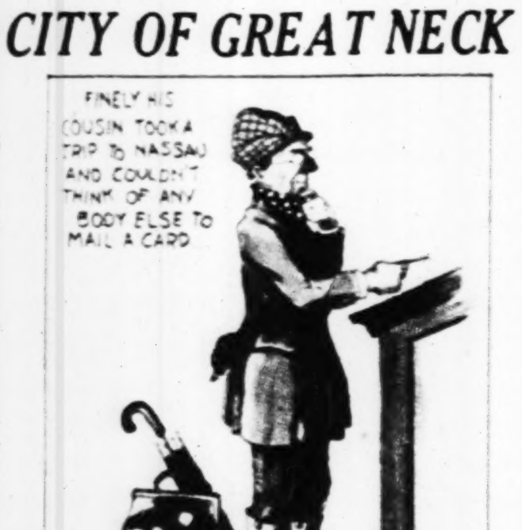
OUR thriving little community has lately split up in to 3 rival fractions over the vital question of whether or not the name of our principal street should ought to be changed. One fraction says yes, the other says no and the third ain't heard about it yet.

A STIFF NECK PROBLEM.

I would better exclaim that Great Neck is the place where I and several others lives and Great Neck got its name on acct. of being a large neck of land running out into Long's Island sound. The name of the main street is Middle Neck Road on acct. of it running right through the middle of the neck from one end to the other. The yes men claim the name is awkward and besides they's other villages in the neighborhood that has got a street by the same name and one time they was a man named Dudley or Graham or some such name that lived on Middle Neck Road, Port Washington, about 4 or 6 miles from us and he had never got a letter in his life though he expected one, and finely his cousin, a man named Webster in Stamford, took a trip to Nassau and couldn't think of nobody else to mail a card to so he mailed one to this here Dudley or maybe it was Graham.

BUT IS IT?

The card had a picture of the sponge fisheries in the Bahamas. Well, it seems that the U. S. mail service made a mistake and this card came to Great Neck instead of going to Port Washington though it says Port Washington plain as the nose on Rollie Zeider's face. This is said to be the first mistake ever made by the U. S. mail service and if this country ain't good enough for you go back from whence you came.



FINELY HIS COUSIN TOOK A TRIP TO NASSAU AND COULDN'T THINK OF ANY BODY ELSE TO MAIL A CARD

WE DOUBT IT.

Anyways a clerk in the Great Neck post office read both sides of the card and come to the conclusion that it was meant to go to this Dudley, alias Graham, in Port Washington so he forwarded it there and Graham got it O. K. but a day late, so he did not know till Wednesday that the Bahamas is a hot bed of sponges whereas if he had known it Tuesday he might of done something.

WHY NOT "LARDNER LANE?"

That is one side of the question and the proponents of the scream for changing the name of Middle Neck Road point out that the same incidence is libel to occur again in spite of the fact that Webster was only in Nassau 2 weeks and is now back in Stamford drawing silly cartoons. This fraction suggested that the new name be some kind of a name descriptive of the community, like Wonder Road or Actors Avenue.

ON THE OTHER HAND—

The 2d. fraction presents the following arguments:

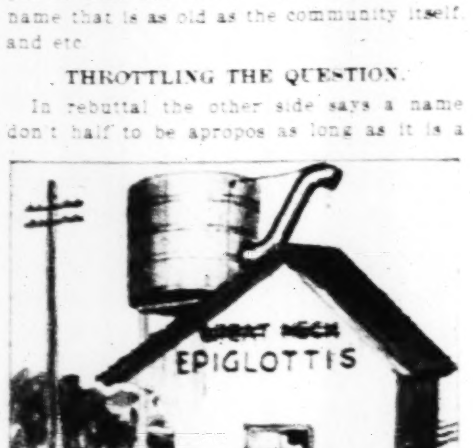
1. There is a street in Chicago named 22d. st. and there is a st. in New York named 22d. st. and there is a st. in Philadelphia named 22d. st. and there is a man living on 22d. St. New York, by the name of Cahill and he was in Oregon in 1924 and met a gal there and she promised to write to him a letter and she wrote it and he not only got it but wouldn't even answer it as she kept hinting in the letter that she would like to come east some time.

2. There is a town named Paris in France and a town named Paris, Illinois, and they's people in Paris, Illinois, that can't even begin to commence to talk French.

3. The name Middle Neck Road tells its own story, viz. it is the road in the middle of the neck. When you have got a name as pat as that and when it is a time honored name that is as old as the community itself, and etc.

THROTTLING THE QUESTION.

In rebuttal the other side says a name don't half to be apropos as long as it is a pretty name. Like for inst. we have got a street in Great Neck named Hicks Lane which is a beautiful name and nobody ever thought of changing it though only a few of the families abutting on that street is hicks. And then there is Cow Lane where Ed Streeter lives that use to write the dere Mable letters and he ain't a cow, ain't got a cow and hates milk. The present writer's brother lives on Lodge Road and ain't even an Elk.



GREAT NECK
EPIGLOTTIS
THE NEXT PROBLEM IS WHETHER OR NOT TO CHANGE THE NAME OF THE TOWN

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Gene Buck lives on Nassau Road and was never at Princeton only for football games and was never at Nassau in the Bahamas though he keeps a sponge. Then there is Spruce Place and I have seen people living on it that was absolutely dowdy, to say nothing about folks residing on Overlook Avenue who their neighbors say they don't overlook nothing.

WHY NOT "PITUITARY PLACE"?

However it might be just as well if the belligerents was showed some way to compromise and my suggestion is that a new name be selected that would combine beauty and elegance with aptness you might say and preserve the sense of Middle Neck, like for example Adam's Apple Avenue, Larynx Lane, Thyroid Thoroughfare, Trachea Terrace, Windpipe Way or Jugular Boulevard.

WE SUGGEST "INFLAMMATION."

When this affaire du coeur is decided one or both ways the next problem is whether or not to change the name of the town itself on acct. of it being 2 mile from Little Neck and not only that but when you say so and so is a Great Necker you are libel to give the impression that they are a red hot petter. Four or five years ago the substitute name Goitre was suggested by May Wilson Preston, but for some reason another did not seem to take. Leaders in the community has been pondering this the last 12 mo. but so far has come to no definite decision. Amongst the suggestions put forward has been Swollen Tonsils, Eighteen Collar and Zbyszko.

THIS WEEK'S COVER

A FORERUNNER of Rembrandt, and one of the men who molded the development of Dutch art, was Jacob Gerritz Cuyp, whose portrait of "The Lady" is reproduced as the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine. He transformed the minute and dry method of the Brils and the Brueghels into a broader warmer imitation of nature, according to Sir J. H. Crowe, the distinguished English critic.

Possibly greater in historic than in esthetic interest is this portrait, quaint, yet natural, carefully painted, faithful in its every detail. Against an olivaceous, yet gray, background is the sitter painted, in her white frilled cap, her great white ruff, her black gown and her white cuffs. Cuyp was manifestly a craftsman. The work is smooth, careful, sure. The skin has an age-tint as of a faintly colored meerschaum. There is a healthy flush in the cheeks of this mother in Israel who looks out upon a troubled world, strong in her faith and self-contained. With remarkable detail the embroideries of cap and cuff and the great white ruff are painted. The hands, with long sensitive fingers, are loosely clasped to hold white gloves. The rings upon the fingers are successfully achieved. The feeling of jewels is there, just as the feeling of stiff and heavy silk is in the gown she wears.

Little is known of the life of Jacob Cuyp, so completely is he overshadowed by his son, Aelbert, whose pictures were a determining factor in Dutch landscape painting and whose worth, first recognized in England, won him great fame. The father was born at Dordrecht in 1594 and was a pupil in painting of Abraham Bloemaert. He was famous for his portraits, but painted also some significant town scenes, some exquisite landscapes and some stirring battle pieces. He was one of the four founders of the St. Luke's Guild of painters in Dordrecht, and he is believed to have died in 1651 or 1652.

A power of organization, an original vision, a forceful method of presentment and a more faithful approximation of nature—these were outstanding in his work. His paintings are to be found in Amsterdam, Metz and Rotterdam and in the Berlin Museum. The one reproduced here is by courtesy of the City Art Museum.

The father of Jacob Gerritz Cuyp, Gerrit Gerritsz I, was a glass graver. After Jacob's studies with Bloemaert at Utrecht he to Dordrecht, where his then lived, and enrolled in St. Luke's Guild of that day—Guild of Five Trades, as it was called—which opened its doors to all able workers in the arts. Of this 1637, he was dean. Five years with painter friends, he founded the guild of painters under the saint's patronage. Evidently he became one of the more wealthy burghers of Dordrecht, as the register of the taxes he paid shows. He married in 1618 Aertken Van Cooten, the mother of his famous son. After the death of Gerrit Gerritsz I. Jacob became head of the Cuyp family, although Benjamin, his father's half-brother, was alive and living with him. The date of Jacob Cuyp's death is fixed by the fact that in 1652 he painted a "Portrait of a Woman" in the Amsterdam gallery, while the tax papers of the following year are made out in the name of Aertken Cuyp, widow of Jacob.

Jacob Cuyp taught his son Aelbert to paint, and Benjamin, his brother, was another of his pupils. Little is known of the latter. Aelbert became known as "the Dutch Claude." He, too, painted a few portraits, some spectacular cavalry charges, and his portraits of birds and bits of seascape and seacoast are appreciated, but it was as painter of landscape that he became famous. The son evidently was a great man in his town of Dordrecht and had the right to sit upon the Supreme Court bench. Whether he practiced painting as a professional or as an amateur has been debated and is not known. His mastery of atmospheric effects in landscape, the purity of his design, and his sturdy Dutch independence against the influence of Italianate art were factors of his work.

Franz Hals was 14 years younger than the elder Cuyp and outlived him. Other important masters of his time were Hercules Seghers, Jan Van Goyen, Solomon Van Ruysdael and Robert Roghman, together with Adriaen Van Ostade and Gerard Dou. During his life Rembrandt was born and began painting. Jacob Cuyp may have to some extent influenced some lesser of these men. But his great contribution to Dutch painting was not so much in his own work, perhaps, as in the art of his son.

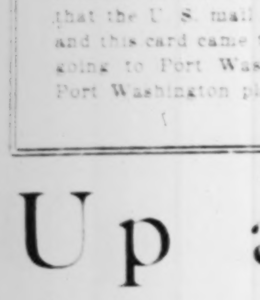
Up and Down the Mississippi on a Giant Raft

By a Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent.



CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia.—"We slept most all day and started out at night, a little ways behind a monstrous long raft, that was as long going by as a procession." Thus Mark Twain chronicled an adventure of "Huckleberry Finn." "She had four long sweeps at each end, so we judged she carried as many as 30 men, likely. She had five big wigwams aboard, wide apart, and an open camp-fire in the middle and a tall flag pole at each end. There was a power of style at each end. It amounted to something being a raftsman on such a craft as that."

And it did amount to something in those old River Days, as "Cap'n Hayd" Marks of Cedar Rapids—who knew Mark Twain when the latter was Sam Clemens and a pilot, and who himself was pilot of such rafts and on river steamers, too—pictured the life while he sat in his little home, looking back over vistas of more than half a century.

"Mark Twain" he met at Le Clair, Iowa, just before the humorist abandoned the great river in 1861.

"I was learnin' the river with George Trombley of Le Clair." Captain Marks' eyes lighted with a glow as he dreamed back across the years. "I wasn't a regular cub-pilot. I'd been workin' as a cook, for I had it in my mind to learn the river. We had a tow of logs and I'd been working to save the cost of an extra pilot. I don't remember the name of our boat nor the other but the Itaska was there at Le Clair then, and I think it must have been her. Well, we went visitin' up in the pilot house. There was a tall young man there who sort of pulled his words. He had a bushy mop of sandy hair and long side-burns framed his cheeks, with a high brow, and a long nose and high nostrils, his lips was wide and full and his mouth good humored. He was dressed quiet but pretty fine. And they introduced everybody all round: 'This is Mr. Clemens.'

"That was Sam Clemens—Mark Twain—he had written some pieces for the papers and signed that name. Sometimes they called him by it."

And then the old river pilot launched into a bit of doubtful history, repeating the tradition of the upper river.

"IT WAS shortly after Sam Clemens started to learn the river with Cap'n Horace Bixby," he said. "They used to heave the lead in places where the water was shallow to learn how deep it was. This boat had to have three feet of water. Clemens was a cub and they had left him all alone in the pilot house. The leadsman was callin' out the soundings. 'Five feet. Four and a half.' Then, suddenly, 'Mark Twain!' That was danger!

"Sam Clemens rang the stop bell.

"'Stop! Back! Back the eternal livers out of her!' he shouted, and after that they called him Mark Twain."

Captain Ephraim Hayden Marks, at the age of 83, was building fruit-shelves in the cellar of his new home when he was interrupted to spin some river yarns. And he began at the little town of Le Clair, Iowa, just above Davenport, for near Le Clair he and "Buffalo Bill," with whom he played at "killin' Injuns" as a boy, were born.

Like Mark Twain's little white town of Hannibal, Le Clair had sent into the river world a number of fine pilots. Between there and Davenport were the rapids. "The worst bit of water on the upper river," Capt. Marks described them. If "Injuns" called "Buffalo Bill," who was three years the Captain's younger, the river called to him. At the age of 13 he was a "slush cook" on a steamboat, washing dishes, carrying in wood and water for the cooking.

"The cook gave me a bucket," he recalled. "'Take this to the well and get some water,' he said. Well, where was I to find a well when we were in midstream? I just wandered around with the bucket. Pretty soon I found it—a hole cut down through the boat so we could get our water from the river."

There were two years of that and then began his raftsman's life. "It amounted to something," as Mark Twain said. They were proud of their skill, these raftsmen, and sometimes lawless devils. They brought great rafts of logs or lumber down the great wide rolling river, from the Chippewa or Wisconsin rivers, or, perhaps, a raft of logs down from Stillwater, in Minnesota, to St. Louis where they were delivered and the job was done.

Two years of that there were—hard gruelling labor, but it was life in the open, and he learned to know the river and know men.

THERE was a natural gift for mechanics in the youth. So he got another job on a "chisel boat"—a boat with a big weighted blade that dropped like the hammer of a pile driver and was being used to chisel out a channel through the rocky rapids at Le Clair. That would keep him home, too. His friend, Captain Trombley, who afterward "learned him the river," and J. R. T. Lindley, known as "Kentuck," were pilots of the "chisel boat." But the boss was a man that was known as "Davy Crockett," and he was the only man who ever fired Hayd Marks from any job.

"A big bruising bully," said the old pilot. "A two-fisted man who had a reputation as a fighter and who cursed and drove until he made our lives almost a hell. But he never cursed me. I don't know why. I never was his friend. One day he turned on someone for something—I don't remember what—and he called him every name a cursing tongue could say.

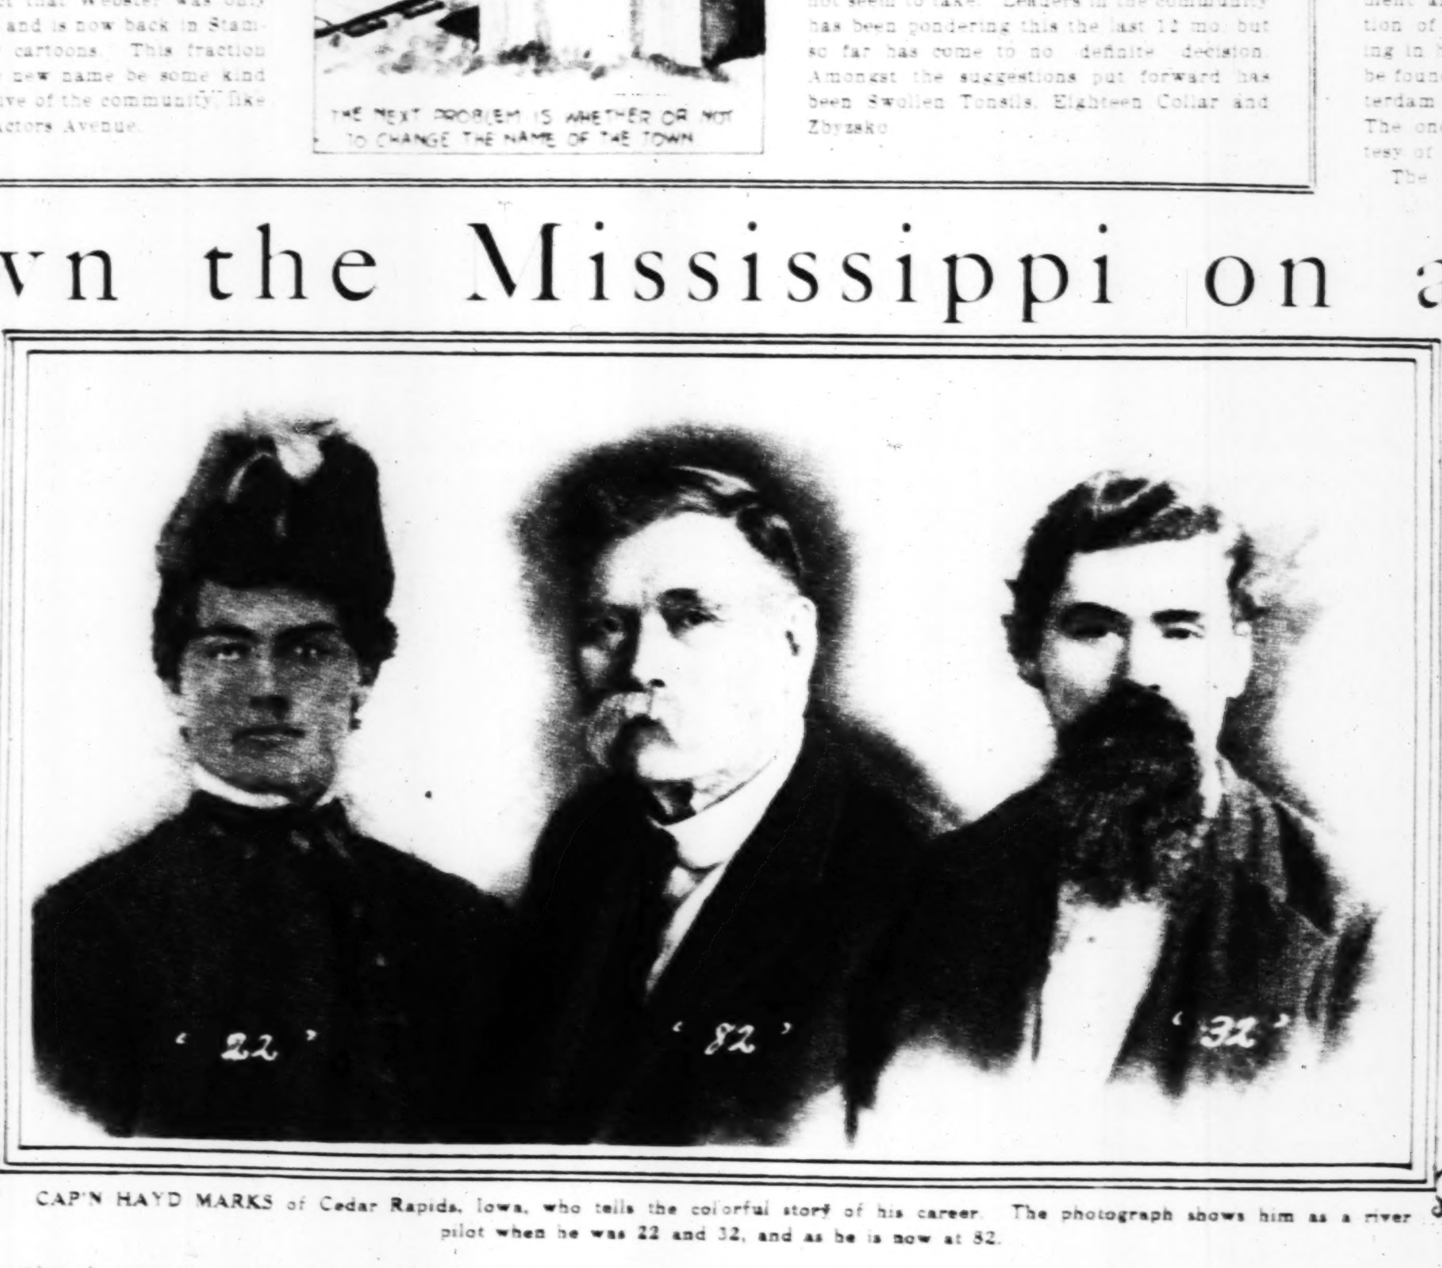
"I was mad. If a man talked that way to me I'd give him one under the ear,' I says. He heard me. 'What did you say?' I repeated it.

"'We ain't got no use for you on this boat. Go down and get your time,' he says. Now it was getting along toward spring. I wanted to be back on the river. I was going to join a raft up at Lake St. Croix and had been waiting for the ice to go out of the lakes. I was going to quit that Saturday, but they'd have held up my pay until the end of the month. I needed it. Here was my chance. I went down to get it.

"'But you can't quit, we need you. We ain't got no one to take your place,' the big boss said. I laughed. But I quit, just the same.

"Now I was back on the river—a cook. But I wasn't going to stay on cookin'. I planned to learn the river and after a while Captain Trombley quit the chisel-boat and I got back with him and had my chance.

"But really I wasn't a regular cub pilot until I was 23. That was in 1865, when I'd got back from the war. I had served in the Sixth Iowa Cavalry under General Sully up at Fort Pierre and Fort Sully, and on up at Devil's Lake. That was all Dakota Territory in them days.



CAP'N HAYD MARKS of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who tells the colorful story of his career. The photograph shows him as a river pilot when he was 22 and 32, and as he is now at 82.

"RAFTS carried their pilots, just like boats. And there was special crews that men took pride in belonging to. It was a wild free rough life. We'd run the raft down to St. Louis, going night and day unless we had to tie up for some reason. Usually we delivered them at Carondelet. Then next afternoon we'd get a packet back up the river. There was six or eight boats goin' in each direction in them days, where they ain't one now.

"Them rafts was 1 to 12 strings wide, and each string—that is, each bunch of logs, was a rod wide, and they'd string back maybe 500 feet. They was square at bow and stern, and usually they had a cookhouse and two sleeping shanties built on 'em.

"They was steered with great oars, or sweeps, six of them at her bow, six at her stern, and the oars was fixed by pins in three-inch holes bored in the log.

"You'd pull those oars against the current to stabboard and labbord, as you wanted to steer her.

"They was one man to an oar.

"'Stern oars, there! Heave her head to the labbord,' the pilot would call, and the crew at the stern would lift up on the sweeps to get the blades down into the water and strain and push to the stabbord to head her out the other way.

"It was back-breakin', cruel work. And sometimes men was hard to get.

"THERE was Bob Dodds, a pilot out of St. Louis, who had a crack crew and had his men in uniform—blue blouse and pants with red collar and a red belt. Men was hard to get in St. Louis that time, and Bob had signed on two kids—Vincie Carroll and John Hanley. Neither of 'em could do a man's work. Pay was $2 a day and so they was willin' to go on for $1 a day and pie. They did their best. Both was from good St. Louis families.

"One of Bob Dodds' men was named Joe Bell. He was the bully of that outfit. I was only a cook then, but I couldn't bear to hear him pickin' on them two kids.

"'Why, you're just a half a man,' he said. 'If I couldn't be a whole man I wouldn't be any.'

"'You oughta be ashamed to pick on them boys that way,' I told him.

"'Do you want to take it up?' he says. 'If you do, come out here.'

"I stepped out of the cookhouse and he started to dance around me, drivin' his fists like a steam engine's piston rod.

"'Put up your dukes,' he says, with a sneer on his face.

"I come up and he hit me a slap on the side of the head. Then I left fly and give him the news. He pulled back, put his head down and come at me. He'd a busted through a rail fence if there had been one, the way he was comin'. I let him have my right. He staggered back and my foot caught and there we was both of us down together. Then started the dog fight. We was tusslin' and tuggin' and poundin' each other for all we was worth, sometimes one of us on top and sometimes the other. Sometimes he'd try to pound my head on the logs of the raft, and sometimes I'd try to pound his'n. Finally he tried to choke me and he got two fingers in my mouth and I bit down on them and wouldn't let go. We fought that way for 20 minutes—it was 22 minutes, to be exact. The boys was crowdin' around, all except Bob Dodds. He was keeping out of sight, looking the other way—on purpose, I guess. Finally I got this Joe Bell's head in chancery and started pounding his face with short-arm jabs. I broke a finger on my left fist, doin' that. I was surely wishin' he'd holler enough. Then Bob Dodds come along and stopped us.

"'I won't have any fighting on my raft,' he says, lookin' fierce. 'If you fellers ain't got enough I'll just put this raft ashore and let you go out on land and fight it out.' I was gettin' scared, maybe Joe Bell would

Asthma Kept Him From Working

Can Work Like a Horse Now, and Says He Is Entirely Well.

Those who have lost sleep and health from asthma and bronchial trouble will appreciate how good it felt to Al. It. Hoyting, Burnstad, No. Dak., to be restored to health after 9 years of suffering. He writes:

"I suffered from asthma for 9 years, and grew so weak and discouraged I could hardly do any work. My cough was so bad that I had severe pains. I began taking Nacor in 1916, and I am glad to say, for the benefit of others, that my asthma left me, and my general health started to improve. My cough stopped, my weight increased and I soon felt ten years younger. I was able to work like a horse all last summer. The benefit received was lasting, and I am still able to say (March 16, 1925) that I have no asthma, no cough, no pains; I sleep fine and my health is perfect."

Hundreds of people who suffered for years from asthma, bronchitis and severe chronic coughs, have told how their trouble left and never returned. Their letters and a booklet of vital and interesting information about these serious diseases, will be sent free by Nacor Medicine Co., 542 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. HOKUM IN THE HEART let me get a job at the only game I know. And there's no big house and no summers on the continent on that kind of pay. I haven't even got dad's resources—and they broke him."

I think I see my opening and I dive for it. Here, laid right in my lap, is the confidential stuff the boss gives me, and I don't even have to mention that I knew it.

"Listen, Mr. Ralston," I butts in, "ain't you overlooking a bet? If you need money to buck the dirty deal that bunch is ganging to hand you, you've got a gold mine sitting right here beside you. The least estimate the boss makes is that Mary's worth a million to a million and a half to herself counting her movie split, if she comes back for two years. And the boss will give her the greatest role she ever acted.

"What do you say, Mr. Ralston?" I ask him, figuring Mary'll feel better if he gives it his O K.

I'm a son-of-a-gun if he ain't grinning. Not a nervous smile. Not a forced laugh or a relieved one. Just a plain old-fashioned kid grin.

"I rather think that's something for Mrs. Ralston to decide, don't you?" he says. "When she honored me by becoming Mrs. Ralston I told her I'd never rough-house her career."

Here goes the stuff over the dotted line, I'm thinking. And then Mary laughs. "Oh, but you are such dears, the lot of you," she gurgles. "Only you're such stupid dears. 'The greatest role I ever acted,' you say. The boss doesn't make mistakes often, but he's made one there. I'm playing the greatest role in my life here in Bayou Cypress."

Usually I'm pretty fast on the uptake. But I strip my gears on that one.

"What role?" I asks, puzzled.

"Mrs. John H. Ralston, the wife," bubbles Mary.

I tumble. I guess I grin sort of foolish like. I ain't quite got my breath back yet.

"Listen," says Mary. "That husband of mine over there doesn't look like a wreck or a cripple, does he?"

I HAD to admit that if he did I'd got to revise my notion of wrecks and cripples.

"If he was," Mary goes on, "I'd go out and scrub floors for him if I had to, let alone grasping such an opportunity as the boss offers. But he isn't. It's his job now to fight for me, and it's my job to make a home for him. And when a husband has a fight on his hands in Bayou Cypress, Louisiana, that's where his wife belongs. Not on Broadway or in Hollywood or down at Palm Beach or anywhere else. Just at home!"

Gee, but that was a line! The good old bokum! I felt a shiver go up my backbone.

And Ralston just sat there and grinned. The lucky stiff. Just grinned. But when I come to think about it, what else was there for him to do?

I try to catch back. Oh, I'm clever!

"But listen, Mary," I tells her. "Can't you be more use to him helping him raise a war fund to fight these dirty low-life bums than you can just making him a home?"

Mary laughs that million-dollar laugh of hers and looks at her husband.

"John Henry Ralston," she says, "in the presence of a witness, now; and remember that what you say will be used against you: Did you marry me with the thrifty idea that some day I'd go out and lift the mortgage off the old homestead?"

Ralston chuckles and lights another cigarette. "Quit your kidding," is all he says.

I feel myself slipping. I look around at the furnishings of that library—those big cool rooms.

"Then if he loses out in this fight you'll give up all this and live in some rented little cottage wherever he takes a job?" I shoot back at her.

"THAT'S right where I'll be living," says Mary, and I'm damned if her voice ain't sort of singing. "I'll have him, won't I? And he'll have me. And we'll both have something I'm afraid you've got a lot to learn about, Jack Armstrong, you old dear. That's love. In our home. The home I'll make for him in a shack, if we have to."

"Kamerad!" I croaks. "I'm licked.

"I told you," says I. "And if it costs me my job I'm telling the slab-jawed world she's decided it right."

Then the maid comes in. "Two gen'lem'n t' see Mista Jack," she says. "One's Mista Maitland. T'otheh says his name's Pinckney."

The grin that lights up young Ralston's face was pure Yale bulldog fighting stuff.

"Show 'em in before they start biting each other out in the hall," he says to the maid. He turns to Mary. "Douglas must have caught up with him while he was waiting for the Atchafalaya River auto ferry," he says. "Don't try to leave, either you or Mr. Armstrong. We may have some fireworks."

The maid brings in the pair of 'em. And young Ralston opens the ball. He acts like he believes Papa Joffre was right when he said the best defense is to hit the other guy.

"Mr. Maitland, here, is my lawyer, Mr. Pinckney," he says, short and sharp. "Mr. Armstrong is a friend. You both know Mrs. Ralston. Anything you've got to say to me you can say in front of them. Now, don't waste time telling all about regrets you haven't got. I know already about the injunction you've got today. Let's hear just what you hope to make by it, and don't waste time trying to camouflage it."

Pinckney's angora is running loose now. "I came out here to buy out your interests at a reasonable appraisal," he says, "as part of the new organization of the cypress lumber business. But if you're aching for battle in the open market instead, we can give you that."

"I know already about what your idea of 'reasonable appraisal' is," says Ralston with a grin. "Suppose you listen to me a minute."

Short and snappy he gives him both barrels on the wrecking of those two saw rigs by the spike-driving husky. Pinckney sits there trying to look bored and wear one of those superior smiles at the same time.

"You'll have rather a time proving that my associates had anything to do with that," he says, when Ralston finishes.

"Well," begins Ralston, "that's what your sabotage specialist said. But we'll do our feeble best when"—

He looks around. The maid, just outside the door, was arguing with somebody and their voices had got loud.

"Yo' bet I'm goin' t' see Mistah Jack, me!" says the other voice. "I don't care who he's talkin' with."

And in through the door walks the little Cajun I'd seen at the mill that afternoon—Achille Rambeau. He's smeared with mud, and he's carrying something I'll swear never came into a library before. Some evening caller! But young Ralston couldn't have welcomed the Prince of Wales any more than he did this guy.

"He come through, Misteh Jack! He sure as hell come through!" says Achille. "And will yo' look at w'at I got heah? I done dive in dat log pond an' I got it."

What he's got is a big copper-headed sledge hammer. That's all.

"Did he make a statement, Achille?" asks Ralston, eager as a kid.

"SACRE cochon!" says Achille. "I say he make a statement. He can't lick us all, so he make statement all right. He tell his real name befo' he stop. He tell who hire him and w'at he done been hired fo'. Dat Town Marshal, he got dat statement lock up in his safe, waitin' fo' yo'."

Pinckney's goat bucks loose again. "If you get enough wood off that Bouligny tract to make a box of matches, you'll be doing well," he says. "This game hasn't started yet"

"Pardon," says a voice in the doorway.

We all look up surprised.

There stands the old bird Mary and me picked up out of the ditch that afternoon.

Mary gives a little cry and starts up from her chair and runs over to him. He holds out his good hand to her.

The two of them spatter French all over the landscape for a couple of minutes. We catch the word "Bouligny" a couple of times. The old-timer seems to be asking a lot of questions, and Mary seems to be answering them. Then she turns, and, say—you ought to see the way her eyes are shining.

"Let me present you," she says, "to Monsieur Hugues de la Houssaye of Cypremort, who has no business to be out of bed, but who felt he must go on to perform for his friends. He has consented now to return to bed, Jack"—she nodded to her husband—"will you and Mr. Maitland come with me, if Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Pinckney will excuse us a minute, and help Monsieur de la Houssaye retire once more?"

Pinckney and I sit there for half an hour or more, smoking and looking at each other like a couple of sore-headed bears. Then down into the room comes Mary and Ralston and Maitland. And you ought to have seen their faces!

"PINCKNEY," says young Ralston, "you may remember enough of your history to recall it was Captain Philip of the Texas who said: 'Don't cheer, boys! The poor devils are dying!' That's the way I feel about you. Man, you don't know how badly you and your gang of crooks are licked. You came here to try to buy me out after you'd tried to wreck me the way your crowd wrecked my father. You can take my answer now. If I owned all the cypress in the world I wouldn't sell you a splinter for a million dollars. Now, go ahead and crack your toy whip."

He rang a bell on the library table. The maid comes in.

"Bring Mr. Pinckney's hat and show him out," says Ralston. "And have the house boy show him where the hotel is if he wishes to spend the rest of the night in Bayou Cypress."

Pinckney did all there was left for him to do. He beat it.

He ain't any more puzzled than I am.

"Say," I says, when the door shuts behind him, "do you business experts mind telling a simple-minded press agent how putting an old bird to bed makes you get this way?"

You should 'a' heard 'em laugh. It was Mary came to first.

"Since it's you, Jack," she bubbles, "we don't mind telling you, in confidence. All that 'old bird' is, it happens, is the leader of a group of old-time Louisiana French folks who own the last big tract of cypress swamp down Cypremort way. Nobody has ever been able to induce them to sell. The United crowd has been pestering them for months. They decided finally to put it on the market, and picked him as chairman to go into the city to open negotiations with somebody they could trust. That's why he was in such a hurry to go on. They have old-fashioned ideas down there, Jack. He got my maid to help him dress and he was waiting down in the hallway to thank me for helping him, before he left, when he heard the name of his old friend Bouligny mentioned. He asked me what it was all about. I told him. We've closed with him for that cypress. My husband goes into the city to his bankers in the morning. However the Bouligny tract suit comes out, we've got the cypress. That's absolutely all, Jack!"

Did I add my three ringing cheers to the noise? I'll say I did.

Next morning Mary drives me down to the station to catch the rattler for New Orleans. Her husband and Maitland had left early in Maitland's car, to get to town quick.

"You tell the boss exactly what happened," says Mary. "And, Jack, old pal, tell him something more for me. Tell him he's an old darling to remember me. Tell him if I ever should go back to the old game there's nobody in the whole world I'd go back for except him. Tell him I said he's got the finest special representative he possibly could have, and I'm going to write him to confirm it."

She stops a minute, and I see she's flushing up a little.

"And, Jack," she says, "you're both such old dear friends—tell him—that you and he are going to get an invitation to—a—a—christening party before long."

Mary's eyes shining are the last things I see from the platform as the train rolls out of Bayou Cypress. I'm muttering to myself.

"Jack Ralston, you're the luckiest stiff in the world," is what I find I'm saying. Damned if I ain't forgot how hard I fell down on my first big job!

But I got time to remember, heading back to New York. I face the boss, kinda shivery inside. I come clean. The whole story. Start to finish.

"Um hum," says the boss. "You're licked, all right. But do you know why you're licked?"

"I'm guessing," I says.

"I AIN'T," says the boss. "I know. You're licked because you were bucking the greatest force in the world—hokum!"

"Hokum?" I asked.

"Hokum," he says. Usually the boss lets the other guy do the talking. But sometimes he orates. This was one of them times.

"Hokum is right!" he says. "Evidently you don't know what hokum is. I'll tell you. It's the crystallized judgment of the human race on what's best in the hearts of men and women ever since they came out of the jungle and the cave. Hokum rules the world in the long run. Mary Blake's got hokum in her heart, and it made her one of the greatest actresses. She knew it was the real heart-throb stuff. She acted it right because she lived it. And hokum's making her one of the greatest wives in the world today.

"What you saw down in Bayou Cypress," he says, "I've seen in an Al Woods show on Seventh avenue. All Mary Blake was doing when she faced life in a shack to stick by her man was to live the greatest line of hokum old Bartley Campbell ever wrote."

"What's that?" I ask.

Says the boss: "'Rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake.' And do you know why it was the greatest line Bartley ever put on?"

"Shoot," I tell him.

"George Ade hit it," says the boss. "'Dammit,' he says, 'rags ARE royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake!' That's why."

Up and Down the Mississippi On a Giant Raft

want to do that. But he didn't. My, I'd have hated to.

"When we landed in Carondelet, delivering our raft we'd go out and see some of St. Louis. There was an old prize-fighter had a saloon—Tom Allen—he'd once been a world's champion, I think, and we'd go down to see him and his place.' (It was where the American Theater now stands.) "And there was another place the river boys would like to go. That was Mike McCool's pool room and saloon. Mike was a fight promoter, I guess you'd call it now, and he always had some young bloods in training. Sometimes he'd go up the river to the Illinois towns and arrange a fight. That day after I'd licked Joe Bell I almost felt like I was good enough to fight for Mike.

"Sometimes the raft would get caught in a sudden storm. I remember one night when we was passin' Dubuque and a summer storm hit us. The white caps rose up on the river like you'd think it might be the ocean and the wind blowed the cook shanty to pieces and scattered the boards all around. We had a man on board named Haggerty. He was always sayin' "Tea tea, whisky-tea, Haggertea.' I remember him at one of the bow sweeps that night. 'Here, give her a lick on the labboard,' he'd say, 'for Mrs. Haggerty's house over there in Dubuque.'

"THEY were rough men. There used to be a sayin' along the river—'You'd better take your grindstones in, there's a raft down there.' People thought the raftsmen would steal anything, whether they needed the thing or not.

"One moonlight night we was tied up down below Bellevue, Iowa, and someone said some chicken would go pretty good, and we—four of us—went out foraging. We had to go through a cemetery to the nearest farm and the others went up to the chickencoop to get the hens while I stayed in the road and watched the farmer's house.

"The boys all took sacks along to bring the chickens away.

"Well, suddenly I heard a chicken squawk, and the next minute they was a light showed in the house and the farmer came to the door with his gun and I whistled a warning to the boys.

"Bang! Bang! went the gun, but I didn't stop to hear it. I was racin' down the road. The other fellows didn't stop, neither. They made just one dive out across the farmyard and never stopped for the road. They was scramblin', the next minute, through that old graveyard with its tangle of blackberry vines, just like ghosts was after them. When they got down to the raft: 'Where's your chickens?' they was asked. They not only didn't have no chickens. They didn't have no sacks. That's the only time I ever really knew of raftsmen stealin' anything and they didn't steal anything then.

"Captain George Trombley got a run on the D. A. McDonald from St. Louis to Stillwater and I was her second pilot. That was in 1871. After a while I kinda wanted to stop off in Le Clair, where I was born, and visit for a day or two, so one trip when I knew he was going to lay over a few days up at the other end I saw a pilot named 'Norwegian Tom' Wilson just as we got to Le Clair, and I asked him to take my run for me. It was all right with Captain George Trombley. So 'Norwegian Tom' took my watch. When the McDonald got up as far as McGregor, Iowa, she blew up. 'Norwegian Tom' was at the wheel. The burst of the boilers drove a part of it clean through his body. That's as near as ever I come to being in an accident.

"No," he continued, "we wasn't racin'. They used to be some races in those old days, though. . . .

"The old McDonald was a slow boat, as far as that goes, but she had a lot of power. The fastest packet on the upper river in them days was the 'Spread Eagle,' running between St. Louis and Keokuk. She'd show you a clean pair of heels.

"WHEN a race was on there was plenty of excitement. The passengers would crowd to the rail on the side of the deck where the rival packet was, and there would be callin' across when they got near enough, and if the other packet was gainin' on you, pretty soon some of her people would come out with a broom like as if to sweep you off the river, and later maybe a line, and they'd offer you a tow.

"You know how it was. The railroads come in and the packets disappeared. I was raisin' a family, and had to have something to do. So I moved here to Cedar Rapids. I thought I'd bid farewell to the river life. Years passed. * * *

"Then one day came an offer to navigate the ragin' Cedar River. The Corliss firm here had some boats—the General Weaver and the Rose of Cedar Rapids—and wanted to bring wood and sand and gravel down from Vinton. So someone told Mr. Corliss I was a pilot, and he comes to me.

"A carpenter's wages was $2 a day then and I was workin' as a carpenter. He offered me $2. 'Why, I wouldn't put my foot on a boat,' I told him, 'for less than three.' And he had to pay it.

"'Have you got a license?' he said.

"'I have not,' I told him, 'but that don't make no difference, because the ragin' Cedar ain't a navigable stream.' And according to the Government, it ain't.

"So I went to work. Well, I'd run on the Cedar for a little while and one afternoon we was goin' up to Vinton and the old man was on board. He was pretty anxious to get back home that night, he was sayin', but I didn't pretend to pay any attention.

"We had a barge in tow on the return trip, with about 30 cords of wood on it. Finally, it was near dark and I was ready to go.

"'How far are you goin'?' Mr. Corliss asked me.

"'To Cedar Rapids tonight,' I said.

"HE LOOKED and laughed kinda queer. There was the bridge at Palo. Nobody had ever gone under that bridge at night.

"When you knowed the river in the old days on the Mississippi you knowed it. You didn't half know it. You didn't think you knowed it. It was that way with me and the ragin' Cedar. I knowed the river.

"I'd got the picture in my mind—the big tree that was a landmark on the hill ahead—the point of a hill behind. When we come to the bridge I just turned her so the range between them points was right through the pilot house. I think the old man was scared to death, but the boat slipped through between them bridge piers just as easy as a row-boat might, and that night, down at Cedar Rapids, we tied up.

"The old man ran his fist in his pocket and gave me a $10 gold piece. It seemed to surprise him that I knew the river!" He smiled.

"Have I got to learn the shape of the river according to all these five hundred thousand different ways?" Mark Twain had asked of Pilot Horace Bixby in the days while he worked with that pilot as a cub.

"No," was the answer. "You only learn the shape of the river, and you learn it with such absolute certainty that you can always steer by the shape that's in your head, and never mind the one that's before your eyes."

Captain Ephraim Hayden Marks was trained in that old school.

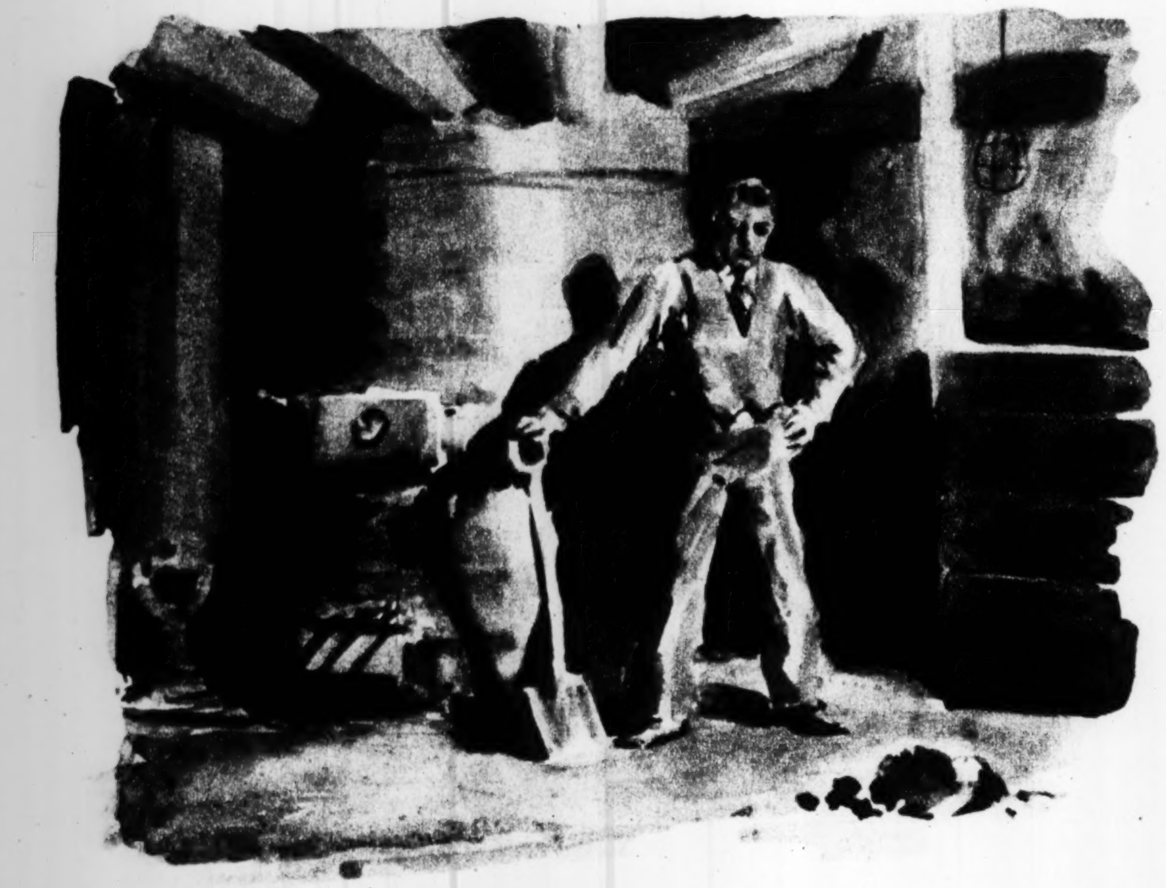
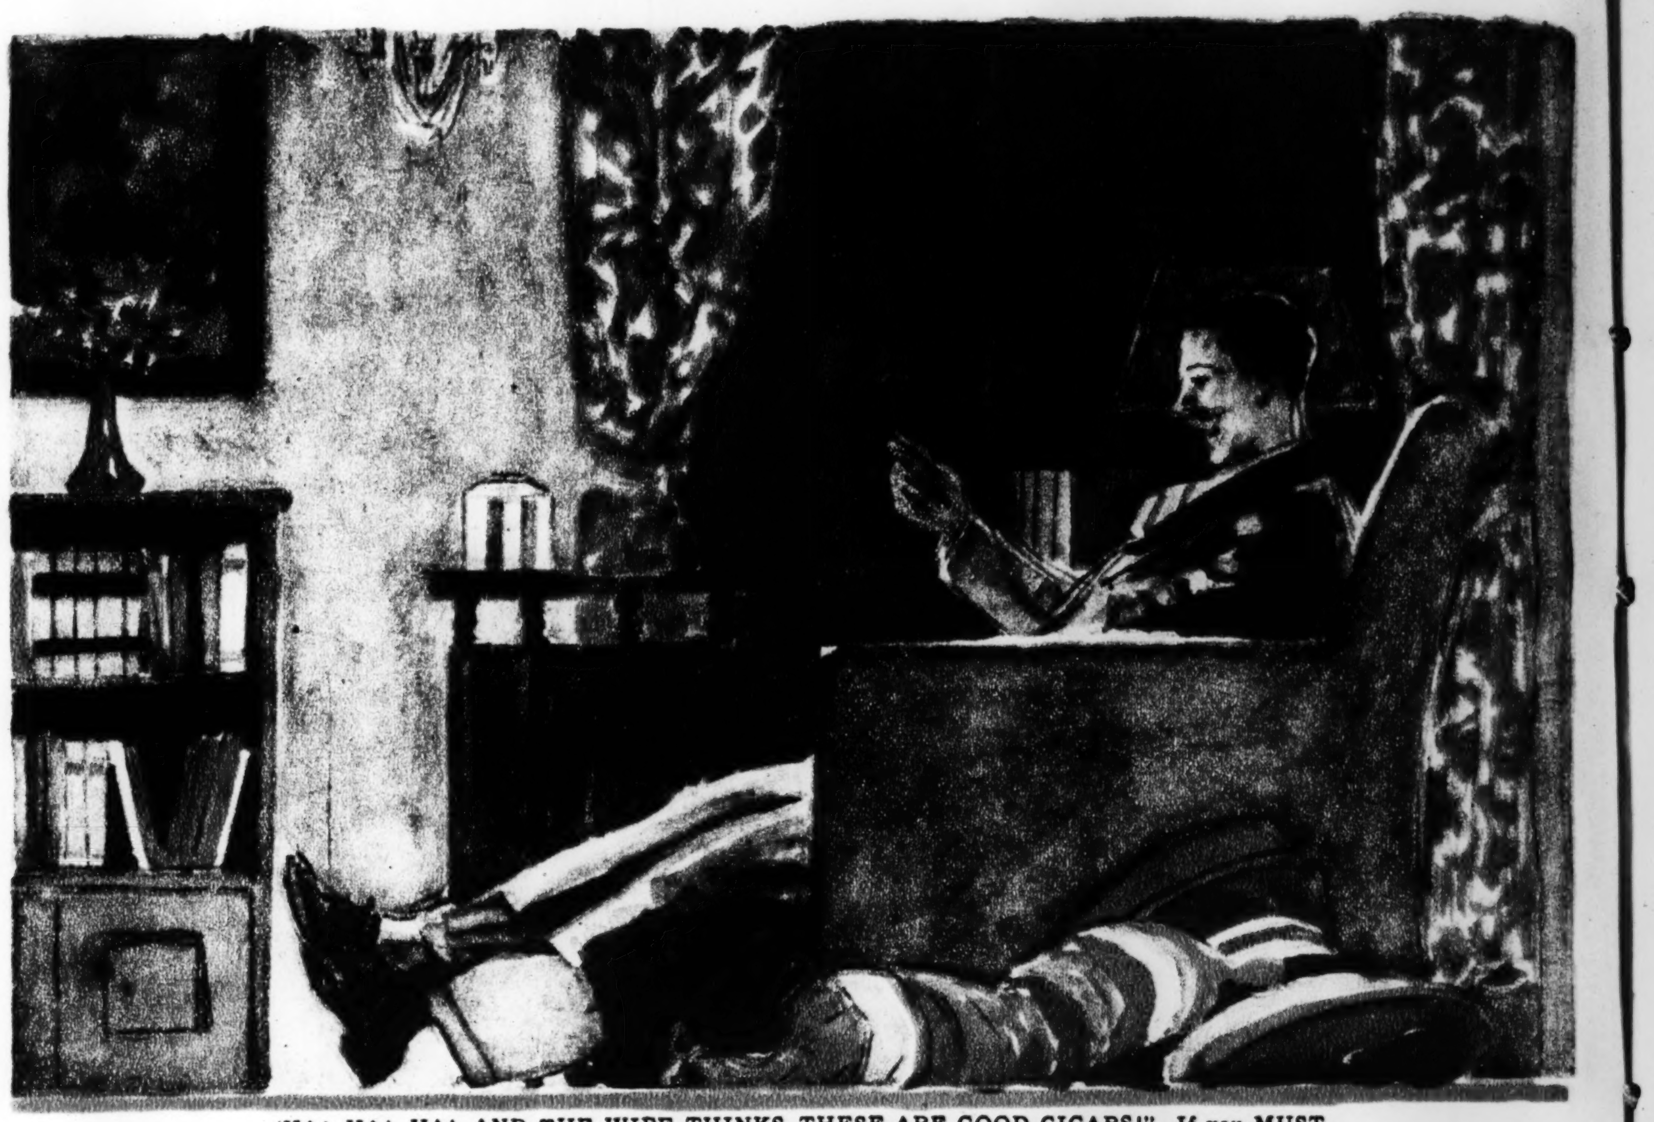
SO THIS IS LAUGH MONTH!

By W. A. BYRNES
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

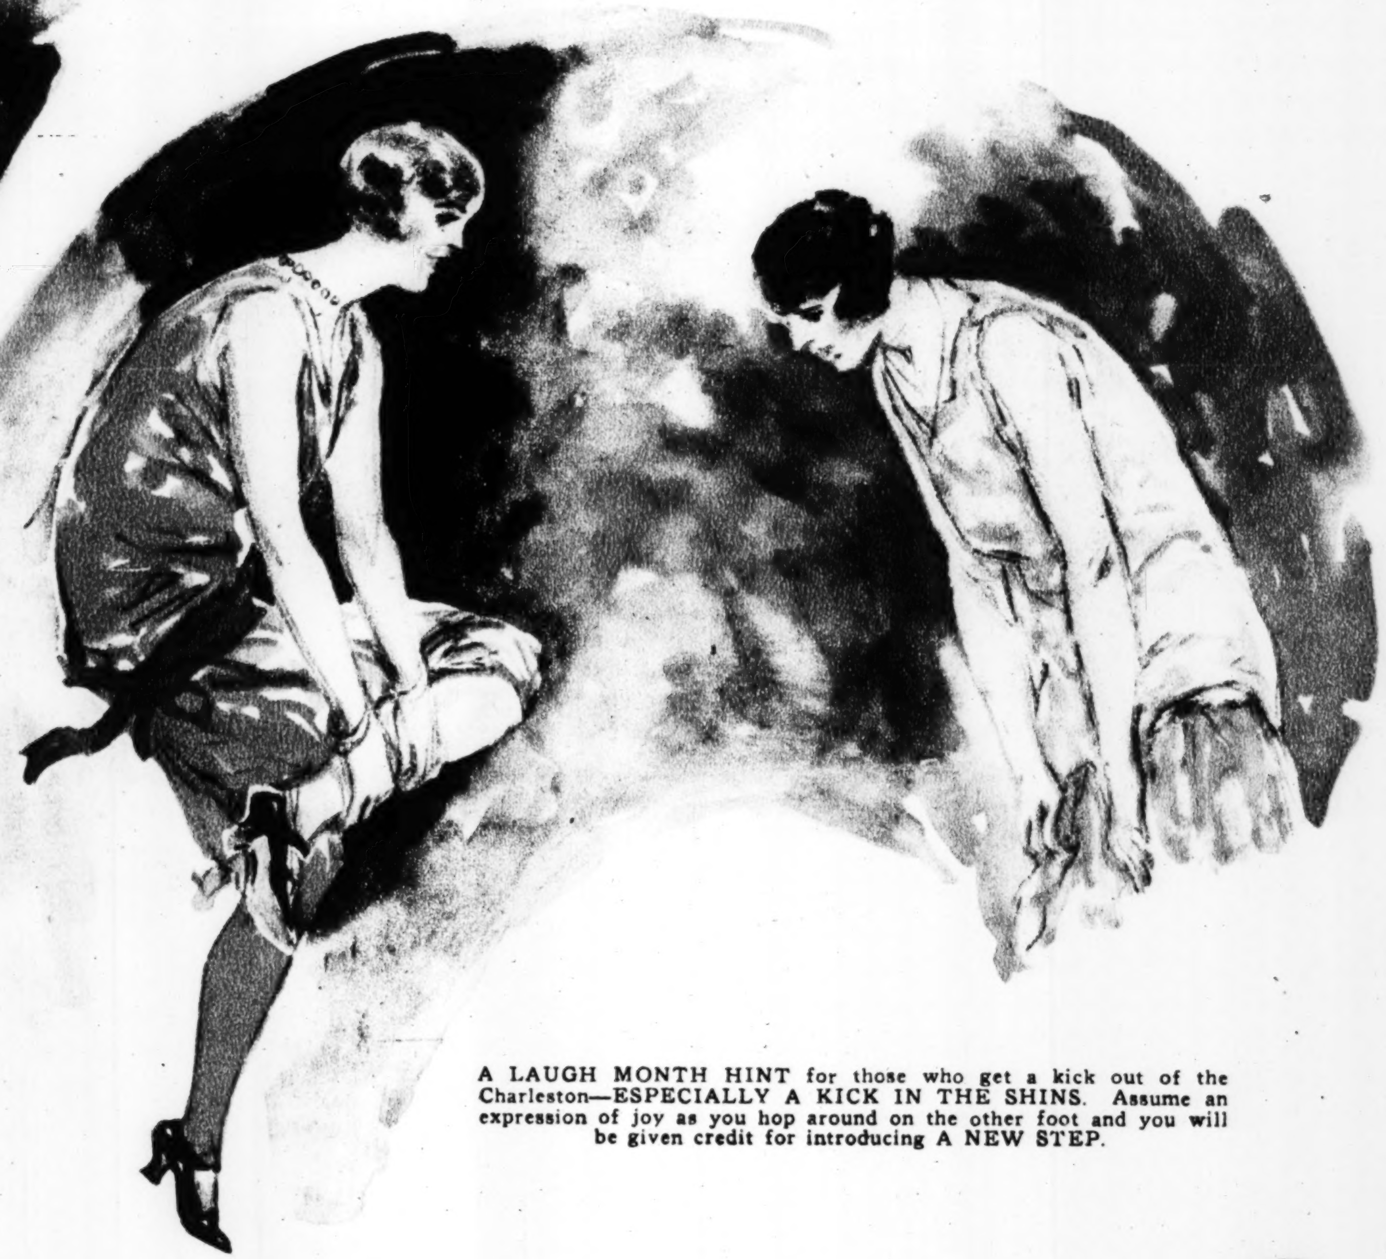
Ha! Ha! Ha! Say We and Point Out a Few REAL Laughs



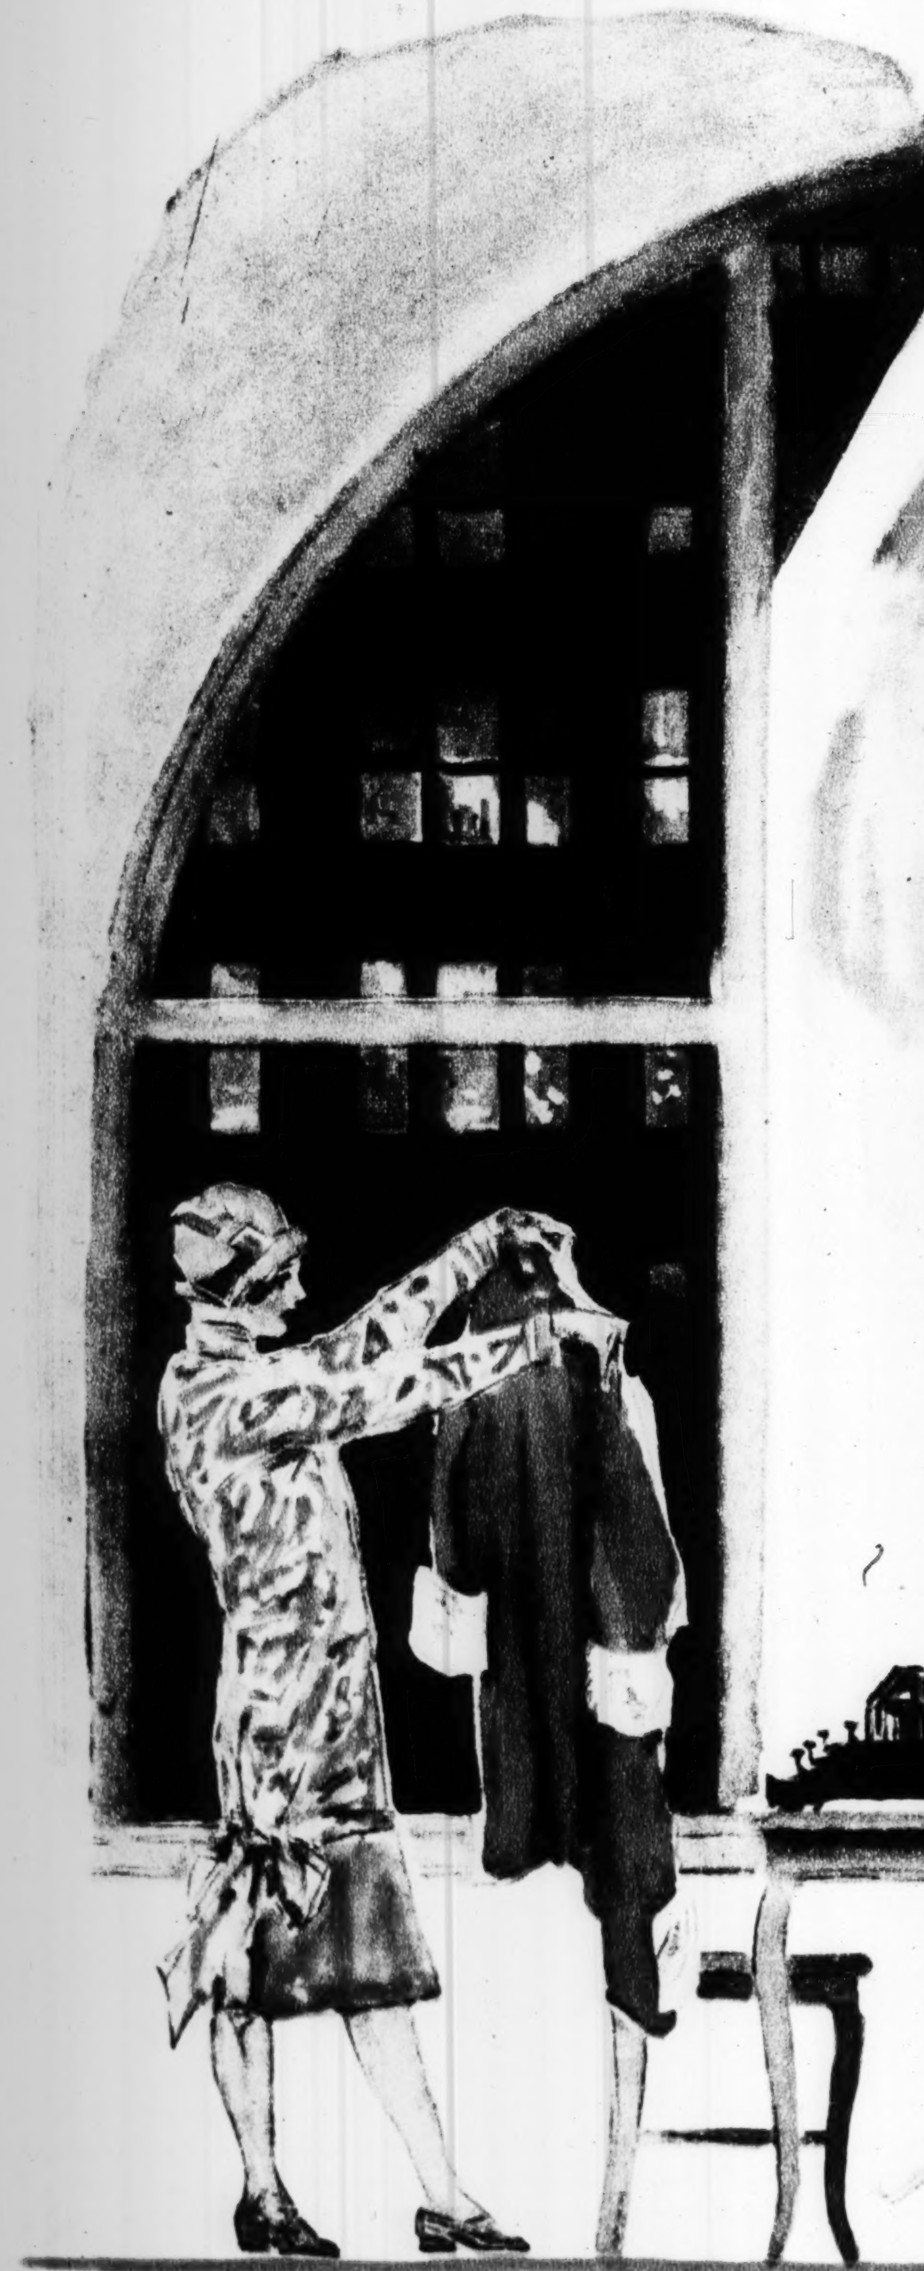
ISN'T THIS SIDE-SPLITTING? If you have a keen sense of humor you'll LOVE this—a low coal pile; high prices; and the bitterest part of Winter coming.



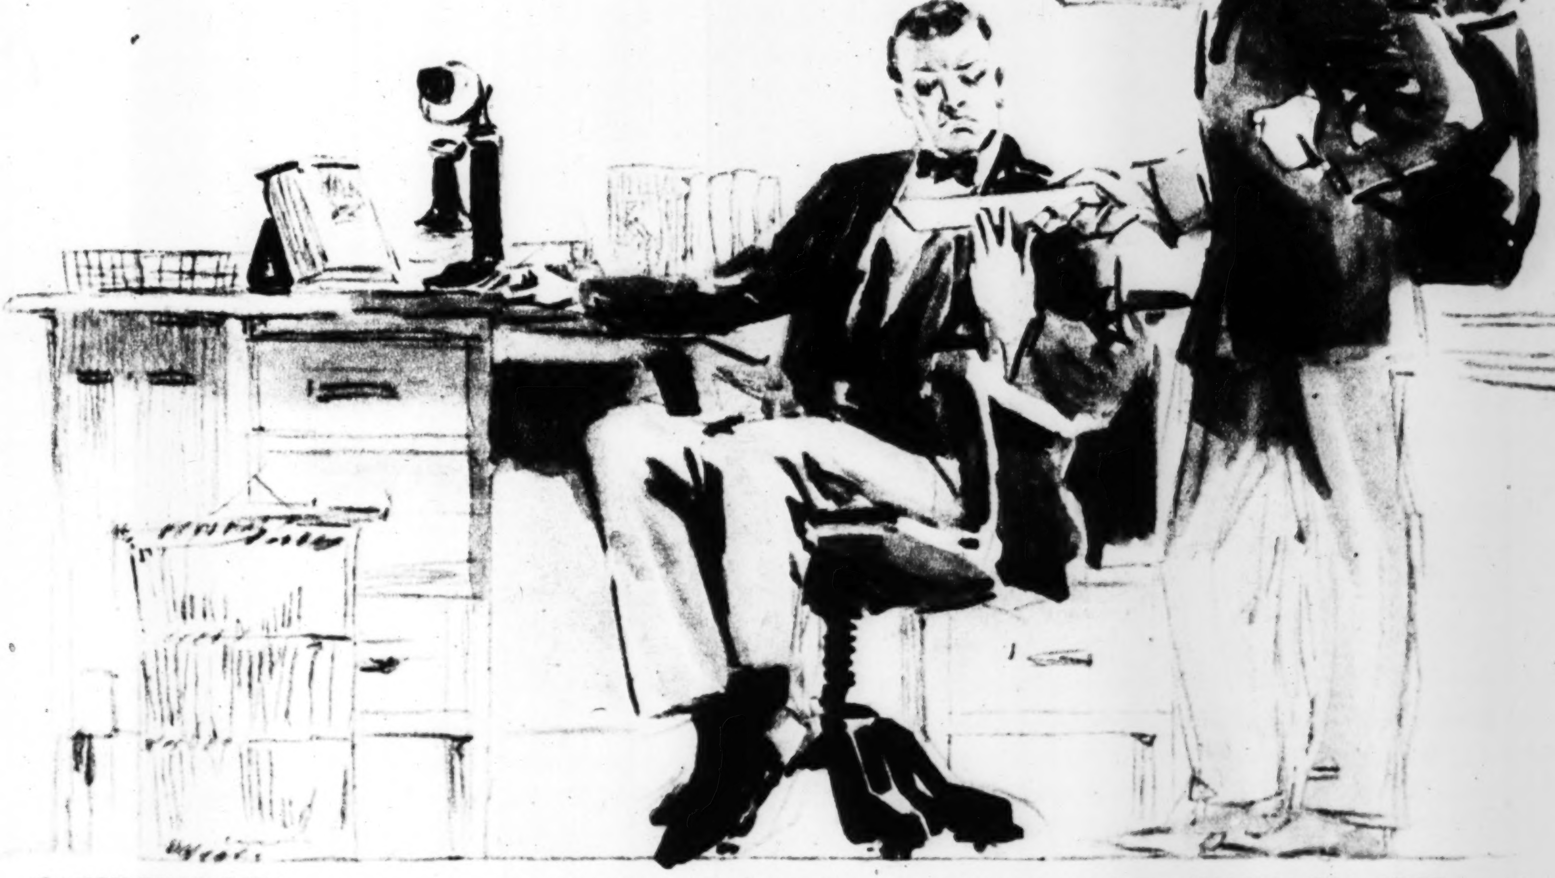
'HA! HA! HA! AND THE WIFE THINKS THESE ARE GOOD CIGARS!" If you MUST smoke your Christmas-present cigars, ENJOY the situation! Think of the HUMOR in it!



A LAUGH MONTH HINT for those who get a kick out of the Charleston—ESPECIALLY A KICK IN THE SHINS. Assume an expression of joy as you hop around on the other foot and you will be given credit for introducing A NEW STEP.



IF YOU FIND THAT THE SMOKE BLANKET has left its sooty marks on your new coat some noon downtown, allow not your countenance to be overcast with gloom, but try to LAUGH as loud as the laundry man will. (YES, TRY AND DO IT!)



"LAUGH THAT OFF," says the merry postman this month. (He is handing you your income tax form. HA! HA! HA! ISN'T THAT A WOW?)

the truth about coffee secrets every woman should know!

In these days of advertising cleverness it is easy to apply the finest adjectives to almost any coffee. Too easy. "Finest quality", "purest blend", "enticing taste", "richest aroma", "delicious flavor", "always fresh", "most economical" are phrases that have lost their meaning. All coffee isn't Best.

A good way, of course, would be to try them all—in your own kitchen—and write your own verdict of Yes or No.

But there are coffee secrets, known and guarded by those in the coffee business. Throughout this mad rush for super-adjectives these secrets have been, more or less, withheld from the public. We propose to tell them to you, for they are secrets about coffee that every woman should know.

So every Sunday in this paper, on this page, in a space like this, we will give you these coffee secrets—The Truth About Coffee, —Secrets Every Woman Should Know. As you read them, we'll be glad to have you write us and tell us how helpful you find these secrets.

Don't Let a Double Chin Mar Your Success

Astonishing results of Dr. Folts' Soap to take off double chins, reduce hips, arms, legs, busts—proclaimed by many of New York's most beautiful actresses — La Sylphe, internationally known dancer, and Madame La Chapelle, Premier danseuse, state that they would not be without Dr. Folts' Soap.

Hundreds of fat people, now slender, are ready today to testify about the merits of Dr. Folts' Soap, as the safest, easiest and quickest way to take off fat from parts where it shows without affecting other parts. Dr. Folts' Soap is the latest and most up-to-date way to regain slenderness without the use of dangerous drugs, exercises, diets, etc. BUT, BE SURE you get the original reducing soap, called Dr. Folts' Soap, and save yourself from disappointment. This soap, when used as per directions, is absorbed by the tissues, and melts away the excess fat almost under your very eyes. It is also incomparable to improve the skin and rid it of ugly pimples or eruptions, because it has a basis of antiseptic ingredients invaluable to beautify the appearance of the skin. WILL NOT LEAVE YOU FLABBY OR WRINKLED AFTER THE REDUCING HAS TAKEN PLACE. One woman wrote that one cake of soap rid her of a double chin of years' standing. Another states that with three cakes she reduced 15 inches in the hips. Another, again, used it on her legs with remarkable results. In most cases it takes two to three cakes to obtain satisfactory results. Dr. Folts' Reducing Soap always works wonders, but do not accept a cheaper imitation. Price 50 cents a cake, three for $1.20. Full directions how to use Dr. Folts' Soap come with each cake of soap. If your druggist does not carry Dr. Folts' Soap in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 B'way N.Y.C.

On sale at any of Wolff-Wilson's, Enderle, Penn Drug, Judge & Dolph, Kirkaven Bros., Johnson Bros. or Speckart Bros. drug stores.

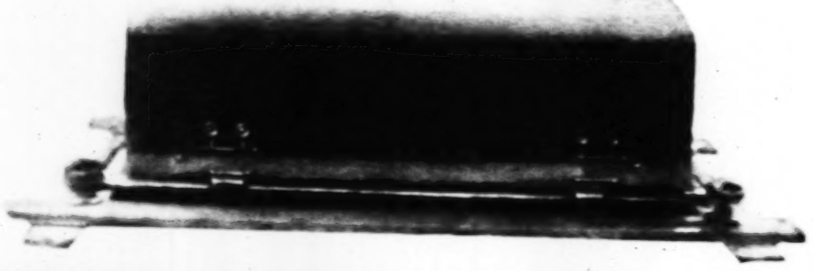
THE GARDNER Air-Sealed Grave Vault Is Built for Endurance

It is made of rust-resisting, copper-bearing steel. All seams are electrically welded and chemically rustproofed. The application of a simple, natural law in sealing gives absolute protection against water, air, vermin and vandals, and cuts production cost until it is within the reach of everybody. Ask your Funeral Director about it.



"FLY!" he says to pigeons

—REM said it to his cough

Mr. William P. Uher lives at 1858 Washburne Ave., Chicago. During the war he was in France with a loft of Signal Corps homing pigeons.

He can tell you countless stories of these winged messengers,--for it is his hobby to train pigeons to fly. The honors his birds have won would fill a trunk.

Last winter, though, he learned how to make a cough go "flying," too! Here's how he tells it:

> "I got a cough last winter that stuck to me for several weeks," says Mr. Uher. "I used what home remedies I happened to have on hand but my cough didn't get any better.
> "Down where I work a friend of mine had been using Rem for a cough and he recommended it very highly to me. So I got a bottle at the Wolf Pharmacy on Roosevelt Road & Lincoln St. Glad to say it relieved my cough right away."

Grateful users who have passed the good word along are largely responsible for REM'S widespread popularity.

A special ingredient in REM—effective, harmless—is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the sore, inflamed membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. You can have your money back if it doesn't help you. You're the Judge and Jury.
